Darmstadt, about 15 miles south of Frankfort and about 28 miles north of Mannheim-Ludwigshafen, also is an important manufacturing centre, being the site of large iron foundries

Aachen (Aix La Chapelle), 44 miles southwest of Cologne, boasts many important chemical works.

The Vichy radio in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said American planes attacked Paris last night, starting a fire in Magasin Du Midi, a big store. One was reported shot down.

There was no official indication of any American operation near Paris since the bomber raids supported by R.C.A.F. fighters on the Beauvais-Tille airfield, 45 miles north of the capital, late yesterday.

Oxygen Helps Polio

Invasion Morning, Long To Be Remembered

As the mist lifted from the beaches on the southern tip of Italy on the morning of September 3, this scene was unfolded. Landing craft is shown disgorging equipment of the British army as four years to the day after the outbreak of the war, the Allies struck back in force on the continent of Europe.

Jolliffe Wants Action From Col. Drew

TORONTO, Sept. 24 — (CP) — E. B. Jolliffe, Leader of the C.C.F. Opposition in the Ontario Legislature, yesterday called on Premier Drew to call a special session of the Legislature this fall in view of the "urgent need for changes in certain provincial legislation and for new measures."

Mr Jolliffe's request was made in a letter to Col. Drew in which he said that the request was approved at a caucus of the 34 C.C.F. members-elect of the Legislature this week.

During the provincial election campaign, said the letter which Mr. Jolliffe released to the press the C.C.F. emphasized the need for new legislation and the need now is more urgent than before.

Normally the Legislature would not meet until next February, said the letter, but "in these swiftly-changing times the public would not wish the business of the province to be transacted in such traditional and leisurely fashion.

"It is clear not all the proposals contained in your 22-point platform of last July could be immediately implemented, if ever, but it is equally clear many of them need not wait until next year. If they have the urgency and importance they were represented to have during the recent election campaign they deserve to be translated into legislation without a delay of six months or more."

Gable To Return Home Brings Gunnery Film

A U.S. FLYING FORTRESS BASE IN ENGLAND, Sept. 24.—(AP). — Capt. Clark Gable, who went on to-day's American raid on Nantes, France, disclosed after his plane returned that he will leave for the United States soon with a gunnery training film he has been directing.

He said he hoped to see active service in some other theatre before the war is over, and added:

"But you know, I just do whatever the army tells me to."

In to-day's raid the former movie star participated as a combination camera man and gunner. The ship was hit by anti-aircraft fire, but none of the crew was wounded.

"I didn't hit a damn thing," Gable said.

The raid was Gable's fifth and earned for him the air medal.

Holstein Sale Sets New Record

One of the greatest cattle dispersal sales on record took place on Sept. 15 and 16 near Baltimore, when the 209 members of the internationally famous "Dunloggin' herd of purebred Holsteins sold for $384,050. The average of $1,837.56 is the largest ever made at a dispersal sale in the United States and in North America is second only to the average of $1,925.73 made at the Mount Victoria sale at Hudson Heights, Que., in June, 1942. Top price was $13,000, paid by Butterfly Farm, Mexico, N.Y., for a half-interest in Montvic Lochinvar, who was sold at the Mount Victoria sale for $4,400 to Dunloggin and Mrs. W. S. Kellogg, Derby, Conn., who still retains her interest.

A point of particular interest to Canadians is the fact that Lochinvar is the sire of Montvic Renown, who brought the Canadian record price of $14,100 at the Traliynd dispersal sale held at Brantford last December.

Soviets 10 Miles

ing to both north and south. A Moscow communique indicated the Russians were developing a pincer movement aimed at Cheraski, 90 miles to the southeast, and at the junction of the Pripet and Dnieper rivers, 55 miles to the north.

Capture of Poltava yesterday gave the Russians control of a 300-mile stretch of territory bordering the middle Dnieper between Dnepropetrovsk and Chernigov, and opened the way for a direct advance on Cherkasi and Kremenchug, both important enemy bases on the Dnieper. A plunge across the river at this point would imperil huge Axis forces inside the bend and on the east side of the river, increase the threat to Kiev and place Russian forces in a position to isolate German positions in the Crimea.

The Soviet communique also announced the capture of Unecha, rail junction 73 miles southwest of Bryansk in the upper central sector of the 750-mile active front. Unecha is on the road to White Russia and Gomel, Nazi stronghold in that enemy-held province.

5,300 Nazis Killed

More than 5,300 Germans were killed in the day's fighting, the Moscow war bulletin stated, and 863 more liberated towns and villages were added to the Russian bag. Of the enemy dead, 1,000 were reported slain on the approaches to Kiev, 1,500 in the battle for Unecha, while another 2,000 fell in battles around Smolensk.

Operations in the Smolensk area resulted in the storming of Buzanove, nine mile to the northeast, and Pochinok, 19 miles to the southeast. Seizure of Pochinok cut the rialway to Roslavl, where the Berlin radio said Soviet and German troops were fighting in the streets.

In a drive aimed at Vitebsk, strategic rail junction northwest of Smolensk, Moscow said the Red Army troops had thrown back 20 counter-attacks and forced passage of the Kasplya River, which empties into the Dvina River 25 miles above Vitsbek. A Russian victory here would make the German positions around Minsk further to the west, highly vulnerable.

The Moscow radio yesterday said Russian troops already were fighting within the borders of White Russia, apparently in the Chernigov-Gomel area.

Berlin admitted mounting peril to Smolensk, as well as Kiev, Cherkasi and other strong points on the Dnieper line.

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Nazi military expert, said in a broadcast that the Soviet offensive was the "most gigantic of the entire eastern campaign."

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rose, 423 Driscoll Terrace, were notified today that their son, Cpl. Edward Rose, is ill in a hospital in Sicily. Cpl. Rose enlisted with the Hastings Prince Edward Regiment in 1940, and has been overseas since 1941. He and a brother Vern fought with Canadians in Sicily to take one of the main Italian airports. A brother Donald is overseas and another, Alfred, is at Cornwall. Before enlisting Cpl. Rose worked at the Bell Telephone.

Social Worker Charged With Conspiracy

DETROIT, Sept. 24 —(AP)—Mrs. Theresa Behrens, 44-year-old social worker, was held for trial on a charge of conspiracy under the United States Espionage Act and fainted a few moments later as she was being led from United States District Judge Edwad J. Moinet's court today.

She recovered shortly afterward in the United States marshal's office.

Mrs. Behrens, one of a group of men and women indicted on charges of attempting to obtain information for the German government, stood mute on the conspiracy charge and a plea of not guilty was entered for her. She was ordered held in $25,000 bond.

Since her arrest here Aug. 24 Mrs. Behrens has refused solid food, but has taken liquids. Physicians said she had lost but three pounds since she was transferred to a hospital nearly four weeks ago.

Troops On Corsica Earn 10,000 Francs

ALGIERS, Sept. 24 — (AP). — French troops who landed on Corsica on September 14 to assist island patriots in ousting German occupation forces won a 10,000-franc prize as the first French unit to land on French Metropolitan soil, Gen. Henri Giraud announced yesterday. The announcement said that a person who preferred to remain anonymous had donated the sum last spring.

Corsica, a French department, is considered a part of the Motherland.

Elinor Glyn Novelist Dies Age 79

LONDON, Sept. 24 — (AP). — Elinor Glyn, who put sex appeal into parlor conversation under the name of "it," died yesterday, but the legend of her life, which was as exciting as the plots of her novels, is still alive after half a century.

Mrs. Glyn would have been 79 on October 17. She had been in a nursing home three weeks. For the last two days she had been unconscious.

In the midst of a war which has substituted utility for glamor in everything, London looked nostalgically back to the Glyn legend for a moment.

Elinor Glyn emerged from the overstuffed Victorian era into the gay setting of Edwardian England, freshly red-haired and green-eyed, smartly gowned, clever and witty. She knew everyone.

In 1892 she married wealthy Clayton Glyn, and on their honeymoon in Brighton he rented the public baths at the Metropole for two days in order, he said, that he might appreciate the beauty of the mermaid he had married.

They settled in a 300-year-old farmhouse in Essex, near Eastion Lodge, home of Mrs. Glyn's friend Frances, Lady Warwick, where the aristocracy of England gathered in the 90's.

In 1900 she wrote her first novel "The Visits of Elizabeth." Seven years later she published "Three Weeks," which was publicly denounced as immoral, but which heralded the advent of jazz 10 years before its time. Canada refused to allow it to be brought into the country for some time.

"She wrote frankly of love when the world was squeamish," said the Evening News. She produced 31 books and 9 movies.

Mrs. Glyn's parents Douglas and Elinor (Saunders) Sutherland of Toronto were living on the island of Jersey when she was born.

Shortly after the family went to Guelph where they lived with Col. Saunders, Elinor's grandfather, at his home "Summerhill." Elinor and her older sister had a happy time there riding the family horse, climbing trees and fences and enjoying themselves as only children who love the country can.

On her mother's second marriage to David Kennedy in 1871 the family moved to Woolwich street, opposite the old Guelph Court House. The grounds run down to the River Speed and the children watched the building of a church nearby. In 1869 the two little girls took part at the wedding of their aunt, Maria Saunders and James Webster, Jr., son of the founder of Fergus.

Another of Elinor's aunts, Julia Saunders, lived in Toronto and an uncle, Thomas Saunders, was police magistrate of Guelph for many years. Several cousins live in Toronto. Her mother and stepfather took Elinor and her sister to England in 1874, where Kennedy died. Elinor visited Guelph many times afterwards. St. George's Church, where she was a bridesmaid, has since disappeared, a new St. George's rising within a stone's throw of the old Saunders' home.

In recent years, her legs still trim, her hair still startlingly red and her face chalk white in the fashion of the day, she occupied a vast apartment in London, decorated in the style of the Edwardian era, which was her heyday.

Carpets were thick and soft, and Mrs. Glyn greeted guests from a leopard-skin divan—sharp contrast to the austere nursing home bed where she received her last visitors.

No matter what "it" meant to the public, Mrs. Glyn always said "when I wrote about it the word meant personal magnetism; charm."

However, the Evening News said that, although she is supposed to have invented "It," a character in Kipling's "Mistress Barthhurst" already had said, "It isn't beauty, so to speak, nor good talk, necessarily. It's just It."

Seaborne of Campbellford is now officially listed as a prisoner of war in Germany. He went overseas in November, 1942, following graduation from Fingal. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Seaborne, reside in Campbellford.

HOW TO HELP MR. GOLD SEAL MAKE GOOD

You can get added wear out of your Congoleum floors with very little effort. Brush and mop them regularly and renew the brightness of their surface with an occasional waxing. Make sure too, that the floor underneath is smooth and free from crevices or knobs. If it's a rug, move it every few months to "spread" the traffic. Yes, a little care will pay big dividends.

Fleet Street In Wartime Lost None Of Its Allure

By JAMES A. ROY

This is the second in a series of articles written for The Examiner by Professor James A. Roy of Queen's University, Kingston, on wartime conditions in Great Britain.

I have changed my mind about London having lost its allure. Certainly Fleet Street has lost nothing of it. It is still the centre of the news of the world, an amazing beehive of intelligence and information. A lot of things strike one about Fleet Street things that struck one years ago but which come home to one with a new force and realization. One fact is the amazing number of Scotsmen one meets there. Many of them like James Bone, the brother of Muirhead Bone, are elderly men, but they are amazingly young in spirit and keen in mind. Men of action, men of sound judgment, men of wide culture, men who have been in so many places, who have met so many people, and seen so many things. It is the feeling of youth in Fleet Street that appeals: Fleet Street with its story of triumphs and despairs of achievements and failures, with its constant stream of young men and women making for it, eager to put their fortune to the test and to win or lose in the great gamble of life.

James Bone, London editor of the Manchester Guardian, is one of the youngest of the elderly men in Fleet Street. Everybody knows him and everybody likes him. He has become a sort of institution in Fleet Street. A couple of years ago he was torpedoed in the Atlantic and spent hours in an open boat and in a lumbering, crowded, defenceless freighter. One of his companions on that adventure was the Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions. Of him the man of the Manchester Guardian spoke in the very highest terms. "Man, he was grand in that boat and on the freighter, your Mr. Howe." Then the Germans blitzed the Temple where Mr. Bone had his chambers and the work of years went up in smoke. A magnificent library, a genuine Rubens, all sorts of things. Nothing left, not even Thackeray's famous "Cane-bottomed Chair," in which I used often to sit and sip wonderful pre-war sherry. Mr. Bone lives in a cottage in the country now and has starttd collecting again. He is building up a fine new library. And what Mr. Bone has done, the Templars will in time start doing. So will London. So will England.

There was a delightful little gathering in Fleet Street after office hours. Some interesting people were there, and the talk was racy and good. Ivor Brown, the editor of The Observer made his contribution, and it was an entertaining one. There was talk about Barrie and Wells, about Shaw and Bridie, about Congreve's "Love for Love," which is now playing in The Haymarket, about the Scots accent, Canada's contribution to the war. Aneurin Bevan was there, so was Harold Nicholson. A mixed bag. One very interesting man I met was Mr. Maloney, co-director of Reuters. It was Mr. Maloney who got the news of Rathenau's assassination through to England first. We found we had both been in Berlin at the time and apparently only a few yards away from each other when the murder took place. The famous film dealing with Reuters had pleased the directors, but they had suggested that the scene where Reuter addresses the British House of Commons should be emended, as such an episode was a sheer impossibility. Nor could Disraeli have addressed Reuter in the gallery as the American version of the film represented his as doing. The emendation was made in order to avoid criticism from the British public which is a stickler for accuracy where its Parliament is concerned. The British version of the film is more accurate than the American, but has a far less effective ending.

Inevitably the talk drifted to the war and Britain's effort. Matters such as the dispersal of industry in a million garages and workshops as a consequence of the raids on Coventry and Portsmouth and England's secret underground factories, are, and can only be referred to in the most general terms, but no doubt was left in my mind as to the general spirit of everybody I have met. Britain has its tail up and is full of confidence, not only as to the outcome of the war, but about her ability to solve many of the problems of the future. Men and women have learned to do the most complex work in an amazingly short time; many have shown unsuspected ability and acquired great skill in wartime industry. This skill, the British are confident, will not be lost in time of peace and the Manchester cotton workers, for example, will go back to their peacetime jobs, not with skill impaired, but with skill enhanced.

Day's Limit Sold In Two Hours

The city's slab wood business amounted this morning to seventy-six orders, each for a cord of hemlock, and at that peak the list was closed until Monday to permit the delivery trucks and the office accounting to catch up witih the public's demand.

Later applications simply had to be transferred until Monday, and householders were requested to come back early at the beginning of next week. In their need for light fuel people were lined up at the Simcoe-Queen street office this morning when business was resumed after a day's suspension, and in less than two hours the day's limit of orders was completed.

Peterboro Nurse Wins Bursary

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.— (CP). — Miss Maude H. Hall, Acting Chief Superintendent of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, last night announced 12 nurses have been awarded V.O.N. Scholarships for post-graduate study in public health nursing at various Canadian universities. They include Vera Clark, Peterborough. daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Clark, R.R. 4, Campbellford, who graduated from Nicholls Hospital in 1941 and has since been attached, temporarily, to the V.O.N. staff at Hamilton.

These scholarships, or rather bursaries, are awarded by the Victorian Order of Nurses, to promising nurses attached temporarily to the Order, if they are willing to take the public health nursing course at a university, as new nurses are not taken on permanently unless they have taken the course.

Wonder Drug Saves Sight Of Airman

MONTREAL, Sept. 24 — (CP.— The new wonder drug, penicillin, has saved the sight of an airman's eye at the nearby Lachine Manning Depot of the Royal Canadian Air Force, it was revealed here yesterday.

It was the first time the drug had been used at the station. The unidentified airman reported an eye infection and the drug was flown from the Banting Institute in Toronto.

101 Holsteins Shown At Lakefield Fair

Holstein breeders of the country displayed 101 of their blue-blood, pedigreed cattle in the 'black and white day' feature of Lakefield fair.

The total number of entries was 144 and aggregate prize money $468. Fred Hubbs of Bloomfield was judge.

Some of the good Holstein herds were missing from this show, but on the whole the response of the breeders was quite encouraging. The female classes were all well filled, especially in the junior divisions. Fifteen senior heifer calves and 13 junior heifer calves with nine each in the senior and junior yearling classes was an indication of the quantity of young stock that must be available in this county.

Prizes were ungraded, signifying that in any class the first prize was the same as the fourth or fifth or even the thirteenth.

The awards were as follows:

Bull, 3 years and up—Norman W. McConkey with "Supreme Grand Slam."

Bull, senior yearling — 1 and 2, Norman McConkey; 3, Stewart Nelson.

Bull, senior calf—1, Coughlin Brothers; 2, J. T. Tully; 3, N. W. McConkey.

OMEMEE, Sept. 25 — (ENS).— An Omemee boy, FO James R. J. Johnson,, serving with the R.C.A.F. overseas, has done what all fliers hope to do, by shooting down a German Focke-Wulf 190 over France in two bursts.

Before enlisting, FO. Johnson was active in Young People's work with the Anglican A.Y.P.A. and was an enthusiastic hockey player with the local team. He is an only son.

Fluid Milk Subsidy Increased By 30 Cents

The Federal subsidy on fluid milk is being increased from 25 cents a hundred pounds to 55 cents as recently announced from Ottawa.

W. G. Ovens of Campbell's Dairy and J. E. Weir of Silverwood's said that the increase applied to the dairy producers in this area.

Milk supply in the district has been steadily maintained throughout the season, and is continuing at present in encouraging volume. However, the prospect of reduced feed grain stocks for the winter is casting some doubt over the prospect of the flow of milk until spring.

More Donations Sent From Movie Star Club

Continuing the initiative which was inspired through a cheque he received from Bette Davis, film star of Hollywood fame, for the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund, Bob Everitt has turned in further donations as coming from the Bette Davis Club to give assistance to the sufferers from air raids over the British Isles through the fund.

From among this group there are four belonging to the Kiwanis Club at Akron, Ohio, who were visiting in the city, in the persons of George E. McKenna, Dr. R. V. Luce, Dr. W. H. Brown and J. W. Mell, who were pleased to follow the lead given by the film star in helping the fund, and it was intimated they might be heard from at a later date after returning to their homes and passing the news on to others.

Then from among this same list, two come from the large metropolis of the Province, a rare enough occurrence to warrant mention, one of which is given under the name of 'Navy," Toronto, in tribute to a son who is serving in this branch of the active services, and another gives "In loving memory of mother" who passed away in August, 1942, this because her birthday occurs this week, a lovely thought from a son, to do good for others in her name at this time.

The total that has now come from the Bette Davis Club is getting close to the $60.00 mark, and it is hoped to eventually raise this up to the $200.00 total.

Stamp Out Hitler Clubs

This one activity which is also headed by Bob Everitt is getting within reach of the $200-mark in money raised for the fund, the total actually standing at $190.50 with the $6 recorded to its credit today.

This week's winners include B. Fee, who was fortunate enough to win two weeks in succession in the Canada Packers Club, John Troke, past president, in the Kiwanis Club, Clayton Selkirk in the Selkirk in he Selkirk Men's Shop Club, Mrs. Betty Burgess in the Quaker Oats, which incidentally plans under the leadership of Herb Ralph to hold a weekly draw, and Maurice Pringle in the Empress Hotel.

Through D. D. Brown, another collection from the penny boxes in Taylor's Store, Gall's Store, and the Bank of Toronto at Keene has been made, which between them added another $3.06 to the day's receipts.

Saturday Activities

Five school girls attendant at Sacred Heart School who include Doreen Gilmour, Eileen Shaughnssy, Mary Cornell, Ann Collins and Geraldine Bloom are holding a Bazaar on the opposite corner from Dinty's Inn, close by the Training Centre, George street south and Lansdowne this Saturday morning to give aid to the fund.

At the regular market stall, Girl Guides Zella Chapman and Katherine Clifton will be in charge of operations which will include the sale of produce and possibly some perrenial garden plants, and the sale of tickets for a draw on a prize donated by Warne's Jewellery Store.

This Friday evening a Bingo game is being conducted under the sponsorship of the Range Pals in the Rifle Range School in aid of the fund.

Only 500 Names Of Soldiers Are Turned In

It is announced by the committee in charge of the task of preparing the list of Peterborough men and women serving in the Army outside of Canada that so far fewer than 500 names have been received, which is about one-third of the number expected.

Last year's lists, it is explained, are of little value because so many addresses have been changed since then and unless the relatives of the men and women from here who are serving with the Canadian army overseas send in the necessary information as soon as possible, many Peterborough citizens overseas will be disappointed at Christmas time.

Information may be telephoned to 7500, 5255 or 7246 and friends of Peterborough men and women overseas are asked to register the names at once in order that none of them will be overlooked when the Christmas parcels are mailed.

17 Convicted Of Trespassing

Seventeen Peterborough citizens, most of them employed in war plants entered written pleas of guilty in police court this morning to charges of having trespassed on the tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railway and each of them was fined $2 and $1 costs for taking a short cut.

The seventeen were William Scott, Fred Storey, Henry Wickenden, Dora Robinson, Mary Whitehead, Delbert Northey, Charles Conners, Elizabeth Allen, Douglas Howard, Oscar White, Walter Lane, John Thompson, Russell Little, Angus Macdonald, Keith Atchison, Charles Dennie and Verna Romanoff.

An eighteenth name was called but Sergt. Gordon T. Puffer asked that the charge be withdrawn. "There is no such person," he explained.

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., said that examination of the registration cards might prevent wrong names and addresses being given to the officers.

Holstein Show To Be At Orono

Local Holstein breeders, in common with those from other counties in this section of Ontario, are planning to exhibit their cattle at the Championship Show to be held October 9 at Orono. Prize-winners at local Black and White Days and County Fairs from the Counties of Ontario, Victoria, Durham, Northumberland, Peterborough, Prince Edward, Hastings, Lennox and Addington will compete for Regional Championships. The judge will be J. Durno Innes, Woodstock.

Four such Championship Shows, sponsored by the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada, are being held in different sections of Ontario. These are at Kemptville, September 28, Ingersoll, October 7, Oakville, October 8, and Orono, October 9. Prize-winners will be eligible for the much-coveted All-Canadian awards made by the Holstin-Friesian Journal on recommendation of a committee composed of the judges at all major Canadian fairs and exhibitions and the Championship Shows.

Counsel Protests Delay In Hearing

When it was announced that the complainant was absent this morning Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C. protested against further delay in the hearing of a charge against Ernest Graham of having stolen a tire from William Brick of Smith township.

It was stated that Brick had been called to Niagara Falls because of illness in the family.

"It is not fair that this man should be losing time off from work just because the private prosecutor does not choose to be here," Mr. Gordon declared.

The case was adjourned until Thursday of next week with the understanding that the charge must be proceeded with then or dismissed.

UNPOPULAR NEIGHBOURS

Residents on Weller street have had some highly unpopular neighbours during the summer months and their patience was somewhat strained on Thursday night when the fifth skunk of the season was caught in a trap in that vicinity and the police were called to put an end to the animal. As recently as last Sunday the mother skunk was executed. Some claim that there are nine kittens in the skunk families, and the Weller street folk are putting their faith in the fallacy of such a statement.—J. S.

Sanford T. Harris will be this year's recipient of the meritorious service diploma from the Ontario Horticultural Association at a special meeting of the local association at Murray Street Baptist Church Tuesday, September 28.

New Incinerator Doing Good Job

A meeting of the property committee this afternoon was expected to report a decided improvement in the effective working of the new incinerator.

City Engineer Parsons said the new plant was doing a good job, and the old one was not being used. He said its fire was out, and in the operation of the new incinerator workmen were getting through work comparatively early every day. They had completed their burning job one day this week at 2.30 p.m.

Mr. Parsons' coments were entirely reassuring to ratepayers who were inclined to think the new plant was in some way failing to meet incinerating requirements. Aldermen Swanston and Bradburn visited the plant yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. F. Horton Re-elected Head of W.A. Presbytery

Mrs. Fred Horton, Peterborough, president of the Peterborough Presbyterial of the Women's Association of the United church for the past five years, was re-elected on Thursday to the presidency, at the conference held in Mark Street church at which about 90 women were present.

The highlight of the day was the talk given at the afternoon session by Mrs. W. G. Bartlett, Toronto, president of the Dominion W. A. Council, whose subject was "New Wings for Church Homemakers." One of things the speaker stressed was the necessity of uniting all W.A.'s across the Dominion, for unity, she believed, would bring greater opportunities for service. Across Canada there are 5,200 W.A.'s with almost 200,000 members who last year raised $1,450,000. The Council assists many projects such as fresh air camps, and Victor Home for unmarried mothers. She said: "We seek to unify all W.A.s in a single purpose and to develop a feeling of mutual responsibility, that they may be established as one great body of church women in bringing in the kingdom of God on earth."

The speaker quoted Wendell Willkie, "All over the earth people are breaking the old bonds. There is a ferment of millions of individuals. In the post-war days this democratic ferment might well degenerate into chaos and the cause of freedom might be lost. Our chief insurance against such calamity is goodwill, the cement which binds so many people together in a common faith."

Women Help.

Women's groups had helped through the war service units in providing material aid to those in the armed forces and shared in the responsibility in war industry areas, in home hospitality and in recreation in relation to the migrant population, she said.

"To-day is the hour of great opportunities," the speaker said, "better than the hour of victory, for men are now startled out of their complacency. They see the chaos that can come upon a world that rejects God. When victory comes, men's minds will close again and they will go back to their pacity and complacency. Human nature can be changed but it takes disaster and death to do it."

Individual Change.

The church has six assets in this opportune hour," Mrs. Barlett declared. "She must change the individual; release immense forces through prayer, since prayer is co-operation with God in a spiritual plane; expound unfailingly Christ's principles; bring men into the fellowship to pray and think together, they can interpret Christ's spirit in terms of education, industry, politics and international affairs; denounce evil, no matter what interests are raised to silence her; and the church must accomplish reforms."

Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, chairman of the Peterborough Presbytery, brought greetings from that body and spoke on "Christian Women, Guarding and Building the Church," a task which he said they did loyally, faithfully and with great dignity.

After the presentation of the slate of officers, Rev. Wilkinson installed the following officers: President, Mrs. F. Horton; 1st vice-president, Mrs. E. Wand; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. C. S. Tanner, Lakefield; 3rd vice-president, Mrs G. S. Taylor, Keene; recording secretary, Mrs. C. Price, Havelock; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. Laing, Peterborough; treasurer, Mrs. P. I. Bentley, Millbrook; executive, Mrs. M. Drysdale, Mrs. Brummell, Mrs. J. C. Larmer, Mrs. John Allen, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. V Zufelt and Mrs. Kelly.

Three committees were named at the morning session to take care of any business that might arise—Courtesy committee, Mrs. Metcalfe, Mrs. Aullison; Resolutions, Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Stinson; Nominating, Mrs. Glover, Mrs. Wilkinson, Mrs. Drysdale.

Accomplish Reforms.

Two speakers addressed the morning session of the Conference, Mrs. James Dutton of the Local Council of Women, said during her remarks, "Women to-day are asking wider recognition of their rights and their ability in the many fields in which they have proved themselves in peace and war."

Some reforms accomplished, for which the Council agitated, were appointment of women inspectors for stores and factories, police matrons, manual and domestic training in schools, dental and medical inspection in schools. In Peterborough there are 64 societies represented, 12 having been added this year.

The Temperance cause was upheld by a member of the W.C.T.U., Mrs. M. Beavis, who stated: "We are living in a grave world crisis and must not side-step the liquor question. Legislation restricting the liquor traffic at this time would receive universal approval even among drink addicts."

World Moves.

During the luncheon hour Mrs. J. K. Hughes, who recently attended the convention of the Canadian Institute on Public Affairs, held at Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching, gave some interesting highlights, touching on world development programs and problems of relief and rehabilitation of the armed forces.

Entertainment was provided in a vocal duet, 'Beautiful Valley of Peace,' by Mrs. W. Hepburn and Mrs. Tedford, of Bridgenorth, and a solo, 'Life's Lullaby' by Mrs. J. E. Glover of Hastings.

An invitation from St. James' church, Peterborough, to hold the 1944 conference there during the early part of May, was accepted.

Nominating committee for next year is Mrs. J. S. Londerville, Mrs. Herb Gervin, Mrs. A. E. Metcalfe and Mrs. Andrew Rennie.

Uphold Temperance.

The resolution committee handed in four resolutions which were heartily endorsed by Conference: 1, Resolved that we the members of this Conference make a definite stand against intemperance and urge more hearty support of the Temperance Federation; 2, Resolved, that Women's Associations write their tobacco stores, reminding them of the law against selling tobacco and cigarettes to any person under 18 years of age; 3, Resolved, that increased influence be used in preserving the sanctity of the Sabbath Day, daring to object to anything that will interfere with it being a holy day, and that we do all we can to increase the influence of the church and Sunday school.

Choir Honours Bride-elect

The choir of George Street United church held its first social evening of the season Thursday evening when, after a short practice session, the social committee took charge and the 60 members indulged in an hour of lively games. A happy event of the evening was the presentation of gifts to the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stenton, and to a bride-to-be, Miss Jean Sarginson, whose wedding takes place early in October.

Mr. Henry Batten, president, expressed the hopes and wishes of the choir for their future happiness in an appropriate speech, which was heartily echoed by the pastor, Rev. H. L. Roberts, Dr. C. M. Fulford added a few words on behalf of the church board. The choir welcomed back for a brief visit Petty Officer Bill Dorrington, E.R.A., R.C.N.V.R., a former president of the choir, who is home on furlough.

An excellent lunch was served by a social committee headed by Miss Lenore Skitch, who received a hearty vote of thanks for her energetic handling of the entertainment features of the evening.

Several new members of the choir were welcomed during the evening by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Renaud, choir-master and organist of the church. Rev. Mr. Roberts spoke of his continued delight in the musical standards of the choir.

Army Auxiliary Plans Christmas Boxes

The first fall meeting of the Active Army Auxiliary was held Thursday evening at the Y.W.C.A. with Mrs. J. A. Dewart, president, in the chair. Mrs. Dewart opened the meeting with prayer and welcomed the five representatives from the local I.OD.E. chapters who are to co-operate with the Auxiliary in the sending of Christmas boxes to Peterborough men overseas with the Army.

The main business of the meeting was the discussion of plans for the Christmas boxes. Mrs. R. S. Allan, convener of the names committee announced that up to that night 305 names had been received and asked the members to make special efforts to see that no Peterborough soldier's name was left off the list.

Mrs. A. Turner, regent of the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E., and convener of the tag-day to be held on Saturday, September 25, announced that the arrangements were complete. Mrs. H. G. Mason reported for the box committee and said that they had decided to prepare for 1,200 boxes. Packing boxes and wrapping paper are to be donated. Mrs. Mason showed a sample box, which contained Christmas cake, candy, cigarettes, tooth-powder, razor blades, chocolate drink, dried soup, cake of soap. It was decided to leave the final choice to Mrs. H. Borland and her committee.

The president of the auxiliary and the five regents were formed into a committee to arrange for the packing, which will be done on October 20 and 21 at the Armouries.

Miss M. Stephenson, who represents the Auxiliary on the L.C.W. gave an interesting report on the last meeting.

Big Buttons Are Ammunition

Designers are using big buttons with enthusiasm and imagination for Fall. Women on the home front also are finding that buttons are an excellent weapon for making old clothes look like new, or for giving a professional finish to home sewn styles.

Choose buttons that are big and bulky. That is the fashion cry for Fall 1943, and some of the new ones look almost as big as grandpa's biscuit watch. So strong is this trend to bigger, bulkier buttons that distinctive buttons have been developed. It is fashioned of plastic and hollow inside, so that in the very largest sizes, these buttons sit lightly on the sheerest wools and crepes.

Strong, too, is the Chinese influence and it is interesting to note that several button originals have been designed especially for this newest fashion trend. Opaque plastic discs are smoothly carved in shallow, scooped out motifs, reminiscent of China's highly prized water-worn stones.

Cut Steel Buckles Back

Newest novelty allied to buttons is the fashion fad for using buckles and slides as brooches. The cut steel buckles we once wore on patent leather slippers now catch up skirt draperies and anchor surplices and other waistline fullness. College girls pull grosgrain ribbon through plastic slides that match their suit buttons, and wear these tailored buckle bows as they wore bow ties all Summer.

For Saturday, September 25

THE SIDEREAL operations on this day, while indicative of lively and exciting conditions, may not be interpreted as entirely fortunate, There are signs of peculiar and intriguing situations, calling for much discretion and conservatism, if dangerous and unprofitable denouements are to be averted. The best prospects are noted through dealing with finesse, tact or sagacity with either persons or institutions, with secrecy. Rely on intuition, inspiration or inner vision or success.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may gain success and personal gratification by adhering to a conservative and prudent course in the face of peculiar, mysterious or unprecedented predicaments. Intrigues and glamorous circumstances may lure to irregular ventures. Intuition, idealism and mystical urges may be relied on if based on high spiritual purpose. A YOUNG WIFE .

Lots of families have group pictures taken but this one, printed in newspapers, was different. It showed 83-year-old Billy Callis of Filey, Yorkshire, holding his four-monthold daughter, while his wife, 37, and their other daughter, 12, looked on, Billy, still an all-round athlete, gives diving and swimming exhibitions and recently boxed with a youth of 18.

YOU WOMEN WHO SUFFER FROM

during 38 to 52 Years of Age!

If you—like so many women between the ages of 38 and 52—suffer from hot flashes, weak, dizzy, nervous feelings, distress of "irregularities", are blue at times—due to the middle age period in a woman's life—start at once—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It's one of the most effective medicines you can buy that's made especially for women.

Pinkham's Compound does more than relieve distress. Taken regularly—it builds up resistance against such symptoms. It also is a fine tonic for the stomach!

Thousands upon thousands of women — rich and poor alike — have reported benefits. Also helpful for younger women to relieve female functional disturbances. Lydia Pinkham's Compound is well worth trying!

RELUCTANT KISSES

EVEN A BRIDE IS REPELLED BY "B.O."

COULD love grow cold so soon? Instinctively—not meaning to hurt him—she draws away. His carelessness—about one thing offends her.

Yes, "B.O." can imperil love itself!

So much may be at stake in the impressions we make on others. Even a new acquaintance may open the road to success—or failure. It's foolhardy to take chances with "B.O." Millions of people have learned the easy way to play safe. Adopt their simple daily precaution. Bathe with Lifebuoy—the one popular soap especially made to stop "B.O."

What a joy Lifebuoy is in your bath! Its rich, creamy suds—so gentle and mild on your skin—are wonderfully cleansing. That clean, invigorating scent refreshes you—then vanishes before you're dressed. But you can be confident; you're really protected against treacherous "B.O."

Du Pont Fur Fabric

Good Winter wool makes a suit with welt stitching finish, above, in brown or green. The matching topcoat, sold as a separate item, is warmly lined with fur fabric of rayon yarn.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

ALL is not fur that's spotted, to paraphrase the old saw about gold and glitter. Sometimes it's a plush fabric which is stencilled to resemble ocelot, or zebra. The warm lining which performs the duty of a dull interlining in the topcoat above is of rayon plush with ocelot markings, and it's warm and dramatic.

DOROTHY DIX

GLAMOR IS DELUSION WHEN MARRIAGE MATTERS TACKLED

Husband Has Right to Demand Pleasant Interesting Companion Who Is Good Sport.

A MAN is asking the courts for a divorce from his wife because she is not glamorous. Let us hope and pray that he gets it, for if he does and marries the glamorous one he will receive the punishment that fits the crime. For glamor is not an item on the domestic menu. It is no part of a home-cooked meal. It belongs to the days of courtship, of illusion and delusion, and all the romantic etceteras that we put on the shelf when we tackle the real business of marriage. To have to live with it, day in and day out, would be like having to partake of a steady diet of lemon pie.

Fancy a hungry man coming home at night to find his glamorous wife posing in a moving picture attitude on a couch, but nothing doing in the kitchen. Fancy Friend Husband having to do all the household chores because his glamorous wife cannot put her manicured hands in dishwater or wield a broom. Fancy a tired man being dragged out to places of amusement every night because a glamorous wife has to get around and show herself. Fancy how a husband would look on the first of the month when the bills came in for the upkeep of a glamorous wife. It is a picture that would wring tears from a heart of stone.

Glamor Passes With Wedding Ceremony

Now while glamor in a woman is as attractive to a man as the red paint on a wagon is to a child, few men marry for it. Their Guardian Angels, or something, whisper in their ears that a woman packs away her glamor along with her wedding gown and orange blossoms, and that she can't stay perpetually glamorous any more than she can stay a perpetual bride.

For no woman can look glamorous at the breakfast table after she has gotten up and cooked the meal. No woman can look glamorous after she has walked the floor half the night with a crying baby, or bent for hours over a sick bed. Nor can any woman stay the hand of Time and keep looking like a mysterious Lady Love after she begins to get the middle-age spread.

There are many things that a husband has a right to demand of his wife, but keeping glamorous, in spite of work and worry and pinching pennies and rearing children, isn't one of them. He has, of course, a right to expect his wife to keep as easy on the eyes as circumstances permit, but that doesn't nesessitate that she should go about trailing clouds of glory, or even, as the phrase goes, preserving her youth and beauty. It merely means that she shall keep herself neat and tidy, comb her hair and leave off the cold cream, and look pleasant.

As long as a wife tells her husband how great and wonderful he is and that she believes that he hung the moon and set the stars in their courses, she looks good to him, and he never notices if she puts on a few more pounds and gets streaks of gray in her hair, and the glamor girls may go hang for all of him.

A husband has a right to demand that his wife shall make him comfortable. It is just as much the wife's business to broil the bacon properly as it is the husband's to bring it in, and sloppy housekeeping and bad cooking should be just as much a cause for divorce as infidelity or drunkenness. "Failure to provide" enables a wife to get rid of a trifling husband. Failure to be a good cook should give a husband the privilege of ditching a lazy wife, without alimony. What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

Husband Has Right to Some Liberty

A husband has a right to demand that his wife should refrain from nagging and that she should grant him the right to a reasonable degree of personal liberty. He didn't marry in order to get someone to harp upon all of his faults and shortcomings and keep his weaknesses ever before him. Nor did he marry to get a jailer.

Unfortunately, however, there are no earmarks by which a man can distinguish a husband-baiter from a husband-spoiler before marriage, and as human ingenuity has devised no way of gagging a quarrelsome woman, many a good man marries one of these feminine dictators and becomes that most piteous and helpless of creatures—a henpecked husband.

A husband has a right to demand that his wife shall be a pleasant, cheerful and interesting companion who is a good enough sport to take life as it comes, instead of always whining and complaining because she hasn't as much money to spend as Mrs. Millionbucks, and because she has to do housework instead of being a cinema star, and because she is tied down by children. And he has a right to demand that his wife shall be a good working partner instead of parasite; that she will cooperate with him instead of balk him at every step; that she will be thrifty instead of a spendthrift; that she will show him some appreciation for all he does for her and not make him run second place to the baby.

Oh, there are a thousand things that a husband has a right to demand of his wife, but not that she shall stay glamorous.

THERE'S SOMETHING about the casual charm and youthful appeal of a blouse and skirt that makes it right for either an informal or a more dressy occasion. Joan Leslie is a great blouse and skirt fan and here she wears one of her favorite outfits. The gaily printed blouse has a background of kelly green and an interesting neckline. The skirt is of black faille and has a high waist with a cut-out section in front.

The Experts Say . . . .

By The Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Sept. 24—(CP).—Helpful hints for housewives active in their homes and kitchens:

Soup's the thing—There's a chill in the air now, even on bright days, and a bowl of steaming home-made soup has a special appeal for appetites sharpened by the crisp autumn air.

With a wealth of vegetables to chose from just now, soups can be made good carriers of important vitamins and minerals, says Marion Harlow of Nutrition Services. Vegetables should be cut up and added to soups just long enough before serving to cook them tender, because so much vitamin C is destroyed by exposure to air and heat.

Liquor in which vegetables have previously been cooked is well fortified with minerals and vitamins, and should be added to soups together with freshly-prepared vegetables.

Suggestion for Jam — Have you ever used pears and grapes together in a jam? It's a combination well worth trying says the consumer section of the agriculture department, if you have some sugar to spare from canning allowance.

The recipe follows:

Stem and measure six cups blue grapes; wash and slip off the skins. To the skins add one cup water and to the pulp one cup water also. Simmer pulp and skins separately about 15 minutes. Press the pulp through a sieve and add to the skins.

Add seven cups of chopped pears and six cups of sugar. Cook slowly until thick — about 45 minutes. Skim, pour into hot sterilized glasses and when cool wax, cover and store.

Equivalent Weights — Memory work on a housewife's part will keep her straight on the ounce weight permitted her on "D" ration coupons, the Prices Board points out. Many containers are labelled in net weights, while the ration is fixed in fluid ounces.

Six fluid ounces equal eight ounces net weight; nine fluid ounces equal 12 ounces net; 12 fluid ounces equal one pound net, and 24 fluid ounces equal two pounds net. As an alternative to buying canned goods, a housewife can always take a half-pound of sugar for her "D" coupon.

On the Mend—It's a good idea to keep your mending basket handy these days, for many a garment would give many months of extra wear if it were properly reinforced when the first signs of wear appear.

Lingerie slips that give at the seams can be reinforced with a length of white tape; frayed straps often can be replaced with straps from a worn-out slip.

And here's a tip regarding wool dresses which have fallen prey to moths—pieces taken from the hem and set in under the moth holes will make a patch that is hardly noticeable. Wear in the garment's underarm section can be repaired similarly, and will not detract from the appearance of the frock.

Price Control Ration News

The Women's Regional Advisory Committee, Consumer Branch, Central Ontario, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, answers questions put to this paper regarding price control and ration regulations.

Q. Can my grocer take an extra coupon when there are three in the family instead of cutting a pound of butter in half?

A. These are difficult days for grocers with short supplies and little help. You should help your groccer in every way you can by not asking him for extra service in wartime..... You should plan to buy your butter one or two pounds at a time. The Ration administration has arranged that butter coupons become valid two at a time every two weeks to avoid the inconvenience of half pounds .... If your grocer does not wish to cut a pound of butter in half, that's up to him. But we don't quite understand why he would take an extra coupon unless in this case, he gave you two pounds of butter .... Please write us again, if this is not clear.

Q. My baby was born in August. Can I apply for canning sugar for him? If so, where?

A. No. Canning sugar application blanks were supposed to be filled in and returned to your local ration board office by April 15. Canning sugar requirements were alloted in June. Had your baby been born before April 15, and had you applied for canning sugar then, your local ration board could have arranged to set aside supplies for him.

Q. Is there a ceiling price on whole mixed pickling spices because one store I know charges 19c lb., another 39c lb. and another 80c lb. could there possibly be this much difference in the price?

A. Maximum mark-ups have been set by the Price Board for spices. Please send us at once the name of the store and any further particulars about the storekeeper who is charging 80c lb, for this kind of spice. We shall have the case investigated immediately.

Please send your questions or your request for the pamphlet "Consumers' News" or the Blue Book (the book in which you keep track of your ceiling prices) mentioning the name of this paper to:

Wartime Prices and Trade Board, 406 Metropolitan Bldg., Toronto.

Like the Duck's Back

Saks Fifth Ave.

White cotton poplin processed to be water repellent makes this raincoat with its detachable hood. Handy pockets; expert insurance against the dimout as well as torrential weather.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THIS department has been taken to task for loosely interchaining "water repellent" with "water proof." Shucks, we knew all the time what the difference is, but all we wanted was to keep snug and dry. If it's water proof... it's dry as the desert as long as it holds together. If it's water repellent, it sheds water, but it could get water logged and go all soppy...say if you sunk it with a stone around its neck about four fathoms down and left it there for a month.

And to get this thing clear for all time, it's ten to one that having put a water repellent coat to soak just out of curiosity, the garment could be re-treated to its water shedding process and come out just as much like a duck's back as ever. Wonderful, eh?

Girls At The Helm

For the first time in the history of the Girls' Basketball League the organization is to be officered this season entirely by girls. This was decided upon at a meeting in the Y.W.C.A. last night when Mary McPherson was chosen as president and a slate of girl officers chosen. This promises to be a fine season for girls' baketball. There was plenty of enthusiasm at last night's meeting, the teams are keen to get going and it looks as if the loop may possibly have seven or eight clubs in action. Six are already certain and there are hopes of several more. So great was the interest shown that it has been decided to get the league started several weeks earlier than usual and the opening games will likely be staged on either November 5 or 12. Usually the league has opened at the end of November. It is hoped that with so many newcomers to Peterborough employed in war plants that considerable new material may be available. In any case the competition promises to be keen and the coming campaign should be one of the best in the history of the organization.

Toronto Leafs roared back into the Governors' Cup series last night when they swamped the Syracuse Chiefs 6 to 0 to tie up the series with one win each. The clubs now move into Syracuse for three games, the first to be staged Saturday night. Tomas De La Cruz the Cuban ace of the Chiefs who had won 23 games during the season proved ineffective against the Toronto gang who bunched hits against him in two big innings, to score a trio of runs on each occasion. On the other hand Nick Strincevich produced a neat pitching effort, holding Syracuse to five scattered hits as he applied the whitewash brush deftly. Gruzdis, Tyack and Dugas were the power-houses in the Leaf attack and their timely hitting was the big factor in the two scoring splurges of the Toronto machine. Strincevich's pitching was so effective that only one of the Chiefs got around the bases far enough to talk to Jeep Handley during the engagement. It was the third time this season that the Toronto pitching star had shut the Chiefs out.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: The Yanks pulled closer to the American League pennant yesterday when they blanked the Detroit Tigers 1 to 0... incidentally it was Marius Russo who turned the trick with a two-hitter, thereby strengthening the impression that the Yanks may have a starting southpaw in the coming World Series....Jean Castle, playing first for the Westclox, had only one putout in Stratford the other night....Isobel Bullock had the Kroehlers either striking out or popping up....The home run marked against her was a roller over third base that Westclox thought was a foul ball and it was not fielded until it was too late to stop the batter from completing the circuit....Stratford Beacon-Herald says "dumb" base-running cost the Big Bens the game but warns Kroehlers they will have to play their best ball to win out in Peterborough....C.G.E.-Genelco will enter two teams in the Ladies' Basketball League this season....If Westclox win tomorrow afternoon's game they will meet the Stratford team in the third and decisive game of the series at Riverside Park at 5.30 o'clock....Cincinnati had the smallest crowd in the history of night baseball last night. Only 2,086 fans saw the Reds nose out the New York Giants 3 to 2....Bill Nicholson of the Chicago Cubs, one of the finest hitters in the game today, cracked out his 25th and 26th homers of the season yesterday....Nicholson has already driven in 116 runs to lead both leagues in that department.

Don't Let Words Fail at the Right Moment

HARVEST SCENE

So often you find yourself at loss to express yourself at the sight of a beautiful scene. The scene above fills one with its quiet depth but all you can think of to say is "What a pretty scene of harvesting."

No need to be speechless. You can easily cultivate a more picturesque speech. A little practice and study will make you the most effective speaker and people will remark on your clear speech.

Your ability to get ahead, to make a good impression socially and in business, depends a good deal on how well you can express yourself. Using the right phrases lends force and color to both speech and writing.

Phrases are better than single words because they make things more vivid, or, quite the opposite, to make things less vivid for instance, the unpleasant word "death" may be made softer by saying "one's last breath" or "the ebb of life."

Our 32-page booklet contains hundreds of examples showing how words can be combined into phrases which are appropriate and effective.

For your copy of EFFECTIVE PHRASES FOR ALL OCCASIONS send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name and address and the name of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

THE PURPOSE OF TABLES

REGARDLESS of how you value a hand or what tables of high-card tricks you use, it is up to you to be the master of your destiny and make your own decisions. You are not the servant of your honor card count. It does not give orders to you, to open the bidding with one hand or pass with another. It is supposed to be your servant, just as is a tool in the carpenter's kit, waiting there to be used when you wish to use it. On many occasions, you should violate the supposed requirements of your honor table, passing a hand with a bit more than minimum prescribed amounts or bidding with a hand which lacks them.

North: ♠Q 9 6 5 4 ♥J 9 5 ♦A 2 ♣A 4 3
West: ♠A 8 ♥8 7 4 2 ♦Q J 10 ♣Q 9 8 5
East: ♠K 7 ♥K 6 ♦9 8 6 5 3 ♣K J 7 6
South: ♠J 10 3 2 ♥A Q 10 3 ♦K 7 4 ♣10 2

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

That is not the bidding which was actually done on this deal. It was merely "Pass, pass, pass, pass," and so a game for North-South was thrown into the waste basket.

When the players exposed their hands after the pass-out, South in an agonized tone wanted to know why North had not opened with a spade bid.

"Simply because I did not have two and a half honor tricks," he answered, "and because I do not like psychics or shaded bids."

He went on to explain that some years ago he used to consider a queen of one suit and a jack of another, if each had a couple of guards, as half a trick, but that in recent years he had not done this. He had not taken account of the fact that he had a five-card length in the most desirable suit of all, spades, the only suit which always compels opponents to bid at a higher level in order to overcall it with their own suit.

If that hand, with its five spades headed by the Q, were submitted to the leading 50 players of the nation—whoever they may be—at least 48 of them, and probably 50, would make an opening bid of a spade on it. Of course, as it turns out, game depends on the location of the heart K, but that finesse would work as the cards lie, and only three tricks would be lost, one in clubs and two in trumps.

Polio Survey Reveals 9 Cases Now

OTTAWA, Sept. 24—Five cases of poliomyelitis at the Trenton R.C.A.F. station, of whom three died, were considered to be a "by-product" of the larger outbreak in Trenton and Belleville, according to a statement issued today by Group Capt. J. W. Tice, director of medical services (air).

The statement said "approximately 25 cases of infantile paralysis have occurred in the civilian population of Trenton and Belleville, and the epidemic at the station is considered a by-product of the larger outbreak in the towns."

The director said immediately on notification of the first case Dr. J. T. Phair, chief medical officer for Ontario, and a specialist from the School of Hygiene, University of Toronto, were called into consultation, "and all measures advised were instituted."

Quarantine was put into effect, with all postings to and from the station cancelled. "All possible precautionary measures have been taken," said the statement, and the outbreak is being kept "firmly in hand."

Five cases were traced to the station—one airman posted to No. 1 Manning Depot, Toronto, 11 days ago, and two airmen who were diagnosed at Trenton have died in the Toronto Isolation Hospital. Two others are being treated at Trenton.

The outbreak is believed to have occurred among members of a course graduating at Trenton, and the posting of the class has been postponed ten days in order that other members of the class may be observed.

None in Trenton

According to Ontario Department of Health officials, civilian cases in the Trenton district are now listed at nine, none of them in Trenton itself. Air force cases total five, three fatal.

Development of two new cases at the R.C.A.F. training station since Tuesday resulted in the station being closely quarantined. Neither of the airmen afflicted is in serious condition. "There's no creeping paralysis evident," a health official said. But one was brought to Toronto Isolation Hospital yesterday afternoon for treatment.

The Provincial Department of Health rushed an iron lung yesterday afternoon to Trenton air station where the other patient is in hospital. It will be available to civilians at the station, if needed.

That the two children brought to Toronto had contracted paralysis was not discovered, it was said, until yesterday afternoon after officials had instituted a thorough inquiry throughout the Trenton district. They live in communities outside Trenton. Officials say the scourge which usually recurs durig the summer months seems to be centred in this part of Eastern Ontario.

MILLBROOK

Gifts Brought For Ditty Bags

MILLBROOK, Sept. 24 — (ENS) —The shower to fill ditty bags for soldiers in Newfoundland received at the Red Cross room on Tuesday afternoon and evening brought a large number of gifts, including cigarettes, Chocolate bars, paper-covered books and Readers' Digests, pads of writing paper and envelopes, games, cross-word puzzles, knitted articles, besides over ten dollars in cash.

Mrs. Lloyd Byam was in charge of receiving the donations as they were brought in, a number more coming in when the evening group met to make hospital dressings at night. The money will be spent to buy other supplies for the bags, and shipment will be made on Friday, it is expected.

For the capture bags, the shipment on Tuesday afternoon included four dozen towels, the same number having been sent forward the previous week. Pyjamas are still to be made and any willing to sew on these at home will be welcomed. Last week many workers spent the time cutting out a large number of garments, and the supply on hand for making is far from exhausted; the need also for the capture bags is pressing.

The resolution was moved by Deputy Reeve E. Sanders and seconded by Councillor H. Mitchell, and received unaimous endorsation from the council.

It was announced a few days ago by the Port Hope Sanitary Company, that on account of labor shortages, it was planned to import some Japanese, who were Canadian nationals. to work in the plant. The company spokesman pointed out that in order to maintain production of the company at its peak, the Japanese would have to be brought in.

Robbery Suspect Hiding In Swamp

GEORGETOWN, Ont., Sept. 24—(CP).—Thirty police to-day continued their search of a swamp bush area at nearby Norval and checked traffic on all highways in a 20-mile area in their search for three men wanted on charges of robbing a creamery at Fergus Tuesday night of a safe containing $1,000.

The search of the swamp area and the highway check went on through the night after police said they fired at the fugitives twice yesterday afternoon. They said that on the second occasion 24 shots were fired and it was believed one man was wounded.

Police said a car abandoned by the three men yesterday after a police bullet hit a back tire had been stolen in Toronto and was used in the Fergus robbery

All Buildings To Cut Heating

HAMILTON, Sept. 24 — (CP) — Russell T. Kelley, supervisor of the Dominion-wide church fuel saving plan, yesterday said all the public places where people congregate "will be brought into line" in Canada's fuel conservation plan.

The matter now is under consideration by authorities, said Mr. Kelley.

Churches, which he said were open only one day a week, were being asked to reduce fuel needs by 20 per cent this winter, and expressed the opinion that if there is a need for churches to curtail their fuel-burning on Sunday, "and perhaps for a night or two a week when meetings are held," there should be at least an equal response from places opened every week night.

He made the statement following the endorsation by the Hamilton Council of Churches yesterday of a resolution which said churches in this district have co-operated loyally in saving of fuel "but would point out that economy in the use of fuel appears necessary in other directions, especially in certain places less beneficial to the community than the church."

Holidays With Pay For Shipyard Workers

MONTREAL, Sept. 24 — (CP) — Details of a plan for granting holidays with pay to shipyard workers in Quebec and Montreal were announced here last night by David Cote, Eastern organizer of shipyard workers for the Canadian Congress of Labor following a a metting in Ottawa.

Under the plan, workers of 12 months' standing will receive six days' holidays with pay, 11 months 5½ days, with the scale graduating down with a half-day less off for each month less worked down to two months, when the holiday is one day.

Under the arrangement, absence from work because of sickness of more than one week shall require a doctor's certificate to prove inability to work.

Protest Is Made To Air Ministry

LONDON, Sept. 24 (CP Cable)—Representatives of Dominion newspapers decided today to protest officially through the Empire Press Union to the Air Ministry at the failure to include any representatives of Empire Overseas News Services or newspapers in a recent tour of journalists through the Mediterranean war theatre.

The representatives, including The Canadian Press, pointed out that the entire personnel of the visiting journalists represented only United Kingdom newspapers, at the same time drawing the attention of the Air Ministry to the fact that 50 per cent of the entire R.A.F. air crews is composed of men from the Dominions and colonies.

Hon. C. G. Power, Canada's Air Minister, has announced in Ottawa that Canada alone provided at least 30 per cent.

It was suggested the representatives of each Dominion and colony should protest officially to their respective governments and ask that their aid be invoked to assure that Canadian and other Empire journalists are given an equal opportunity to cover the activities of their fellow-countrymen serving in air bases scattered throughout the Mediterranean theatre.

Short Illnesses Show Increase

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(CP).—The health of the average Briton is holding up remarkably well despite the rigors of four years of war, Health Minister Ernest Brown said yesterday, but he warned that increases last year in venereal diseases and tuberculosis constituted danger spots.

"There can be no doubt that the nation's prodigious war effort has imposed a severe strain upon the health of the people — a strain which they have withstood in general with dogged determination and astonishing success," Brown said in his annual report.

Surveys, he added, showed no general deterioration in the nutritional state of the people, but suggested a considerable increase in short-term sickness.

Although veneral diseases, which have been increasing steadily throughout the war period, showed an unspecified increase last year, the total incidence of infections disease was less by nearly 30 per cent., Brown said. Brown's report also showed the illegitimacy rate in Britain rose from 42 per thousand in 1939 to 54 per thousand in 1942.

"Whether you pay the penalty or serve the six months, I want it understood that you are not immune from the Selective Service Act," the magistrate informed Widowski when he was sentenced.

Widowski presented a motion that the complaint against him was invalid, as he was a preacher of the teachings of Jehovah.

"The motion is over-ruled," said Magistrate Brodie.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE SMOLENSK CITY

Allies Move Closer To Naples City

8th Army Advances On Inland Route Resistance Lively

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Corespondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 25—(AP)—Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark's Anglo-American 5th Army has fought its way onto hills looking down on the Plain of Naples in a furious day and night offensive supported by heavy artillery barrages and resisted by German tanks as well as strong gun emplacements, Allied headquarters stated today.

Meanwhile, Allied fighters shot down 19 Junkers-52 transports in another sweep against the hard-pressed enemy's air-evacuation from Corsica where French patriots and regulars and American Rangers were pressing him into a tight corner.

Damage 10 More

At least 10 more of the evacuation planes were damaged in the great air battle off historic Elba in which R.A.F. Beaufighters laid siege to the German-held tip of the island and trapped the Nazi air fleets just as they did off Tunisia and Sicily.

The planes were crowded with technicians and key men. Allied reports said two of the seven other air transports shot down the day before had 100 men crammed into them.

During the night R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Wellingtons dropped 4,000-pound blockbusters on shipping in Leghorn Harbor which is being used to get Germans out of Bastia, Corsica.

Struggling forward over terrain so difficult that pack mules were used extensively to carry up guns and ammunition. Gen. Clark's men gained a foothold on the top of mountains extending from Vesuvius and Pompei in their drive on Naples.

While French and American forces squeezed the Germans into a tighter corner of Corsica, long-range fighter-bombers swooped upon the German air-evacuation movement off the Napoleonic Island and shot down 19 more Nazi air transports to add to the bag of seven announced yesterday, an air communique said.

Resistance Lively

The communique confirmed the fall of Altamura in southeastern Italy to British forces, first announced in field dispatches yesterday, and said the 8th Army which includes units of the Canadian 1st Division, is "advancing according to plan" at points inland from the northward surge of Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark's forces.

In the 5th Army's full scale offensive to knock off Naples the German resistance "is aided by difficult terrain and demolitions," the announcement said.

"Sausage Machine," New Term Coined By Allied Troops

Amphibious Scheme Gives Soldiers View Of Program To Come

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Sept. 25—(CP)—Add the phrase "sausage machine" to the dictionary of military terms which have come into being in this war.

It is an important phrase of which more will be heard as troops of the United Nations establish more bridgeheads on the continent. From the "sausage machine" soldiers will go to craft to cross the channel or other short sea lanes on the invasion route.

Canadians found out about the sausage machine on a large scale amphibious exercise in which they took part this month. They passed through it on their way from camps in southern England to the coast.

Purpose of the exercise, from the army standpoint, was to test the procedure and machinery for passing troops to concentration areas and then to ships.

While in concentration areas units retained their identity, an Ontario battalion settling down in camp under its own commander, with its own cooks supplying meals, its own gunners providing anti-aircraft defence.

Under Army Command

From concentration areas, however they moved into reception areas and came under control of the army command through which they were passing. They were in the sausage machine.

This "machine," it was explained, is where units are broken down into serials or craft loads. Men boarding "A" barge, for example, are grouped together and may not see other troops of their battalion until they have landed on enemy shore.

From reception camps troops move to marshalling areas, then to transit areas and from there to "hards"—cement stages from which vehicles and men are loaded aboard landing craft.

Only a limited number of men can be loaded on each tide. Such factors as the number of hards and the number of landing craft must be taken into consideration. Only one tide-load is assembled in a marshalling area, while two are kept in a reception area.

While troops are in the sausage machine they enjoy "hotel" service. Meals, accommodation, blankets, entertainment and everything else a soldier needs in camp are provided by the command. The men are confined to camp but have no camp duties.

When they leave the hotels to go to the beaches they are supposed to be "rested and in a cheerful frame of mind." Concerts and movies are provided to help them forget what may lie ahead.

That Ontario battalion which was broken up in the reception camp finds itself reunited at sea. And, when the barges touch down on the opposite shore men of the unit will arrive together at the same place, with equipment.

Scribe Sees Fleet Surrender

By CLARK LEE—Representing the Combined American Press (Distributed by The Canadian Press)

WITH GEN. EISENHOWER AT ADVANCED ALLIED COMMAND POST, Sept. 11—(Delayed).—This has been the kind of day that Hollywood would dream up for a war correspondent, except that there were no slim and beautiful brunettes in the picture, not even a redhead.

I was in a mood to commit hara-kiri on Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's doorstep and told the General so when I went to see him at 7.30 this morning. There are a half dozen stories of world-wide importance within a half mile of headquarters but it is forbidden to write them.

The General said he could not discuss the fighting at Salerno for publication because it was still in the stage of touch and go. Then he asked what I wanted to do to get some news.

Waves Fairy Wand.

"First of all I'd like to fly out and have a look at the Italian fleet that's coming down to surrender, then see Admiral Cunningham, and I'd like permission to write the inside story of the Italian armistice negotiations and of what is going on in Italy. Everybody involved is in this area now and all the material is available."

Gen. Ike then waved his magic wand and won a friend for life. He called in a staff officer and said, "Phone Air Chief Marshal Tedder and see if he can provide an airplane. Phone the Admiral and make an appointment. Phone the censorship office and get an okay for the armistice story."

In a half hour it was all arranged and Dave Brown of Reuters News Agency and I got the first installment of the armistice negotiations story from the brigadier who participated in the meetings as one of Gen. Eisenhower's representatives.

After the interview the rest of the day was arranged on a split-second schedule.

We rushed over to the airfield at 12:15 p.m., and climbed aboard a two-engined bomber assigned to us and to two army photographers.

A Beautiful Sight

We had exactly an hour to fly out and look at one of the great scenes in recent history as the Italian battlefleet steamed toward Malta after surrendering at sea. The ships were stretched out over five miles of sea in three perfect columns headed by two British battleships and six destroyers.

Behind them were the Italian ships, the dreadnoughts Vittorio Veneto and Italia, five cruisers and four destroyers.

We sat down on the airport at 1:29 p.m., just one minute ahead of schedule. Then we ran over to a Royal Navy limousine driven by a British marine.

We got down to the docks and aboard the British destroyer Hambleton just before it cast off to take Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham and Gen. Ike to see the Italian ships.

When he noticed me standing on the bridge Gen. Eisenhower said, "I

Vigorous Independent Plan Outlined By Colonel Drew

TORONTO, Sept. 25—(CP).—Premier Drew says the Progressive Conservative administration he was called upon to form after the August 4 Provincial election when 38 members of his party were returned compared with 34 for the C.C.F. will "govern the province and introduce legislation just as we would have done if we possessed a very large majority."

Col. Drew made this assurance in an address broadcast last night over a CBC regional network embracing 23 Ontario stations. In it, he said the Government has "no thought of temporizing," expressed admiration of Britain's system of government and said "in appointing committees to examine the facts in relation to the problems of various departments of government in Ontario, we are following the same well-established practice ...and this course we will continue to follow."

The rest of his address was devoted largely to a review of government activities since he took office and a forecast of steps proposed in various fields. The summary touched on these points:

Covers Mining.

1. Mining: A committee has been formed under Chairman Norman Urquhart of Toronto to investigate the mining industry, in which he said there is "urgent need" for a complete survey.

2. Agriculture: The 23-man committee appointed under Archibald Leitch of Guelph to study agricultural conditions is not an organizing body. Its work may last several years and it will be asked among other things to make recommendations on farm education and similar subject "which will create pride in agriculture as an occupation" among young people. He described the committee as one of the most

Free Yugoslavs Smash Tanks

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP)—The Morocco radio said today a communique broadcast by the "Free Yugoslav radio" reported that tank-supported German formations were repulsed in an attack on positions of Yugoslav patriots near Split and that the Germans lost 300 men killed and two tanks destroyed.

The Moroccan broadcast, recorded by United States government monitors, quoted the communique as reporting that there had been heavy fighting around Gorizia and Ljubljana, but that the Germans failed to break the lines of the "Army of Liberation." Yugoslav patriots also repulsed Nazi attempts to land on the islands of Sipanj and Mljet in the Adriatic Sea, sinking one troopship and one supply ship, the communique said.

5 Nurses Sent Out

TORONTO, Sept. 25—(CP).—Dr. R. P. Vivian, Ontario Health Minister, said yesterday five nurses from the Provincial Health Department are being sent to the Belleville-Trenton district immediately as a "precautionary measure" to co-operate with local and school authorities in controlling the spread of infantile paralysis.

180,000 Men Fight Huns In Balkans

Greeks And Serbs Join Forces To Fight Invaders

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 25 — (AP) —A Budapest dispatch to the newspaper Svenska Dagbladet said today that a full-scale military operation was under way against German and Nazi satellite troops in Yugoslavia by a force of 180,000 strong under Allied command.

The dispatch said the action had reached the scale where it could no longer be considered guerilla warfare, and Berlin dispatches said the Germans were rushing reinforcements to the Dalmatian area in an effort ot regain control. Nazi military commanders admit however, the dispatches said, that the Yugoslavian forces hold strong mountain positions.

The newspaper listed these principal war zones:

Bosnia, South-western Serbia, and Montenegro, Dalmatia and the Croatian coast, and Slovenia and Istria.

Greek and Serbian guerilla forces are preparing for joint action against German communications and troop concentrations, reliable information from Nazi-occupied Greece disclosed today.

Three high commanders of the Andarts, Greek patriotic organization conferred recently with Allied Middle East military officials at an undisclosed location, the information said, and as a result they will meet shortly with Gen. Draja Mihailovic or his representatives somewherein Yugoslavia to plan joint tactics.

Greek sources said today that many Germans were being found slain in Messenia province as Greek patriots fought a reign of terror instigated by the Nazis soon after they replaced Italian occupation troops in Greece.

In reprisal, the Germans were said to be gathering hostages and to have burned the villages of Aetos and Rodakino.

Railway Station Hit By Bombs

NEW DELHI, Sept. 25 —(CP)—Heavy damage was inflicted on the Sedaw railway station of Japanese-occupied Burma Wednesday by medium United States bombers, a communique said today.

"Considerable trackage was destroyed in the yard area and direct hits were made on the switchhouse," the report said.

The Mu Canal bridge was damaged considerably by a bomber in a low-level attack.

All aircraft and crews returned.

Great Hun Bastion Evacuated Fall of Kiev City Imminent

By JAMES M. LONG—Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 25 —(AP)—Smolensk, greatest German base on the Russian front for more than two years, has been evacuated and left open for the encircling Soviet Army to enter without further delay, Berlin said to-day.

Evacuation of the city, 210 miles northeast of threatened Kiev, was announced in a DNB broadcast recorded by Reuters News Agency.

Fall of the bastion, once the Headquarters from which Hitler personally directed the futile Nazi thrust at Moscow, would constitute one of the most disastrous defeats suffered by German forces in the current Russian offensive.

The Berlin broadcast said further German forces had abandon Roslavl, 65 miles southeast of Smolensk on the Desna River defence line.

Separated By River.

The fall of Kiev also appeared imminent. The charging Red troops there were separated only by the breadth of the Dnieper River from the enemy, Moscow announced in its regular daily war bulletin.

The Soviet communique had announced the capture of Korelly, seven miles northeast of Smolensk, around which the famous Todt engineers had constructed a vast system of defence.

Other Moscow radio reports said a second column of Red Army troops was advancing from the north five miles away while a third column was swinging up from the south.

Smolensk, which has two railroads entering it from the west and three from the east, fell to the Germans July 16, 1941.

Marshal Semeon Timoshenko threw thousands of his best troops into a tremendous battle to recapture the city in December, 1941, but was forced back. Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov tried again the following spring, but was stopped only after the Germans had counter-attacked more than 30 times.

Roslavl, which lies midway between Smolensk and Bryansk, was captured by the Germans soon after Smolensk fell. It is of no great industrial or strategic importance, even though it had been strongly fortified by the Germans as part of the Desna line defences.

DNB said both cities were evacuated by "rearguards" after all important military establishments had been demolished.

There was every indication that the fall of Smolensk and the expected capitulation of Kiev would mean in cold, hard, tactical truth

World Wheat Surplus Drops Canada Still Has Carryover

OTTAWA, Sept. 25—(CP).—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today all signs point to a substantial reduction in the wheat surplus of the major exporting countries a year from now.

In a review of the wheat situation, the bureau said the prospects for reduced carry-over were tempered by the United States request for an increase of 14,000,000 acres in the 1944 wheat plantings.

Canada probably will continue to have a substantial surplus remaining at the end of the crop year on July 31, having a total of almost 900,000,000 bushels available now.

The bureau said that at the end of the last crop year, on July 31, Canada, the United States, Argentina and Australia had a combined wheat surplus of 1,578,000,000 bushers, or 157,000,000 bushels more than a year previously.

"Four years of war have witnessed a steady rise in wheat surplus stocks in the major exporting countries," said the report.

"This accumulation sometimes has been attributed to loss of export markets but this is not borne out by statistics. In actual fact, this group of countries has disposed of about 400,000,000 bushels more wheat in the four war years than in the four years preceding the outbreak of hostilities, taking into account both exports and domestic utilization of wheat."

While the volume of international trade in wheat had shrunk about 20 per cent compared with the four pre-war years, there had been, enlarged domestic use of wheat, particularly in Canada and the United States. In Canada case, wheat exports were higher during the war period, in addition to the increased home use for animal feed and other purposes.

"The 1943 wheat crop in Canada and the United states is 416,000,000 bushels smaller than it was in 1942 but taking carryover into account, the total supply is only 252,000,000 bushels less than it was a year ago. Export and relief shipments in the current crop year are too closely tied to war developments and transportation problems to be gauged at this time."

Report Rumania Tries For Peace

MADRID, Sept. 25 (AP)—Reports, some clearly of German origin, circulated here today that representatives of the Rumanian government are negotiating with Allied representatives at Ankara, Turkey for an armistice.

The Rumanians first attempted, the reports said, to omit the Russians and negotiate only with the Western powers, but, failing this, agreed to meet the tri-power representatives.

There was no indication of the progress of the rumored meetings, but Balkan representatives here feel that such conferences might be linked with Budapest reports of growing tension between Rumania and Hungary over Transylvania, northern Rumanian area ceded to Hungary under Axis pressure.

The reports said Rumania first sounded out the Allies for an armistice shortly after Benito Mussolini's ousting as Italian premier, and again sought an armistice conference immediately after the Italian capitulation.

Starvation Sweeps Bengal Province

Growing Discontent May Upset Allied Plans For Burma Invasion

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press Staff Writer

The grave famine conditions on the densely-populated eastern seaboard of India add to the concern already felt over the continued political crisis in this vast country which not only is the Allied arsenal of the Orient but principal base for the coming offensive against Japan through Burma.

Latest dispatches say that more than 1,000,000 hungry people are being fed in Bengal province which has a population of 60,000,000. In the great port of Calcutta alone, there have been 50 deaths a day from starvation. An army of hungry folk some 100,000 strong wanders in the streets without shelter.

This plague of starvation didn't come without warning to India where much of the population of 400,000,000 is hungry even in best of times.

Poor Organization.

The trouble is due to several factors. Among these are hoarding of grain, faulty distribution, shipment of foodstuffs abroad to feed troops, and shortage of rice owing to Japanese occupation of Burma from which India, especially Bengal, normally has obtained great quantities of this food.

India and British observers are fearful lest unscrupulous people should be able to merge the hunger situation with the political discontent for ulterior purposes. That would be a terrible combination.

Now the dread scourge of hunger has arrived, and it is an ironic circumsance that it should be striking most heavily on Bengal. This province is at once the hot-bed of anti-government activities, and the place from which many of the Allied invasion forces must strike at Burma across the Bay of Bengal.

The government of India says the political situation is in hand. The lid is clamped on discontented elements and there is no danger that it will blow off. Energetic measures are being taken to meet the food crisis. Despite these assurance, there is much concern among military men in India.

Explosion Kills 14 Miners

Deadly Damp Gas Delays Rescue Workers

MINERSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 25 — (AP)—Fourteen men were dead today and nine others injured, one of them seriously, as the result of an explosion that ripped through the fifth level of the Moffett Schrader Coal Mine, 1,200 feet below the surface, at nearby Forrestville, late yesterday.

Wives and mothers, huddled around the shaft leading to the fifth level of the mine, saw the shattered bodies of four of their menfolk brought to the surface at 10 o'clock last night.

Mine officials, who said there was no indication as to the cause of the blast, reported 10 other bodies still underground. Seven of these were identified, while three others were literally torn to bits by the force of the blast.

The period of waiting was lengthened for relatives at the mine shaft when all rescue operations were ordered stopped last night by Richard Maize, state secretary of mines, who said deadly black damp gas was spreading through the fifth level, endangering the lives of rescue workers.

Maize said arrangements are being made to install a fan to drive out the gas.

Plane Production Upped

U.S. Made 110,000 War Planes Since 1942

LONDON, Sept. 25 (CP)—Donald M. Nelson, United States war production board chairman, told the Allies — and the Axis as well — last night, that United States war industry soon would be completing one military plane every five minutes.

Nelson, speaking at a dinner given in his honor by the British Government, asserted that American war production this year would be at least one and one-half times the combined output of Germany and Japan. Next year, he promised, it probably will be twice as great.

Expressing belief that his figures would interest the Germans as well as his immediate audience, Nelson said the United States alone produced 110,000 war planes since Jan. 1, 1942, and that the production curve is still rising.

In that same period, America produced 60,000 tanks, 53,000 scout cars and carriers and 1,100,000 trucks and trailers, Nelson said, as well as more than 21,000,000 deadweight tons of merchant vessels and 3,000,000 displacement tons of naval vessels.

Enough artillery and ammunition has been produced in the United States to "let us fire 2,000 shots at every Axis soldier," he disclosed.

TOUGH AUSTRALIAN FIGHTERS CAPTURE 60 MILES OF SHORELINE

Finschhafen Airfield Taken Over

New Guinea Base Gives Allies Strong Advantage

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Sept. 25—(AP)—The Finschhafen airfield has been wrested from the Japanese, giving the Allies a New Guinea base for planes 75 miles from the enemy's strategically important bastion of New Britain.

Australians who landed from the sea in the face of mortar and machine-gun fire six miles north of Finschhafen Wednesday, captured the field and now are within three-quarters of a mile of the town, headquarters reported today.

The impending capture of Finschhafen would add 60 more miles of shoreline—that between Finschhafen and Lae—to the New Guinea coastal region under Allied control.

From Finschhafen's airfield, unserviceable recently to the Japanese because of Allied air poundings, it is an 85 miles flight to the enemy airdrome of Cape Gloucester and 165 miles to the Gasmata airdrome—New Britain bases guarding the way up that crescent-shaped island to Rabaul, a stronghold with three airdromes and a harbor capable of accommodating a good sized fleet.

Air Attacks Grow

Capture of the Salamaua airdrome Sept. 11, and the Lae air base Sept. 16 has been followed quickly by increased fighter and attack plane activity over New Britain.

Today's communique reported that fighters dive-bombed installations on the tiny island of Gasmata.

Medium bombers set supply dumps afire and exploded ammunition in the Kimbe Bay region, which is 150 miles from Rabaul and slightly more than 250 miles from Lae-Salamaua.

In other air activity reported today, medium bombers swung inland along the Markham Valley beyond positions seized by paratroops Sept. 5. The bombers dropped many tons of explosives and fired 41,000 rounds of ammunition at Japanese trying a back door escape from the debacle at Lae. The bombers roamed as far as Ragitsuma, 80 miles northwest of Lae, without spotting an enemy plane.

Georgia Soldier Shivers On Visit

Cpl. Bob Lacombe, of the United States Army wonders if the Canadian winter can be any colder than this month of September. He has just completed a course as a radio technician in the University of Georgia in Athens, Georgia, where according to him the temperature climbs way over the 100 mark at this time of the year.

From that balmy climate he arrived in Peterborough to visit his aunt, Mrs. Nagle Phelan. This soldier was born in Peterborough, but his family moved to Buffalo when he was quite young. A rather unusual angle to his enlistment is that he was born on Dec. 7, the anniversary of Pearl Harbor, and joined voluntarily a short time after passing his 18th bithday to make him one of the youngest men to enlist in the army, giving his correct age. He enlisted in an anti-aircraft battery, holds an army medal as a rifle marksman first class, and has graduated as a radio technician with high mraks.

Proof that U.S. army men can be close-mouthed was given when a reporter asked him what type of anti-aircraft guns he trained on.

"I'm sorry I can't tell you that."

"Where are you posted to now?" was the next innocent query.

"That's something we can't talk about either" was the reply.

This soldier graduated from high school at the end of the term last year. Miss Corrinne Delaire of Donegal steet, is his aunt also.

Incinerator Gets 13 Loads Daily

Eleven loads of garbage, the day's pick up and haul, were burned in the new incinerator by twelve o'clock noon, Friday, Alderman chairman, reported to the property committee of the city council yesterday afternoon.

On another day recently sixteen loads had gone up in smoke by 2.30 p.m.

"Probably the average is around thirteen loads, Alderman Swanston said. "The men are getting through the man job fairly early, and everything is burned except cans and ashes. The time report does not mean that the garbage collection men are through at those hours. They still have to go back for ashes and that kind of material."

The chairman said he was occompanied by Alderman Bradburn and Sands in a visit to the incinerator this week. The old incinerator is not being used. The chairman was authorized to have some minor detail work completed as soon as possible. It includes a widening of the ramp platform, painting interior iron parts, finishing off concrete and several other jobs.

Some chairs will be bought for the workmen and a table put in for their lunch hour, incidental additions to add a touch of comfort for the men. It was said that all they had to sit on during their meal hour were several empty boxes.

G. S. Matthews On Power Directorate

Gordon S. Matthews was elected to the directorate of the Eastern Ontario Municipal Electrical Association in Kingston yesterday. W. Ross Strike, of Bowmanville, is president for the association's new year.

Retention of Dr. Thomas H. Hogg as chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission was recommended to the provincial government.

Continuation of the appeal to the public to save electric power in their domestic use was advocated at the meeting.

"We have bought a little power here, saved some power there, built a number of new plants, asked the public to be sparing and up to now have got along. I think you will agree, fairly well," Dr. Hogg said.

Unsung Heroes Battle Danger In Frozen North

By STUART UNDERHILL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WHITEHORSE, Y.T., Sept. 25—(CP)—Invasion forces are on the move in the sub-arctic regions of North America, pressing to tame the mighty natural forces of an area almost as large as Australia and utilize them in the fight against the Axis.

It's not a "shooting battle" in the north, but sudden death is lurking there and men grow hard-faced staving off the counter-attacks of balky landslides, washouts, muskeg, knife-like winds, congealing temperatures and spring and summer cloudbursts.

The campaign of military and civilian engineers as revealed to date has four objectives:

1—A chain of airports from Edmonton to Fairbanks, Alaska.

2—A highway over the same route.

3—A pipeline from the oilfields at Norman Wells, N.W.T., to Whitehorse.

4—Telephone lines over both highway and pipeline.

Airports Complete

After two years the chain of airports is complete, the highway is open to traffic most of the year as far as Whitehorse, tre pipeline is being pushed through under tremendous difficulties in the hope it will be completed by the end of this year, and slightly more than half the telephone project has been finished.

As far as permanent gains are concerned, it is obvious that the string of airports is there to stay. Huge all-weather landing strips have been laid down by Canadian contractors and are now being expanded and developed by United States concerns. Other intermediate fields are in process of construction.

Future Uncertain.

The civilian future of the highway, built as a defence measure, is one of the most debated topics in the North. Optimists see it as a thriving post-war thoroughfare, pessimists envision it being abandoned because of terrific maintenance costs. It is still incomplete between Whitehorse and Fairbanks due to ice conditions.

Many of the most noticeable effects of the wartime program are transient. But the structure of permanent development is being laid across the vast expanses that never felt man's footsteps. And from the harrowing experiences in the battle with nature—roads vanishing, aircraft tossed into mountain valleys, men pinned beneath the wreckage of slithering trucks—is being built a wealth of experience that will guide events in the post-war years.

WARKWORTH, Sept. 25 (ENS)—The death of Marshall Wilson, a highly esteemed resident of Norham, occurred at the family residence this week. He was a son of the late William Wilson and his wife Caroline Brent, and was born in the Wilson settlement, Percy township on May 29, 1867.

For a number of years Mr. Wilson farmed south of Norham and in 1921 he bought the Norham grist mill which he operated until 1935.

The late Mr. Wilson was well known and highly respected by all who knew him, and he has long been associated with Norham church and has been connected with various branches of church work.

Dentists Hope To Stop Decay

That it was quite possible a vaccine may be discovered which will help prevent teeth decay was stated Friday by Dr. J. E. Middleton, who is vice president of the Public Dental Health Council of Ontario, speaking before a luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club. He said it was no more fantastic to believe that such a vaccine might be found than it had been to believe in the practicability of preventive vaccines for typhoid and other diseases.

"Our greatest task," Dr. Middleton asserted, referring to the activities of the Dental Health Council, "is the prevention of decay." As an instance of the vital importance of tackling this job, he cited results of a survey of children's mouths undertaken in Smith township, indicating that 97% suffered in some measure from teeth decay.

"Not much progress has been made in prevention up to the present time," Dr. Middleton declared, saying that the need was for increased research. He stated that Federal grants for the Province of Ontario were behind those of other provinces and should be enlarged.

An education movie film illustrating the growth and structure of teeth was shown at the meeting. Dr. Middleton was introduced by Jacob Low and the vote of thanks was moved by Major Reginald Bamsay.

thought you were up in an airplane."

At an opportune time he called Brown and myself over and introduced us to Admiral Cunningham who had been fighting for three years to get the Italian fleet out of port and at this moment was realizing his ambition. Here stretched out before his eyes was a force that, suddenly added to our side, altered the whole global balance of sea power.

Warspite On Job.

Admiral Cunningham pointed out the Warspite and told me, "Be sure and put her in your story because she had a big part in bringing this about. She is flying the flag of Rear Admiral Bisset."

Then he corrected himself, "No, she is wearing the flag of Admiral Bisset, that's the way we say it now."

The Italian ships, as Admiral Cunningham said, are absolutely first class and many of the features of our modern ships have been adopted from innovations of Italian designers.

Although our arsenals do not turn out shells for their big guns, we can replace the smaller stuff and Ack Ack batteries with our own calibres.

Gen. Eisenhower kept himself in the background. He gave me the text of the statement, "The Italian battlefleet is anchored under the guns of Malta," and emphasized, "that's not from Headquarters but from the Admiral. This is his party."

I asked Gen. Eisenhower if he had formally congratulated the Admiral.

"There's no formality between us," he replied.

"But have you told him it was a swell job?"

Gen. Eisenhower laughed. He knows it's a swell job, without my telling him."

I was beginning to look and feel a little foolish as I insisted. "For the history books, General, don't you think it would be a good idea to send him a message of congratulation?"

Sends Telegram.

Gen. Eisenhower agreed and dictated a telegram congratulating Admiral Cunningham on his victory over the Italian fleet in the Mediterranean. Then he changed the words "Italian fleet" to "The enemy," explaining that the Italians had fully kept their promises and he did not want to hurt their feelings.

Then he said, "Oh, what the hell! It was the Italian fleet. Put that back in."

Later I took the message back to Headquarters and gave it to Gen. Eisenhower's aide to send to the Admiral.

The big moment in the review of the captured ships came when we passed astern of the entire formation after Admiral Cunningham had warned the destroyer's captain, "Don't turn too sharp now and scare them."

The General in command of public relations was there and he promised that our stories would be rushed through. We typed until midnight.

And to think that you get paid for a job like this.

Beaverbrook Returns To War Cabinet

LONDON, Sept. 25 (CP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill today reshuffled his cabinet in a move to strengthen the government for the tasks of post-war planning, bringing back Lord Beaverbrook as Lord Privy Seal and making Sir John Anderson Chancellor of the Exchequer. Other changes:—

Lord Cranborne, 50, gives up the post of Lord Privy Seal to become Dominions Secretary, remaining government leader in the House of Lords.

Clement Attlee, Labor party leader, exchanges the Dominions office portfolio for that of Lord President of the Council, formerly held by Sir John Anderson. He remains Deputy Prime Minister.

Richard K. Law, 42, was named Minister of State.

Three lesser appointments also were announced

G. H. Hall, Labor, formerly Financial Secretary to the Admiralty, succeeded Law as Foreign Under-Secretary;

J. P. Thomas, Conservative, formerly the Lord Commissioner of the Treasury, became Financial Secretary to the Admiralty;

N. A. Beechman, National Liberal, became Lord Commissioner of the Treasury.

Lord Beaverbrook, 64-year-old Canadian-born newspaper publisher, has been one of the most constant and vociferous critics of the government since he left his post as Minister of Supply early last year. He is not a member of the war cabinet.

As General Utility Minister he will be able to assist Mr. Churchill with special administrative work and probably will preside over a number of governmental committees concerned with both war and post-war organization.

Sir John Anderson, 61, takes over the arduous post held by Sir Kingsley Wood until the latter's death last Tuesday. It will be his task to administer the country's finances and to regulate the immense tax burdens the people of Britain are carrying.

Sir Kingsley was not a member of the war cabinet but Sir John will remain in the war cabinet.

Canadian Native

Law, a son of Andrew Bonar Law, a native of Canada who was Prime Minister of Britain for some months in 1922 and 1923, formerly was parliamentary under-secretary of state in the Foreign Office. He will be given responsibility for Foreign Office work concerned with post-war preparations.

The cabinet changes were announced in a statement from 10 Downing street. The statement added that "certain consequential appointments" would follow.

It also noted that R. G. Casey, Minister of State with headquarters in the Middle East, would be described in future as Minister of State "resident in the Middle East."

According to the evidence he had been in that vicinity for several days sleeping in barns or any place available.

Senator Fallis Speaker At Institute Tea

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 25 (ENS)—"The chief purpose of the Senate is to guard against legislation that would not be for the good of Canada as a whole, and to protect the interests of the minority," said Senator Iva Fallis in an address on the subject "What the Senate Stands For," at a community tea on Thursday afternoon, sponsored by the Women's Institute.

Senator Fallis said that she believed that the average woman knew little of the work of the Senate and explained that whereas the House of Commons was like a stage where the play unfolds, and bills are debated at length, the Senate was like a workshop where the bills were whipped into place, and without publicity, committees went to work and thoughtfully and carefully considered whether they should be made law.

Acts As Check

The speaker said that the Senate was a check and a curb on unnecessary spending of money or unwise legislature, and because members of the Senate were elected for life they have a chance to forget narrow partisan views, study legislature and judge accordingly. She said that 80% of the bills submitted to the Senate were changed or mended beore becoming law.

Senator Fallis also spoke of special committees formed in the Senate on social reconstruction and rehabilitation and sub-committees on social security. Whereas the government is busy with plans for winning the war, the Senate has more time to consider post war plans, Senator Fallis declared. She spoke at some length on the re-establishing of soldiers after the war and stressed that they should be given every chance, "we owe that to them," and although the speaker did not agree with all points of the Marsh and Beveridge reports she did hope that a sound health insurance plan would soon be established.

The president, Mrs. Harold Howson, expressed the thanks of the meeting to Senator Fallis. About seventy ladies were present, among whom were guests from Millbrook, Cavanville and Peterborough.

Miss Winnifred Gainer sang "One Fleeting Hour," and "The White Cliffs of Dover." A salad plate tea was served and a silver collection taken of $15.00.

Abiding Values Received From the History of Israel

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for September 26 is Deuteronomy 1-3, 11, the Golden Text being Proverbs 14:34, "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.")

Deuteronomy is a repetition of the laws given to the people of Israel in Leviticus. It is a summary of these laws, and also emphasizes that first of all commandments, "Thou shalt love thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might."

The first three chapters, however, are a review by Moses of the history of the Children of Israel from the time they left Egypt up to the last month of the 40th year of their wanderings, when they stood ready to enter the promised land which Moses would see from the mountain top but never enter.

We do not know what happened to the Israelites for many of their years of wandering. We are told vividly about the start of their travels and also the end of them.

In his talk to his people after their many years of wandering, and near the end of his life, Moses reminded them that the Lord had said now was the time for them to set foot on the land He was giving them.

Moses Wearies of Strife

Moses reminded them that he had grown weary of their burdens and strife and had asked the Lord what to do. The Lord had told him to take wise men of the various tribes and let them share the burden. He did so and commanded the people to obey the judgments which these wisemen gave because they came from the Lord.

"And I said unto you, Ye are come unto the mountain of the Amorites—which the Lord God doth give unto us.

"Behold the Lord thy God hath set the land before thee: go up and possess it, as the Lord God of thy fathers hath said unto thee; fear not, neither be discouraged."

The Israelites asked Moses to send men into the land to see what it was like and to report to them. Moses was glad to do so, and chose 12 men, one from each tribe, and sent them to spy out the land. The men brought back fruits of the land and reported, "It is a good land which the Lord our God doth give us."

But the people grumbled in their tents and said the Lord hated them or He would not have brought them from Egypt to deliver them to the Amorites who were a tall and great people, much bigger than the Israelites, and their cities had high walls. They had no faith in God who had safely led them all these years, and the Lord grew angry with them and with Moses.

Lord Directs Their Way

The Lord directed every step of their way, telling them the lands they should pass through and what should be their conduct while they were there. The land of the children of Esau, for instance, they should pass through discreetly for the people would be afraid of them, but they might buy meat and water of them.

They were commanded to pass over the "brook Zered," and they did. The Moabites were not to be disturbed for the Lord had given that land to the children of Lot. But "behold I have given unto thine hand Sihon, the Amorite, king of Heshbon, and his land: begin to possess it and contend with him in battle." They took that land and also the land of the giant, Og, king of Bashan. They took all the cities and killed all the people, but took the cattle with them. The 11th verse of the third chapter of Deuteronomy tells about this huge man whose "bedstead was of iron—nine cubits was the length thereof, and four cubits the breadth of it, after the cubit of a man." Scholars dispute the iron of the bed, saying it may have been of stone. The land thus conquered with divided up among the tribes of Israel.

Moses commanded Joshua at this time, saying, "Thine eyes have seen all that the Lord your God hath done unto these two kings: so shall the Lord do unto all the kingdoms whither thou passest. Ye shall not fear them; for the Lord your God He shall fight for you."

Then Moses pleaded with the Lord to let him go over into the land of Jordan, but the Lord said: "Get thee up into the top of Pisgah, and lift up thine eyes westward, and northward, and southward, and eastward and behold it with thine eyes: for thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

"But charge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him: for he shall go over before this people, and he shall cause them to inherit the land which thou shalt see."

In the last chapter of Deuteronomy we are told that "Moses the servant of the Lord died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord.

"And He buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Bethpeor: but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day."

Preparations for the Christ

By E. R. JAMES

When the fulness of time was come God sent forth his Son.
Gal 4; 4.

"When the fulness of time was come" is a quaint, Old English expression, full of the flavour of the scholarship of the days of the Reformation. The modern soldier: "When the Zero hour was come". This naturally implies preparation. God spent centuries in preparing for the revelation of His Son Jesus Christ, born of the Virgin Mother, made under the law. Briefly we shall review that preparation through His servants, the prophets of Jehovah.

The popular idea of a prophet is one who foretells the future. This was but a small part of his work. If his work had only been of that of foretelling he would not have entered into such bitter antagonism with the ecclesiastical authorities of his day. The great and lasting work of every true prophet is to tell forth the mind of God to his generation and to us.

Up to the time of Amos, the herdman of Tekoah and possibly even later Jehovah was looked upon as a tribal and national God, the God of the Hebrews. Through Amos was revealed the truth that Jehovah was a righteous God and expected His worshippers to deal righteously with one another—"to be just and upright in all their dealings."

To Hoseah through his family tragedy was revealed the great Evangelical truth that Jehovah loves His people and that God is Love. Both Amos and Hosea will be re-studied by thoughtful Christians in the settlements after the war.

Isaiah taught that Jehovah is a holy God, pure and moral in character and hated impurity. It was a new thought that holiness meant purity and not separation as it was popularly understood.

Through Jeremiah's personal sufferings and his close communion with Jehovah there was revealed to him the tremendous truth that Jehovah would speak to the individual. "I will put my laws in their inward parts and write it in their hearts" saith the Lord. Jeremiah was the first to teach the new and all important truth that the individual was precious in God's sight.

Ezekiel was an exile in the land of Babylon. The Babylonian King carried away the people into exile in order that he might separate them from their God, the God of the Hebrews, Who only had power in His own land, which was the popular opinion. It requires but little imagination to realize the profound impression made upon the mind of Ezekiel and his generation of thoughtful men that Jehovah was willing and able to speak to them in that far away land of exile—that Jehovah is indeed the living God: "Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel". Ezek. 37; 12.

Thus slowly, line upon line, precept upon precept; here a little and there a little, according as they were able to bear it, Jehovah revealed Himself to the Jewish people that He is indeed the living God, Almightly and the Creator of all mankind.

Perhaps the greatest blessing of the Exile was that the Jewish scholars in Babylon gathered together the various stories, songs and manuscripts of their nation. They put these into writing and thus began the Book. After the return from Exile the Jews never fell into idolatry, the worshipping of images and false gods. They became the "People of the Book". Their gravest and constant peril was the sin of Bibliolatry—the worship of the Bible. Perhaps we do not need to go so far back to find a similar peril.

The Jews divided the Book of the Old Testament into three parts; the Law; the prophets and the Sacred Writings. In other words they did not look upon all the Old Testament as of equal value—a very important truth. The Sacred Writings contained the Psalms, Job, Proverbs, Ecclesiates, the Book of Daniel and other Scriptures. It might startle you to know that the rabinnical scholars did not look upon Daniel as a major prophet. The Canon of the Old Testament was closed about 90 A.D., 20 years after the fall of Jerusalem.

Thus the Old Testament Scriptures have come down to us containing the fundamental truth that Jehovah is the One Living God. The Unity of the Godhead is the great outstanding truth of the Old Testament.

Hear, O Israel, the Lord thy God is one Lord and Him only shalt thou worship.

MISS LAURA PELTON

REV. EDWARD H. JOHNSON

Special Services Planned For St. Paul's On Sunday

Special services are to be held in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church on Sunday with two of the leaders of the church present, Rev. Edward H. Johnson and Miss Laura Pelton. Mr. Johnson has been appointed by the General Board of Missions to the work of missionary education throughout the church. He is a native of Westmount, Quebec and left a science career to become a missionary being a gold medallist in mathematics and physics in McGill University in 1930. He studied theology at Princeton and Edinburgh.

Mr. Johnson knows the Far East, having spent six years in North China and Manchuria, and is fully aware of the problems of church work under Japanese control. He is a keen student of Far Eastern Affairs and hopes to return to China.

Miss Pelton has been in the Women's Missionary Society of the church since 1925, first as Field Secretary, then Young Women's Travelling Secretary and now General Secretary. One of Miss Pelton's chief interests has been the work among the younger members of the church. In the past year she has been attending some of the Young People's camps with Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Johnson is scheduled to speak at the morning service and both will be heard at the Sunday School in the afternoon. Miss Pelton will speak at the evening service. In the evening there will also be a male voice choir present.

On Monday evening a banquet is being held for the office bearers of the church and their wives when both Mr. Johnson and Miss Pelton will speak.

Abiding Values From Israel's History ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON By Alfred J. Buescher
Scripture—Deuteronomy 1-3, 11

Shortly before his death, "in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month," Moses spoke to the Children of Israel and reviewed their wanderings and the help the Lord had given them through all their troubles.

Moses reminded them how, at the end of their wanderings they saw the land the Lord had promised them, and the people asked Moses to choose men to go and explore the land and come back and report to them.

Moses reminded them how he had chosen 12 men to go and explore the promised land, and how the 12 had gone out and brought back the fruit of the land and told the people that it was a good land.

Even then, said Moses, the people rebelled against the commandment of the Lord and refused to enter the land, murmuring that the Lord hated them and intended them to be destroyed.

The Slave Mentality

In the current issue of Collier's there is an interesting article by Emil Ludwig called "How To Treat Defeated Germany". Mr. Ludwig's opinion deserves careful attention, for he is unusually well-versed in European history, he is an original thinker and writer, and he is a Swiss citizen who has studied modern Germany intensively for a period of 30 years. When Germany is beaten, he says, we must not make the mistake of treating her too leniently; we must treat her with an unbending, but just, severity.

It is an error of popular thinking to suppose that all peoples are brothers under the skin. On this continent particularly, where only a minority of the citizens have travelled abroad or have had any chance to meet and study foreign peoples, there is a tendency to suppose that the Germans are really just like ourselves, share our aspirations, and accept our ideas of good government and good life; early in the war it was said many times by people who knew no better that the Germans were good souls who had been led astray by wicked leaders; Germany was said to be "betrayed", and our war was said to be with Hitler and his gang, and not with the German people. It may not be out of place here to recall that the publisher of the Examiner denounced this latter error in the plainest terms. If we are to make a successful peace we must realize that the Germans are not like us; their thinking, their background and their concept of life are quite unlike our own. And when we realize this, we must not assume therefore that the Germans are our intellectual inferiors; morally inferior they may be, but intellectually they are among the foremost peoples of the world; we must not, therefore, attempt to impose upon them with any half-baked Pollyanna scheme for making the world a Utopia, for they will at once see through it and despise us for our stupidity.

Mr. Ludwig, in his article, deals in generalities about the German national character, and in this respect he may be said to be typically German himself. The concept of "national character" has to be treated with the utmost care, for it is deceptive; it is one of those metaphysical-psychological ideas which can easily degenerate into nonsense. When Mr. Ludwig describes the Germans as a race torn between dreams and a desire to impose upon other nations by ruthless force we can recognize the truth of what he says, but we would be unwise to push it too far. We have enough sentimentalism of our own to contend with, without adopting the German trick of ascribing a single cast of mind to a group of 75,000,000 people.

The greatest of Germans, Goethe, once said that his countrymen had a slave mentality, and he advised Napoleon to treat them with severity, for that was what they liked. Mr. Luuwig seems to have come to the same conclusion. When the war is over, he says, the Allies must beware of showing signs of friendliness, tolerance or indulgence toward the conquered. The Peace of Versailles, which the Germans have so often ranted against as a "slave treaty", was, according to Ludwig, too lenient, and was not carried out effectively. It is clear that nothing would be gained by reducing the German nation to beggary, and keeping them in that state after the war; the health of Europe demands a healthy Germany, both politically and economically. But Ludwig believes that a healthy Germany will be produced most rapidly by severe means. Armies of occupation must direct affairs for a long time; foreign soldiers must be seen in the German streets; there must be a show of force; orders must be given and obedience must be demanded; Germans must be confined within their own borders, their connection with other countries being strictly supervised; there must be censorship of the press, the movies, the stage, and of all public pronouncements by the Allies; Germany must be made to feel the might of her conquerors.

This means, in fact, that the Allies must play the German game, and we are not sure that they could do so successfully. British and American soldiers are not used to taking that bullying, repressive attitude toward those whom they have beaten. The Allies are not Prussians, and they would feel both unhappy and silly if they tried to play the Prussian role. But, Ludwig insists, they must do this if they are not to fight again in another twenty-five years. The Germans, he insists, learn only by suffering, and their conquerors must make them suffer.

The great task, in Ludwig's view, would be the re-education of Germany through her children. Carefully supervised teachers would have to bring them up in the ways of democracy, in order that they might learn how to rule themselves and how to live contentedly with their neighbours. It is here that we think that his thesis breaks down. If it is deep in the German character to domineer and tyrannize, would democratic teaching change the whole nation? After the last war the Germans had the Weimar Republic; they did not like it, and as soon as a demagogue arose to feed them on hate and lies they rallied to his swastika banner. No, if the Germans are as bad as Ludwig says, it will take more than classroom education to change them. What the solution to the problem may be, we cannot say, but we do not think that Mr. Ludwig has found it, interesting though his exposition is.

Sweeping Accusations

An unfortunate misunderstanding arose recently over the case of David Rush, who was reported to have been fined fifty dollars for giving his wife a lift in his truck while hauling farm produce; it was said that by so doing he broke Order 121 of the Prices Board. Many Ontario papers commented hotly on the injustice of this, and it certainly seemed to be a case of unreasonable tyranny.

But the case was very badly mangled in the newspaper report upon which most of the indignation was based, and Donald Gordon, the head of the W.P.T.B. sent a letter to the indignant papers explaining the true nature of the case. This letter appeared in the Examiner on Tuesday, September 21. It put matters in their true light, and it was assumed that the mistake had been corrected and the matter closed.

But in the current issue of Toronto's Saturday Night an editorial appears on this subject which begins: "It has become quite impossible to rely on the daily newspapers for any accurate account of proceedings in the courts and council chambers of this country". Surely that takes in more ground than the writer intended. Presumably he speaks thus severely of the Toronto newspapers, and if that is what he means, why does he not say so? As a Torontonian he might take the line that there are no other newspapers worth troubling about, but we don't think that such a line of argument would carry him far. Saturday Night calls itself "The Canadian Illustrated Weekly", and thus includes the whole Dominion in its urbane inspection. There are ninety-odd daily newspapers in this country, and we do not think that Saturday Night should flog all where three have offended.

Errors in reporting are regrettable, but they do happen and will continue to happen until some sort of ingenious robot takes the place of the human and fallible reporter. Sometimes errors in reporting lead to injustices, but men of long experience in the world of journalism agree that the errors are fewer than a section of the public would like to believe. Saturday Night is a newspaper too, of a specialized sort, and even the superiority bestowed by leisurely weekly production and fine coated paper does not ensue it completely against error. And if Saturday Night finds that it cannot rely on any Canadian paper for accurate reporting we pity its sad state of apprehension and dubiety.

NOTE AND COMMENT

In Russian prison camps a union of German officers has been formed. By Communist organizers, probably.

"Mussolini Suffering From Stomach Trouble" says a headline. Perhaps a chill has mounted from his feet.

German science, so ingenious in discovering substitutes, appears to have produced an ersatz Mussolini.

The war will end, we believe, when Hitler is really convinced that the course of history has been settled for the next thousand years.

An anthropologist tells us that prehistoric man was neither so round-shouldered nor so bow-legged as his modern descendants. But then, he didn't have our taxes.

Testament Of A Great European

By
SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

THE most deeply impressive, and certainly the most melancholy book to reach my desk is "The World Of Yesterday," the autobiography of Stefan Zweig, published in this country by Macmillans. Zweig was one of the great men of letters of his time, and a truly great European. Born and educated in Austria, his interests were not confined to his native land; all Europe was his province, and men of letters everywhere in Europe were his friends. Now we are all familiar with the faces of the men and women who belong to what is called "international society," for we see their pictures in the illustrated papers, enjoying themselves in Paris, in Berlin, in Rome—everywhere, indeed, where pleasure is to be found. And we have heard of "international financiers," whose interests extend to every European country, and who are reputed to owe allegiance to money, and to nothing else. But Zweig was neither a pleasure-seeker nor a financial juggler; he was truly international in spirit, anxious only to promote friendship among European men of letters.

HIS own position was unassailable. He never wrote on political subjects, and he never wrote a word about another nation which was calculated to stir up trouble. He deplored violent nationalist feeling, insisting that men of goodwill everywhere had bonds of interest far stronger than any accidental ties of homeland or birth. During the First Great War he maintained friendly relations with every writer among the Allied nations who would correspond with him, and he did what he could to quell the savage nationalism of the Central Powers. His success was small; who could hope to succeed in maintaining a feeling of brotherhood when millions were bent on fostering hate? But Zweig never compromised with his principles and his conscience. The mission of the man of letters, in his view, was to unite mankind and not to divide it; he never deserted this high ideal.

ALL during his life Zweig advised his friends to keep diaries and memoirs of their lives, not for publication, necessarily, but for the entertainment of their descendants. But he did not write an account of his own life until he was almost at the end of it; perhaps he had thought of suicide before he began work on his manuscript; whatever the genesis of "The World Of Yesterday," it is a book which leaves upon reader's mind an impression of deep sadness. Zweig's personal life was a triumph, in its way; no honour which a literary man may gain was withheld from his genius; but he lived in what he believed to be a world in decline, and that darkened his outlook, and robbed him of much pleasure in his own success. He was born in Vienna, of a wealthy Jewish family, at a time when the Austrian capital seemed the gayest, the most secure place in the whole world. European culture was shared by all European peoples without respect of nationalist feeling; Jews were looked upon as Austrians, or Frenchmen, or Belgians, without thought of their religious singularity; a man might travel over any frontier without a passport: it seemed an age when hatred and the folly of war had at last been banished from the minds of reasonable men. From this halcyon time Zweig saw Europe fall to what it is today, and was himself forced to quit the land in which he had gained the highest honours, a refugee, an alien and impoverished.

ZWEIG'S autobiography is no mere tale of woe. He grieves not for himself, but for mankind, for Europe, and the failure of fair hopes. He chose to live his life on a high plane, and he maintained his standards to the end. When the dark day came at last when he and his wife took their lives at Petropolis, in Brazil, he left a message in which there is no note of self-pity: "I salute all my friends! May it be granted to them yet to see the dawn after the long night! I, all too impatient, have gone before." And so, on February 23, 1942, died one of the master-spirits of this age, like a Roman.

WE who remain in the world cannot permit ourselves to share Zweig's gloomy view; the world has been convulsed before, and it has returned to peace at last. We may not see the great days that Zweig has known again in our time, but we must do the best we can. His strong belief that we live in a world of decline is sometimes irksome. But although the book is solemn in tone it is a fine revelation of a great spirit, and it contains some passages of magnificent writing. What relief to read a book written by a truly literate and cultivated man, fully capable of assessing and explaining his innermost thoughts! In the last chapter there is an account of the last days of Sigmund Freud which will never fade from the memory of anyone who has read it. Freud and Zweig, who had known Vienna at its best, met in exile, and the younger man drew new courage from the calm and unshakeable integrity of the older one, so near to death.... "The World Of Yesterday" is a book which is of the highest interest now, but its interest and its influence will grow as the years pass; a spirit like that of Stefan Zweig does not fade after death, but waxes in power.

A Bible Message

Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God. (Ps. 42: 11.)

O bless our God, ye people and make the voice of his praise to be heard: which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved. (Ps. 66: 8, 9.)

God be merciful unto us, and bless us; and cause his face to shine upon us; Selah, That thy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all nations. (Ps. 67 1, 2.)

Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did. For unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed.

And there was great joy in that city. (Acts 8: 5-8.)

"GARAND" OPERA

Capital Closeups

(By JAMES McCOOK, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

OTTAWA, Sept. 25 (CP)—Members of Parliament on the war expenditures committee are able to focus a formidable eye of experience on where the money goes.

The committee, stablished in 1941, has the job of looking into outlays for war purposes to see that the Canadian taxpayer gets fair value for his money and that waste is avoided. No member professes to be an authority on modern warfare or high accountancy, but there's lots of assorted knowledge among them.

For instance, there's "Tip" O'Neill (Lib. Kamloops), who drives fast railway engines in what has been called the "toughest railroadin' country in the world," mountainous British Columbia. And there's Bill Golding (Lib. Huron-Perth) who is a machinist and worked in a shell plant in the first Great War and Hughes Cleaver (Lib. Halton), the committee chairman, who was with a tank regiment in the last war.

Karl Homuth (Prog. Con. Waterloo South) is a manufacturer of wool stocks, and R. W. Gladstone (Lib. Wellington South) is a former manufacturer with his headquarters at Guelph, Ont.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, is a former Saskatchewan school teacher who has made a study of economic and financial matters in addition to leading his party, while New Democracy Leader Blackmore teaches school in Alberta when he can spare time from his duties.

H. R. Jackman (Prog. Con. Toronto Rosedale), a Toronto business man, once was a special lecturer in investment banking at the University of Toronto extension.

A monumental work of 900 pages is the third edition of Beauchesne's parliamentary rules and forms published here recently. Prepared for the use of members of parliament, it was written by Dr. Arthur Beauchesne, C.M.G., clerk of the House of Commons.

Beauchesne's rules are cited scores of times during a House session, and they are something like a judgment of the Privy Council, with an air of absolute finality. And, as the speaker reads the ruling, members of parliament scan their own copies of the rules just to see he follows, the phrasing word for word.

Shortage:—

Half a million volumes in the parliamentary library just groan when they hear talk of a wartime housing shortage. They have been in cramped quarters for 40 years—for at the beginning of the century, the librarian's report said that additional space was urgently needed.

Doorways have been narrowed, books are placed on shelves often two and sometimes three deep, the ornamental grills are filled and volumes are everywhere but in the lap of the statue of Queen Victoria.

There's talk of a national library when the war is over, and this would relieve the strain on the 70-year-old library behind the parliament buildings.

Poor King George

(By ERWIN D. CANHAM, in The Christian Science Monitor)

NOW that former isolationists are denying that there ever was any such thing as isolationism, it is mportant to detect and understand their new battle cry. The principal propaganda weapon of those who have always sought to keep the United States outside the comity of nations is today an all-out attack on our two chief allies, beginning with Britain and extending to Russia.

Harsh words about Britain are nothing new to citizens of, says, Chicago. One of their remarkable mayors (all of them seem to be remarkable in one way or another) once proclaimed a design on the part of King George V. which seemed to him to be a plan for the annexation of Chicago. At any rate, this Mayor's chief electoral cry for several years was the ringing, though indelicate, announcement that he would kick King George out of Chicago.

The best the present-day erstwhile isolationists can do is to revive this cry. In Chicago for four days this month, we were edified to find editorials in the redoubtable Tribune every day attacking the British in one way or another. It is, of course, always open season on redcoats in the United States, and twisting the lion's tail is our earliest and surest-fire method of patriotic oratory. But it is generally a confession of propaganda bankruptcy. When all else has failed, you take it out on the British, but it means that you are fighting a rear-guard action, or are just marking time until better arguments come.

MOREOVER, the recent attacks are principally directed against our old friend, the British aristocrat. As if the taxes and the bombing and Sir William Beveridge and Labor governments hadn't already done their work on the British aristocrat. No; the editorials we read were purest 1840, Lord Dundreary was the typical Englishman, and nothing was changed in the world.

Somehow, we think General Eisenhower—who comes from Kansas—understands the British better than some midwestern editors. At any rate, he seems to be getting magnificent results by combining forces with them, and working out joint operations in a way prewar observers would have declared to be entirely impossible. It is a united army on the beach at Salerno, and it is too bad there cannot be a united opinion on the home front.

The late isolationists' attacks on Russia are nowadays more gingerly. It used to be open season on the Reds, too, but not any longer. So great is popular American admiration for the achievements of the Soviet Union in this war that efforts to divide us from this ally have to be covert and disguised. Some publications, as in clerical circles, still make frontal attacks. You can still find open blasts at Russia in the more extreme and traditionally isolationist organs. But even some of these have been forced into caution. For the ordinary American is beginning to feel that there is something in common between his struggles to master this continent and the Russian efforts in their continental State. Even the isolationists recognize some kindred leaning toward isolationism on the remote plains of Russia.

THESE shafts of political warfare will undoubtedly get thicker and nastier as the military situation improves. It is pretty late for Dr. Goebbels himself to drive this wedge between his enemies. But he has been hammering in the same direction for a long time, and he has found unwitting but effective allies. His weapons are now in domestic American hands—in the hands of those who seek to frighten Americans away from all forms of international co-operation by playing on their old prejudices and emotions. As the time for postwar adjustment approaches, as occupied territories are won back, jealousies and rivalries will come nearer the surface. But now, as we turn the corner for victory, is not the time to undermine our advantages by mistrusting our allies.

Whether the United States will favour, or will have to be content with, a military alliance with Britain remains to be seen. Certainly such an alliance is as incomplete method of assuring peace. It involves special responsibilities which an organization for collective security would avoid. But the way to prevent a military alliance commitment is not to sneer at the British, it is to help along the road toward broader and surer guarantees of world justice.

ABOUT THE ELEPHANTS

Apropos the eternal Polish problem—which he discusses in his book, "The New Europe"—Bernard Newman tells the story, which he credits to Paderewski, of the professor at a cosmopolitan university who set his class to writing a thesis on the general subject of "The Elephant." The Englishman produced an essay on "The Elephant and how to hunt him." The Frenchman submitted a sparkling disquisition on "The Love Life of the Elephant." The German considered "The Gastronomical Possibilities of the Elephant." The Russian, after smoking several hundred cigarets, produced the startling caption: "The Elephant—does it exist?" And the Pole headed his thesis: "The Elephant and the Polish Question."

MILLBROOK

Village Flier Earns Coveted D.F.C.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 25— (ENS) —PO. Geoffrey B. Whyte, R.C.A.F., only son of the late Dr. Bruce Whyte, of Battle Creek, Michigan, and whose mother was formerly Gertrude Wood, younger daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Wood, of Millbrook, was one of 33 members of the R.C.A.F. decorated for bomber feats according to announcement from Air Force Headquarters at Ottawa on Tuesday.

PO. White was one of 27 who received the Distinguished Flying Cross, the citation accompanying his decoration with the medal statnig: "This rear gunner has successfully participated in many missions against the enemy, and has always displayed marked enthusiasm for operation, remaining undaunted by heavy opposition. His coolness and courage over the most dangerous targets has been an inpiration to all with whom he has worked."

Badly Damaged.

PO. Geofrey made his maiden flight as tail gunner on a Wellington bomber over the Ruhr in June, 1942. This was a memorable occasion because his plane was extensively damaged by anti-aircraft shells. Despite this the plane reached England and was safely landed in a barley field. At that time PO. Whyte held the rank of sergeant; in all, to date, he has made at least thirty flights and has come through without any serious injury.

Following his graduation from the Central High school at Battle Creek, Michigan, in 1935, PO. Whyte, who was born at Port Hope, Ontario, worked the next year in the production of Curtiss-Wright airplanes in California, and later went to the Fairchild plant at Montreal, enlisting in the R.C.A.F. in September, 1940. He is now 25 years of age, and went overseas in July, 1941.

Father Dies.

His father, Dr. B. C. Whyte, who was roentgenologist at the Community hospital, Battle Creek, died last August after an extended illness, and owing to his military duties, his son was unable to attend the funeral.

His mother, and an only sister, Nancy Whyte, who holds a responsible secretarial position at Ann Arbor, complete the family circle, and are still resident in Michigan. PO Whyte is a nephew of Mrs. J. R. Eakins and of Miss Margaret Wood, of Millbrook.

MIXED GEOGRAPHY.

Canadian Helps Get U.S. Fulbright Bill Passed

The Fulbright bill for American participation in "appropriate international machinery" to prevent future wars, was passed in Washington, D.C., by the House of Representatives with an overwhelming margin. This photo shows the sponsor, Rep. J. W. Fulbright (D) of Arkansas being congratulated by his colleagues, Rep. Sol Bloom (D.) of New York (LEFT) and Rep. Charles A. Eaton (R.) of New Jersey (RIGHT). Rep. Eaton is a Canadian born in the Maritimes, who also lived in Ontario. His appeal to the House is said to have had much to do with passing the bill.

Plane Explodes Seconds After Pilot Bails Out

TORONTO, Sept. 25— The only test pilot around Toronto who has bailed out of a flaming aircraft is Gerry Wooll of Peterborough, a flight lieutenant in the Royal Air Force before he was loaned to de Havilland's Mosquito bomber factory.

This came about some months ago when a Mosquito caught fire near here and precipitated Mr. Wooll's hasty departure from the cockpit. Somehow the story circulated that Mr. Wooll was about to jump when he remembered that he had forgotten to pick up his priceless polaroid spectacles and, the pince-nez market being what it is these days, Mr. Wooll decided to return to the cockpit for them.

Which he did with commendable aplomb, then jumped into space. Six seconds later the Mosquito exploded.

"That was rather remarkable timing," Mr. Wooll is reported to have remarked as he drifted lazily toward earth, but, like so many hair-raising myths about test pilots, this myth turned out to be a myth, too.

Deny Glamor In It

Frank Baillee, test flight manager at de Havilland, laughed uproariously when this tale was recounted. "It is a grand story," he agreed, but in the interest of truth I'm afraid I must tell you that Wooll likely got out of there without stopping to look for his glasses."

Any Toronto test pilot protests violently that there is anything glamorous in his trade. Danger has never occurred to him either and the case of the exploding Mosquito is the only one on record since de Havilland started turning out Mosquito bombers and Victory Aircraft heavy Lancasters.

The test pilot's job, he will tell you, is to "iron out" kinks in aircraft after they leave the assembly line so that they are ready for action when they're turned over to the R. C. A. F. Ferry Command.

He will tell you, too, that the two prime requisites in his trade are steadiness and experience. Experience particularly, because when a flaw appears at 15,000 feet almost any experienced pilot knows what to do to get the plane down safely.

Flew Northern Caviar.

Frank Baillee, as a matter of fact, has a much more glamorous past. Some years ago he founded a fishing company at Fort Hope on the Albany River. Here were gathered sturgeon and caviar and it was Baillee's job to fly the valuable fish to Nakina, 145 miles south, for shipment to New York. And, though he flew caviar, Pilot Baillee "lost his shirt."

"We shipped 15,000 pounds of sturgeon and 1,000 pounds of caviar and the market was limitless," he explained. "But the season was too short. June was a close month for fishing, by law. The ice came in October."

Chief Test Pilot Jim Follett of Toronto confesses he never saw a ship as fleet as the Mosquito.

"I was taking one to Washington this summer," he said. "I flew from here to New York's Floyd Bennet Field in 55 minutes.'

The plane's unique design is so fine that Mosquito test pilots have not experienced the difficulties other high-speed type operators have encountered, he stated.

Robbers Break Police Cordon

TORONTO, Sept. 25 — (CP) — The large-scale manhunt by Ontario Provincial Police for three men suspected of robbing the Fergus Creamery of a safe containing $1,000 in cash centred about Toronto to-day after a truck stolen from Brampton was discovered on an east-end street here.

Both Provincial and County Police believe the men have broken through a cordon thrown around the country near Georgetown, Wednesday, where the trio was thought to be hiding. Search, however, is continuing in the area.

One of the men is believed to have been wounded by Brampton police bullets after officers from that city fired at a fleeing car early Thursday. The vehicle later was found near Brampton. The safe from the Fergus Creamery was in the rear of the car but the money had been taken from it.

A check-up revealed the auto was stolen from the Toronto University campus earlier in the week.

Brampton police said three men fled from a car which careened into a ditch after an officer had sent a bullet into one of the rear tires. They had tried to intercept the auto.

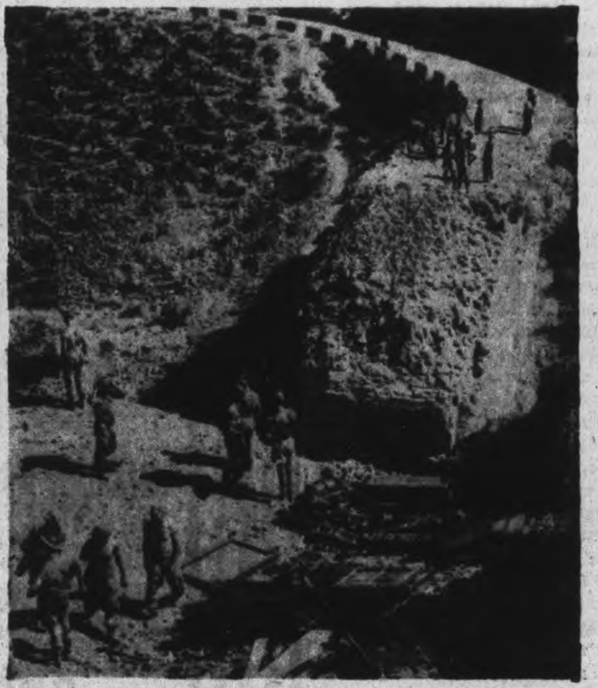
The trail led from Brampton to Norval and the swamp lands north of that town.

Bucket Brigade Saves Village From Burning

EMBRUN, Ont., Sept. 25 (CP) — Fire which threatened to raze this Osgoode Township village 25 miles east of Ottawa last night was checked with fire fighting equipment from nearby Russell after it had destroyed two houses and damaged a third, causing loss estimated at $4,000.

The blaze, starting when a brush fire spread to a shed at the rear of a Main St. home owned by G. Burelle, gutted the house and swept through an adjoining home owned by Theophile Dignard. Russell firemen and a volunteer bucket brigade were able to save the house occupied by A. Labine.

Canadians Rebuild Italy Bridge



It was no surprise to Canadians advancing through the toe of Italy when they encountered demolition like this. Retreating Germans preferred shadow-fighting and obstructionist tactics rather than pitched battles. Canadian engineers rebuilt the bridge in less than five hours.

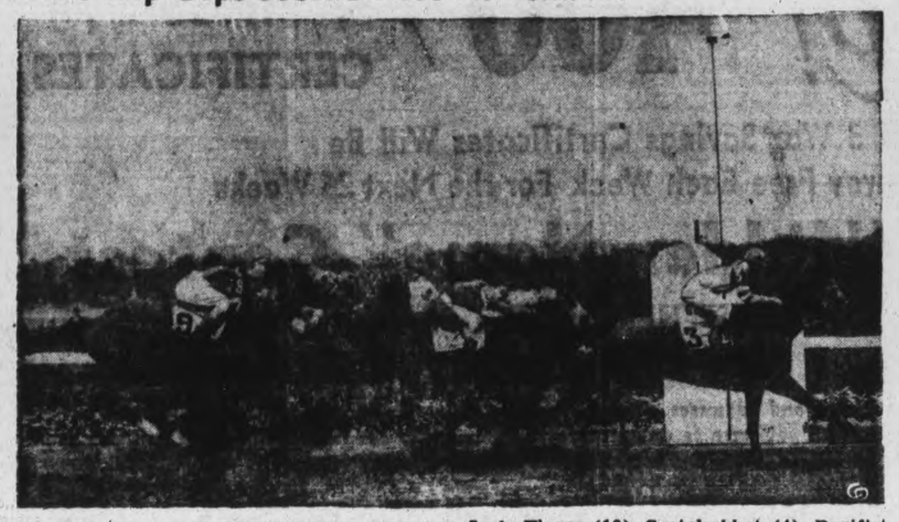
Bottle Imp Cops Second Race At Belmont



Coming into the finish of the second race at Belmont Park, New York, on opening days, are: Bottle Imp (3), Baying (14), Lady Flares (10), Scotchabbot (4), Pacifist (9). They finished in that order. The winner, with Jockey Westrope in the saddle, paid a juicy $13.10.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Those who like their wrestling rough—and that seems to be most of the fans—are going to get a banquet of their favorite fare Monday night. Promoter Frank Tunney has included no fewer than three bad men in the weekly card. With Rowdy Dick Hogan, Al Bunny Dunlop and Doc Coathanger Felice all on the one bill it looks as if the folk sitting in the front seats will not rate as good insurance risks. Much of the action is liable to take place outside the ring with those babies tossing their opponents through, over or under the ropes at every opportunity. Hogan gets the main bout billing with his return match with Gentleman Jack Clayborne and that tussle promises to be a wow but the Housepainter will have to hit a new peak in rough behavior to keep pace with Dunlop and Felice. A newcomer to local wrestling in the person of Al Christie meets Dunlop in the semi-final and there will be a general hope that Mister Christie will explode a depth-charge or two in the path of the Toronto strongman who has been riding roughshod over his opponents here ever since the wrestling game was revived in Peterborough. Dunlop is rough, tough and nasty and Christie had better come prepared for trouble. And if Hogan and Dunlop weren't enough in the way of villainy Tunney has added that Yugo Slav roughneck Doc Felice to the bill, matching him with the popular Joe Maich in the curtain-raiser. That means that the program will get away on a rowdy note and stay at that level all night. It is the most turbulent card that has been offered all season.

With sixteen teams lined up, the largest list of competitors in the history of the organization the Men's City Bowling League looks to be for its banner season. With the prospects of Peterborough having no hockey, bowling promises to be the winter's major sport and the various teams in the City loop are decidedly enthusiastic. Many of them have their organization complete and they are anxiously awaiting the opening which takes place on October 7. It is generally admitted that Fred Martin's team which will likely bowl under Jay's name again this season will be the team to beat. They have taken first place so often that other outfits admit that it will take a decidedly strong outfit to have a chance to head them off. The Martin outfit intend to carry on with only five players this season but every player is a high scorer. There is no weak spot in the lineup consisting of Bud Weese, Jack Playford, Tommy Miller, Bill Martin and Fred Martin. Incidentally Miller, Weese and Playford used to be softball teammates with the Sugar Bowl when that strong team were cocks of the walk. Martin's team however hasn't got all the talent roped, of course. There are plenty of crack bowlers in the other teams of the league including such veterans as Chief Gimblett, Nels Routley, M. J. Duffus, Joe Marsden, Tom Curvin, George Dodson and Jim Cullen and such high-class rollers as Doug. Abraham, the Anthony brothers, Fred Scates, Roy Lewis, Al. Heckman, Bert McCarroll and many others good enough for any man's team. The loop is under the presidency of Harold Freeman this season.

As Chick Saw It

Chick Appel, sports editor of the Stratford Beacon-Herald has the following to say about the Westclox-Kroehlers game in Stratford the other night: "While Kroehlers won the verdict they had little margin on the visitors, and almost lost in the eighth frame when Westclox connected for three singles and worked Hazel Baynton for a walk, and still did not score, due mainly to their own dumb base-running. Westclox proved themselves a strong defensive team, committing but one error and that one a foul ball that Marg Hawthorne got her hands on and then dropped, but outside of that lapse they handled everything that came their way. The surprising feature of the game was that Jean Castle, covering first for Peterborough, had but one putout and no assists, indicating that the Stratford batters were either popping them up, or striking out a lot, and in the latter respect ten of them went down on strikes as compared with but three whiffed by Hazel Baynton. Isobel Bullock did not display any speed but she had a spin on the ball, which bothered the Stratford batters plenty, with the result that eleven of them went down on pops to the infield. If Stratford Kroehlers hope to capture the series from Peterborough on Saturday they will have to strut their best wares, because the Westclox girls know what it is all about, although they displayed some bonehead base-running in the eighth frame, when they failed to score after collecting three singles and a walk."

Oshawa Colts were billed to meet Toronto Invictus in the second game of their championship O.A.S.A. intermediate "A" series at Oshawa this afternoon and on the eve of the battle George Soup Campbell admits that the veteran Queen City club is the strongest the Colts have met in the last two seasons. Here are his views in the Oshawa sport column: "Speaking for ourselves again—we'd like to say right now that while it is naturally easy to be "good sports" when winning with such ease as Invictus disposed of Owen Sound, it's only fair to point out that "Long Jawn" Sinclair and his mates displayed fine sportsmanship on Tuesday night in Toronto, even in the face of a last-minute defeat. Sinclair, "Flash" Hollett of Boston Bruins' hockey fame, Glatt, Cruckshanks, Seedhouse, they are all seasoned ball players, most of them in the "veteran" class just as are most of the Oshawa Colts. Oshawa softball fans can look forward to a thriller-diller game on Saturday afternoon. It's our conservative opinion that the Invictus A.C. team is a better team than Oshawa Colts have ever met before—either this season or last year along the championship trail. They have plenty of class, dangerous hitters but they stand out with their defensive play and superb pitching. Sinclair was hit hard by the Colts but perhaps the Colts couldn't do it again. We're ready to admit that two or three of Oshawa's infield hits were of the scratchy and flukey variety. Sinclair has blazing speed and he seldom "wastes" a pitch. If he throws two straight strikes, he tries for a strikeout on the next pitch with a strike—not a pitch-out. He has a change-of-pace ball, which is actually his drop and it's a good one but he has to throw the ball slightly slower in order to get the drop to work."

That Hall Of Fame

Kingston is going right ahead with the Hockey Hall of Fame project according to Scribe Bill Walshe who tells about it as follows in the Whig-Standard: "Kingston has been awarded the Hockey Hall of Fame but should take immediate steps to cement the honor to a solid foundation, considering the complaints that have been voiced from different parts of the country. Even Sudbury has added a belated claim to the puck shrine for no good reason at all, if remarks by Harry Eisen, sports editor of the Sudbury Star, are the only facts to support recognition. Kingston will go ahead with plans for the building of a memorial and establishing a temporary home for the present. A meeting will be held Friday when all interested in the project will be welcome to attend and offer their services in the promotion work. Following a suggestion by Mayor A. Stewart, M.L.A., that "the Fair Grounds be used for the Hall of Fame and also a big civic sports centre" the Cricket Field has been proposed for the same purpose with the Ontario Government building, near the Court House, as a site for the Hall of Fame. The Cricket Field would be an ideal and convenient location for an arena and baseball field. There was a time when the Cricket Field was enclosed by a fence with a club house for cricket. A sports centre at the Cricket Field would be in a down-town section, would leave plenty of space for the park and would not spoil the district."

The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 — (AP)— Votes for G. I.'s: Yeoman Neale Patrick of the navy isn't quite satisfied with the method of picking those all star baseball teams that will tour the Pacific outposts .... The boys over there, he figures, might have some favorites that they'd rather see than the top stars ....So why not let the service men here select the players theyd like to see if they were on the other side? .... The main trouble, as Neale likely would realize if he'd think back to his sports editing days, is lack of time to organize such a poll .... But it might be worth considering another year.

You pick 'em.

Spud Chandler, Yankees— Leading pitcher of the American League with 19 games won and four lost ....Never pitched a bad World Series game but never won one, either.

Mort Cooper, Cardinals— Mort has been belted off the hill every time he has faced American League batting in World Series or All-Star games so there's been talk that he might not pitch the opening game.... He's earned the top spot this season by winning 21 games and losing only eight.

Offensive to everybody.

Sgt. Don Galbreath, former Oregon State tackle who is coach of the Salt Lake Army Air Base "Wings," has created a new offensive formation that ought to give the oppostion a lot of trouble .... He stations two backs as close as possible to the centre, one on each side, then posts the other pair about four paces behind these two ....It's plenty deceptive" Galbreath says. "In fact some of my own boys get tangled up running it."

LAWN BOWLING

Notwithstanding the fact that it was pretty cool for lawn bowling it was a fair crowd that came out on Friday evening to enjoy the mixed tournament. This is the one that was postponed from last Friday.

A new system of drawing up the rinks was used and, for the first time, it seemed to work pretty well. It would not be fair to judge this system, yet, we would like to see it tried out again under more favorable circumstances.

Each player is given a card to keep their scores of the three eight games and at the finish the players with the greatest total scores receive the prizes.

We understand that the prizes were donated by Judge S. Smoke, R. F. Downey and J. D. Fitzpatrick.

We feel sure that we are voicing the sentiments of the players, when we say: "Thank you, gentlemen; thank you very much."

Winners

Carton of groceries: Mrs. W. Hepburn, H. Wilson; chicken: Mrs. A. Archibald, G. Gimblett, R. Burns, R. Payne, H. Maudall, A. Aikenhead, M. Pringle.

On Monday night the finals in the club singles and of the novice competitions will be played.

Here and There in Sport

By The Canadian Press

In a night-before-the-battle communique, Coach Dave Sprague of the Ottawa Combines announced that Halfback Tommy Daley and Lineman Leo Seguin, both veterans of the former Rough Riders, had been signed up for the current campaign. Previously Daley and Sequin had beeen barred because of a civic ruling that the police and fire departments needed the services of their footballers for routine duty. Sprague declared the two huskies would hardly be used in today's fixture against R.C.A.F. Hurricanes at the capital but would be tuned up for use against Toronto Navy Oct. 2.

Wins $2,500

Recently purchased by E. J. Baker of St. Charles, Ill., for a reported $20,000, King's counsel yesterday won the $2,500 three-year-old feature on the final Grand Circuit card at Delaware, O. His 2:02½ was the fastest mil of the meeting.

A sextette of players, including four twirlers have been purchased by the Cleveland Indians from the Wilkes Barre Club, it was announced last night, the recruits to report next Spring providing they have not been called up for military service.

Buffalo Bisons of the International League yesterday acquired a schoolboy in the signing of Kenety Humphrey, southpaw outfielder of a Detroit suburban high school, the deal being made by Detroit Tigers, the parent club.

Milwaukee Brewers, pennant winners of the American Association, were eliminated from the post-season play-offs last night at Columbus when the Red Birds whitewashed the Bottlers 7-0, taking the semi-final round three games to one and qualifying to meet the survivor of the Toledo-Indianapolis series.

A War Casualty

The annual softball tournament among teams of Welland, Port Colborne, Niagara Falls and Fort Erie for the Niagara Frontier title last night appeared to have become a war casualty, according to President Cliff MacGillivray of the Niagara Falls Industrial Softball League.

Seattle turned on the San Francisco Seals last night to even the game count at one each with a 2-0 victory in which Pitcher Demoran allowed the losers only two hits. Seattle scored one run in the fifth and again in the sixth to earn the verdict.

Three Are Tied

Among 95 leading golfers of Ontario and Quebec, Phil Farley of Toronto Scarboro, J. G. Boeckh of Toronto York Downs and E. Rivard of Montreal emerged with 76's yesterday in the opening 18-hole round of the 12th annual invitation tourney at the Seigniory Club. W. J. Wood of St. Catharines had a 79 for fourth place.

Lee Peters, owned by W. Hillock, Toronto, turned up as the winner in the classified race on yesterday's harness card at the Belleville Fair, taking three straight heats over Grattan Iroquois, of the J. Thomas stable, Colborne.

Notre Dame's football squad, bolstered by Navy cadets, makes its 1943 debut today against Pittsburg at Pitt Stadium which is expected to hold an assemblage of 65,000 fans. The Pennsylvania-Princeton fray is also expected to be a drawing card.

She's Good

Laura Stellmacher of Chicago, Ill., match game champion of her city in a tournament conducted by the Chicago Herald American, has bowled two 700 series already this season—206, 254, 251—710 on the opening of a ladies' league and 197, 287, 234 — 718 in a mixed doubles tounament across six alleys.

Three Leading Badmen Carded On One Bill

Both good and bad wrestling is slated for the Brock Arena mat on Monday night when Frank Tunney's weekly mat program goes into action. The main bout is the "Donnybrook" between Dick Hogan and Jack Clayborne. Hogan probably has the edge on the dusky athlete in the matter of strength and certainly is a long way in front of his Negro rival in the matter of back-alley technique. But Gentleman Jack also packs plenty of power and for sheer dynamic grappling style stands out over every wrestler who has appeared here with the probable exception of McCready and Whipper Watson. So while Hogan is getting in his badman stuff Clayborne will be putting in the good licks and from this distance we rather like the Black Bouncer's chances. With a possible match with John Katan looming up for the winner Hogan can be counted on to come up with some new diabolical tricks, but Clayborne with his eye on that long-sought match with Katan, is likely to fly as he never has before.

The Bunny Dunlop-Joe Christie semi-final also will provide its high moments if the six foot four inch Christie lives up to his advance notices. A combination boxer-wrestler who has won laurels in both sports, long Joe Christie is apparently just the opponent who may tame burly Bunny.

The irrespressible Tony Doc. Felice opens the proceedings against Joey Maich the Brantford Buzzer.

Minister Says Kingston Wrong

HALIFAX, Sept. 25—(CP)—The National Hockey League and the C.A.H.A. in choosing Kingston, Ont., as the site for Canada's Hockey Hall of Fame, "based their decisions on incomplete and inaccurate information," was the opinion expressed by Hon. Harold Connolly, minister of Industry and Information for Nova Scotia, in a telegram received yesterday by the Halifax Hockey Hall of Fame committee.

The minister, now in Montreal to investigate the matter, wired that he believed both hockey bodies "acted hastily" in their choice, and advsied the Halifax committee to protest the decision and file a brief in support of the Atlantic seaport's claim on the birth of hockey.

The committee at a meeting late yesterday decided to follow the minister's advice.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By ALAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 25 — (CP). — Two of Britain's standout footballers sat in a prison camp near Tunis and pondered over an outlook that appeared anything but rosy. It was a bit depressing, Ted Platt and Cyril Tooze agreed, to visualize playing soccer behind barbed wire.

But before the Axis could transport them elsewhere, the all-conquering Allies swept through the Tunis area and set them free. Now Ted and Cyril are back on the strength of the North African forces and enjoying their army soccer more than ever — because they don't see barbed wire fences when they look up from dribbling the ball.

Property of the crack Arsenal Gunners, both were captured during the final break-through of the Axis strongholds. Their families had heard they were missing, believed prisoners, and in a letter home Ted told the story.

Regular Arsenal goalkeeper in the first two wartime seasons, Ted said he and Cyril were taken prisoner at the same time and "you can imagine how we felt when our troops marched in and set us free."

Both Ted and Cyril, a youthful fullback, had assisted other clubs besides Arsenal in wartime football. They could do that under a ruling which permits a soccer-playing member of the forces to perform as a "guest" with the nearest club if he is stationed outside his own club's district.

For instance, Tooze took part in the Bruneval Commando raid last year—and a day later played soccer for Brighton.

Teddy Davison, Sheffield United football manager, looked up from his desk and saw a grinning, sunburned soldier. He took a quick second look and recognized Albert Cox, starry Sheffield fullback fresh from three years' service in the Middle East.

Home on a month's leave, Cox will play for United. He made several appearances for the British United Services team during his African term—mostly against the Egyptian Army elevens.

Perhaps it's a sign of the times; but anyway, the Government lads are allowing an increase in the crowd limit at an international football match. A maximum attendance of 80,000 can see England clash with Wales at the Wembley Stadium on September 25. That's an increase of 5,000 on the previous figure allowed for big-time matches there.

The rush for tickets, incidentally, is unprecedented.

Two famed soccer pros who have been under indefinite suspension can return to the game this season. The ban has been lifted. Charles Napier, Sheffield Wednesday and former Glasgow Celtic and Derby County forward, probably will line up for Falkirk. He got the gate for an offence committed while playing for Falkirk in 1941.

George Cummings, Aston Villa's Scottish international fullback, will be back with the Villa. He was suspended for an indefinite period last January.

Take Bowling

HANOVER— (CP)— Allan Nelson and Cornelius Bruder of Walkerton were the winners of the Russwurm trophy in the annual doubles lawn bowling tournament which drew an entry of 54 pairs, representing 21 clubs at scattered points. Ab. Johnston and Dave Willoughby of Chesley were second.

Series Tied

VANCOUVER, Sept. 25—(CP)— Vancouver Burards took a long first-half lead over New Westminster Salmonbellies last night and coasted to a 13-7 victory over the former Mann Cup holders to tie up the best of seven game inter-city box lacrosse finals at two games each. Next game will be played at New Westminster Monday night.

N. Y. YANKEES PIN HOPES ON SPUD CHANDLER TO CLINCH PENNANT

Trout's Hurling Holds Yanks To Five Hits

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Just to show that adages are not always true, opportunity knocks a second time at the door of the New York Yankees today.

The Bombers had a chance to clinch the American League championship yesterday and muffed it, but nothing was lost except a day and a ball game, because they have another crack at the same goal this afternoon.

Yesterday the Yanks were up against one of the best pitchers in the league, Paul (Dizzy) Trout, of Detroit Tigers. He beat them with five-hit pitching and his own home run in the eighth inning.

Charley (Dead-end) Wensloff pitched a good game yesterday, holding the Tigers scoreless for the first six innings and permitting only five hits in the eight frames he worked.

Washington Senators were idle and will be again today, leaving the field clear to the Yanks to clinch their 14th championship under their own power.

Both Overtime

Both the other games in the American League were tight and went into extra innings Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Athletics battled 16 innings to a 3-3 tie with neither team scoring after the sixth.

At Boston Joe Dobson and Ed Klieman, making his major league debut, staged a spectacular mound duel in which Dobson gave only two hits as the Red Sox beat Cleveland Indians 1-0 in 10 innings.

In the National League St. Louis Cardinals cracked Brooklyn Dodgers 5-1 with Lefty Max Lanier pitching seven-hit ball and Walker Cooper making four hits in a game for the third time in eight days.

The defeat dropped the Dodgers into third place as Cincinnati Reds nosed out New York Giants 5-4.

Chicago Cubs spotted the Phillies four runs in the first inning and then battled back to win 7-4 with a three-run rally in the last half of the fifth before weather halted play. Paul Derringer, appearing in relief, received credit for the 199th victory of his career.

Pittsburgh and Boston were idle.

Western Rugby Gets Underway

REGINA, Sept. 25—(CP)—Regina all-services Roughriders and Winnipeg R.C.A.F. Bombers pry the lid off the 1943 Western Canada rugby football season here today on the dusty gridiron of Park de Young.

It will be a revived version of Western pigskin competition as the original Western Interprovincial, Conference suspended operations last year after Regina and Vancouver withdrew teams.

Both Regina and Winnipeg have fielded fair aggregations for today's inaugural.

The Winnipeg team, under the expert eye of Coach Reg. Threlfall, left Winnipeg 25 players strong last night after tapering off their training Thursday night with a brief signal drill. Threlfall refused to predict victory for his charges, but said: "They'll show the all-service Roughriders plenty of power, and a pretty fair passing attack."

Dean Griffing and Al Ritchie, bosses of the Reginas, are just as confident their club will provide stern opposition for the Bombers and dispute reports that the Winnipeg line will ouptplay Regina. "We haven't any schoolboys in our line," they hint.

TORONTO, Sept. 25—(CP)—Lineup of National Hockey League training camps seems pretty well estabisihed. Aerial Football:

Five air force teams in Southern Alberta will play aerial football this fall—a variation of Canadian football. A "touch" is substituted for a tackle and a blocker is not allowed to leave his feet or knock an opponent to the ground. The teams will probably have eight players each. All players are eligible for forward or lateral passes. A team must declare its intention to kick and there is no blocking of kicks. A ball touching the ground is declared dead. Time of play is 40 minutes.

Third Play-off At Syracuse

SYRACUSE, Sept. 26 (CP)—With Burleigh Grimes, Toronto manager, putting off the naming of his starting pitcher until the last minute, it appeared likely that either Al Jarlett or Jim Hopper would do the hurling duties for the Leafs as they meet Syracuse Chiefs tonight in the third game of the International League Governor's Cup final series.

Facing the Toronto choice will be lefthanded Arnold Carter, whose record against the Leafs stands at three wins and two defeats. During the regular season he compiled a record of 14 victories and 12 losses.

Tonight's game will be the third in the final series. Each of the teams has won one.

Splitting of the first two games insured Syracuse of three games, the second tomorrow afternoon and third Monday night. If neither club wins three straight, which is necessary to clinch the cup here, the series will be resumed in Toronto.

R.C.A.F. Girls Work To Free Nazi-Held Homelands

Canada's fighting sons and daughters include many from countries still under the yoke of Nazism. As members of the Royal Canadian Air Force, the four shown here are doing their bit to aid both Canada and their native lands in the war against Hitler. Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and the war-torn Ukraine are represented in the quartette. LEFT to RIGHT, they are: Frances Cochan of Dryden, Ont., whose native village in Poland has been razed by the Germans; Jenny Ozipko of Holden, Alta., and Elizabeth Anne Oleschuk of Winnipeg Beach, Man., both born in the Ukraine of Austrian parents; and Anna Maszin of Toronto, who was born in Czecho-Slovakia. All four airwomen have relatives in Europe of whose fate nothing has been heard since the German war machine rolled into the occupied countries. (R.C.A.F. Photos)

Truckers Now Permitted To Take Passengers

OTTAWA, Sept. 25 — (CP) — Prices Board yesterday announced a new order clarifying what constitutes "wasteful and unnecessary use" of trucking equipment. The provisions of an order issued in April, 1942, prohibiting the use of trucks for transporting persons other than the driver and any assistants necessary to load or unload goods have been revoked, the Board said.

Under the new order, passengers may be carried in the cab of a truck only while the vehicle is being operated on a trip to transport goods. It is defined as "wasteful and unnecessary" to travel in a truck to and from "a place of recreation or entertainment, a sporting event, a picnic or a social gathering." The operation of a truck for pleasure also falls in the "wasteful" classification.

The order specifically exempts from the restrictions the use of trucks to carry persons to or from places of worship or a religious ceremony. Provision is also made for emergency uses and for the circumstances under which the operation of the vehicle takes place.

The Board's announcement said the broad classifications were written into the order "to give legal confirmation to the principles previously used by the service administration in carrying out the provisions of orders designed to conserve gasoline and to prolong the life of tires and automotive equipment."

Germans Claim 12 Destroyers

LONDON, Sept. 25 — (CP). — The Berlin radio claimed yesterday German submarines had made a surprise attack on a heavily escorted Allied convoy en route to America, sinking 12 destroyers and nine merchant ships totalling 46,50 tons.

The German broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, was unconfirmed by any Allied source, but it recalled Prime Minister Churchill's statement in the House of Commons on Tuesday that an Allied convoy was at that moment under attack.

Mr. Churchill made his statement in disclosing the Allies had not lost a single ship to enemy submarines in the North Atlantic in the four months ended September 18—a fact that later was confirmed unofficially by the German radio.

In addition to the vessels which the Germans reported yesterday yesterday they had sunk, they listed three destroyers as damaged and probably sunk and two other merchant vessels as hit.

Farmer Discovers Loss Of $250 In Church Honest Man Returns It Few Days Later

BOWMANVILLE, Sept. 25 — A couple of weeks ago Thomas Smith, one of the well-known Smith Bros. of Cartwright, was in Bowmanville Saturday night. The next morning when he felt in his pocket for his usual church collection he found his roll of bills amounting to nearly $250 was missing.

Having been to Cobourg the previous day he immediately made tracks for the county town, keeping a vigilant eye along the highway in search of the missing wad, but no success. On his homeward trip he called on Chief S. Venton to see if anyone had called at the police office with money, but again he was disappointed.

Back to town Tom came again Monday in search of his hard-earned cash, and this time Chief Venton told him the encouraging news that Albert E. Dudley, a Goodyear employee had found some money, but he didn't know how much. Away with his heart palpitating double beats and almost out of breath by the time he reached Odell street.

Right Amount

Yes, Mr. Dudley was home and he had found some money opposite Frank Cryderman's blacksmith shop, along the curb, while going to work in the morning How much did you lose Mr. Smith was asked. Well, as close as he could figure it was between $247 and $250. Well, said Mr. Dudley, I guess I found it and he produced the roll, greatly to Tom's satisfaction and relief. He gave him a liberal reward for his honesty in returning the money and said it that isn't enough you can have it all, for you found it. However, both men were satisfied and Tom now has more faith in the honesty of his fellowmen.

About a year ago Mr. Dudley found a pay envelope on the street belonging to a fellow Goodyear employee and quick returned it to its owner.

2,600 Employees On Strike Trains Tied Up

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 25— (AP) —A strike of 2,600 Pacific Electric Railway employees began at 5 a.m. e.d.t. to-day, despite conciliatory efforts of President Roosevelt.

Tie-up of the interurban lines trains and buses went into effect in an orderly manner. Ticket windows were closed, and depots were quiet.

Shortly after the strike began at 2 a.m. pickets bearing placards reading "P. E. Workers on Strike" began parading before the two downtown passenegr terminals.

Hours between 2 and 4 a.m. are normally slack, with only one or two buses and trains scheduled.

Armed guards were posted on all terminal stations, electric cars and buses, and cordons of police were deployed strategically to prevent violence as the line's 1,100-mile passenger-freight service connecting Los Angeles and 55 surrounding communities faced complete paralysis.

Final decision to proceed with the strike, arising from the workers' demands that their salary maximum be increased from 87 cents to $1 an hour, was ordered by the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen's Grievance Committee.

Third Jap Air Base Besieged

By OLEN CLEMENTS
Associated Press Staff Writer

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, The Southwest Pacific, Sept. 25 (AP) — Australian artillery pounded the Japanese to-day in the New Guinea coastal base of Finschhafen, arching shells over frontline patrols which have beaten down rapidly fading enemy resistance to reach the edge of an airfield two miles north of their objective.

The Japanese were thus confronted with the threatened loss of their third air base since Sept. 12 in an jungle sector where the enemy already has expended more than 12,000 men.

Today Allied Headquarters permitted release of the first details of the amphibious operation against Finschhafen, only 70 over-water miles southwest of New Britain, a key position of the Japanese.

Terrific Barrage

Australians began landing on a beach six miles north of Finschhafen at dawn Wednesday, six days after the fall of Lae and 10 days after the capture of Salamaua.

American warships bombarded enemy positions beyond the beachhead. Bombers dropped 21 tons of explosives on Finschhafen. Attack planes fired 48,000 rounds of ammunition.

Eighty-five miles northeast, the Japanese air units at Cape Gloucester, New Britain, were prevented from interfering. For four hours there, big Allied bombers blasted with 737 tons of bombs and attack planes poured out 16,000 rounds of bullets.

While Australian soldiers and American paratroopers hunted down 600 Japanese who fled into the jungles above captured Lae, headquarters reported to-day a preliminary count of more than 6,300 enemy soldiers slain since July 1 in the Lae-Salamaua sector. 6 thousand more were estimated previously to have been killed there before July 1.

"Final estimates will be very much greater," the communique stated.

Allied air action reported in the communique included a 23-ton raid on an airdrome on Amboina, 600 miles north of Australia; downing of six enemy fighters in a raid on the Kai Islands; sinking of an enemy cargo ship off Kavieng, New Ireland; destruction of nine barges and setting afire of a cargo ship near Choiseul Island in the Solomons; wiping out of eight grounded planes at the Kahili airdrome, Bougainville; and bagging of two enemy fighters over Buka.

Body Washed Ashore Near Newcastle

COBOURG, Sept. 25 — (CP) — Body of a man believed to be Eugene Roach of Webster, N.Y., was found to-day at Port Granby near Newcastle. Roach was drowned at Cobourg on September 7 when his motor boat upset. Earl Hoffman of Rochester, who was with him was able to swim to shore. Rough seas caused the boat to capsize.

The two were on their way from Bowmanville to Rochester in a 20-foot open motor boat. Chief W. J. Carey went to Port Granby today to check the identity of the man.

MARMORA

Exhibitions Dropped For Duration Of War

MARMORA, Sept. 25—(ENS)—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of Marmora Agricultural Society held this week it was decided not to hold a fair in Marmora this year or for the duration of the war unless conditions change a great deal.

Contributing to this necessity is the fact that nearly all the directors are short of help on their farms or in their business and none have the time to spare which is necessary to make the fair a success.

One Down—And More To Go

Allied bombers press an attack on Jap shipping and bomb-geysers spout high in Hansa Bay, New Guinea. The enemy cargo vessel in the foreground is shown as it received its fifth hit and starts to heel over. Note sub net "guarding" the vessel. Americans and Australians are making continual gains in the New Guinea area.

Speaking at the meeting, Ontario Labor Minister Charles Daley told the directors that there should be proper balance between industry and labor. Great Britain Has Overcome Many Great Difficulties

By JAMES A. ROY

This is the third in a series of articles written for The Examiner by Professor James A. Roy of Queen's University, Kingston, on wartime conditions in Great Britain.

It is impossible to go into detail in these few short articles of England's war effort but the Ministry of Information provided me with some amazing facts about the war effort of the country as a whole. These facts will bear recapitulation.

To begin with, Great Britain was the first country to go to war with Hitler's Germany from a sense of duty, without being first attacked herself. In 1940 Britain, at the head of the British Commonwealth, stood all but alone against Germany. America was not then our ally, neither was Russia. Invasion seemed imminent. Even Britain's friends thought she was finished. But the British won the battle of Britain and saved the world from German domination. In 1940, in the face of the most deadly peril, Britain sent reinforcements to General Wavell in North Africa. It was a bold stroke, but it paid magnificent dividends. Churchill's vision laid the foundation of all later successful allied strategy in North Africa.

The British Army overcame the most formidable difficulties. The loss of material and equipment at Dunkirk was crippling; the collapse of the French Army was a shattering blow. But the British Army, outnumbered in every single major campaign for the first three years, carried on and won through.

The British Army not only fought the enemy in Europe, Africa and Asia, but also fulfilled the key task of containing the enemy in strength in Iceland, the British Isles, Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, Palestine, Iraq, Syria, Persia, Madagascar, India. British resistence in Greece in the early months of 1941 gravely upset the German timetable and gained vital time for our Russian allies. The successful British campaign in Persia secured the vital supply lines by way of the Persian Gulf to Russia. In a few months British troops conquered Abyssinia, a country that was powerfully defended and more than half as large again as Germany. They overran Italian East Africa, although in the beginning of the 1940 campaign the British were outnumbered by 10 to one. Between 1st-17th March the British pushed forward 744 miles from Mogadishu to Jijiga, the fastest military pursuit in history. They covered 1,725 miles to Addis Ababa in 53 days and mopped up 300,000 of the Italian Army. In the first North African campaign under Wavell the British mopped up another 250,000 of the enemy at a cost of less than 2,000 casualties. In the second North African campaign, up to the end of January, 1942, the British inflicted a further 61,000 casualties upon the Italians and Germans. In the third North African campaign, as all the world knows, the British Eighth Army under Generals Alexander and Montgomery, routed the Axis forces in the victorious Battle of Egypt. In eighty days that army advanced nearly 1,400 miles. More than 70 per cent of all the casualties suffered by the armies of the British Commonwealth in all the campaigns of 1940 and 1941 were suffered by United Kingdom troops. Sixty per cent of all the troops and practically all the armored forces engaged in the Battle of Egypt, came from the United Kingdom. The British First Army, with its paratroops, headed the Allied drive into Tunisia in November, 1942.

Like the Army, the Royal Navy had to overcome the very greatest difficulties. The collapse of France and the entry of Italy and Japan into the war threw an enormous burden on the Navy. The Navy was further handicapped in being denied the use of the Irish bases which were open to us in the Great War. But the Navy rose to the occasion. Up to December, 1942, it had convoyed well over 120,000 British and Allied vessels, with fractional losses and, together with the Merchant Navy, had evacuated the bulk of the B.E.F. from Norway, Dunkirk, Greece and Crete. Out of 3,000,000 soldiers who so far have been moved all over the world, only 1,348 have been killed or drowned, including those missing. The minesweeping branch of the Royal Navy has swept up enough mines to destroy the whole merchant fleet twice over. Up to 3rd March, 1943, 5,000,000 tons of German and Italian shipping had been sunk or captured, and nearly 3,000,000 tons damaged by the Royal Navy together with the R.A.F. One might continue the tale almost indefinitely. The Royal Navy has won all major actions in the Mediterranean and has sunk the "Graf Spee" and "Bismarck." Some of the ships of the Royal Navy have steamed an incredible number of miles since the war started. Recently I crossed the Atlantic in one of the most famous of Canada's destroyers. Accompanying her was the destroyer "Forester" which had steamed more than 200,000 miles since the beginning of the war.

As for the R.A.F., its achievements are known to all the world. It decisively defeated the Luftwaffe in the Battle of Britain and moved into the offensive when the Germans turned against the Russians. The R.A.F. swept over the Low Countries and France and defeated the Germans over their own airfields. More than half of Germany's available fighters have, through the R.A.F., been compelled to keep in the West instead of on the Russian front. Today Bomber Command is driving home to the Germans what concentrated air attack means to great industrial cities. The air forces of the British Commonwealth have played a splendid part in these devastating operations, but in February, 1942, 89 per cent of the aircraft, 72 per cent of the air crews, and 98 per cent of the ground personnel in Britain were born in Britain.

Another branch that has played a magnificent role is the, Merchant Navy. Not so long ago. I learned and saw a little of what the men of the Merchant Navy have to go through. Day in, day out, the ships of the Merchant Navy and the men who man them, keep up the supply of vital raw materials and foodstuffs without which the people and the factories of Britain could not continue to exist. These ships and their seamen maintain various battle fronts and garrisons scattered throughout the world. Wherever they are, the ships and the men of the Merchant Navy, blacked out and with scuttles closed, are ready to meet the challenge of U-boats, mines and enemy aircraft and battle on with their vital cargoes. Hundreds of thousands of men of the forces owe their lives and freedom in the evacuations from Norway, Dunkirk, Greece and Crete to the ships and men of the Merchant Navy. In the first three years of the war over 16,000 men of the Merchant Navy lost their lives.

Four-Year-Old Squares Grudge With Doctor Jabs Needle, Gleefully Inoculates M.O.H.

The young master of four or five was all through his immunization treatments at the clinics the Board of Health provides for children. This protection against infectious diseases involved four or five injections, and the small boy had evidently stored considerable resentment against Dr. R. A. Kelly, M. O. H.

In fact,, the young master suggested that it was his turn to give the doctor a shot in the arm, and presumably this desire was not inspired by a wish to ward off illness from Dr. Kelly. Opinion at this distance from the incident suggests the boy belongs in the psychologic category that may be designated distinctively as the "quid pro quo" or the eye for an eye. But, not to follow that bypath of speculation about quirks of character, it may be said that Dr. Kelly indulged the boy's demand. Peterborough already knows Dr. Kelly as one above suspicion of ever having peeped into Dale Carnegie's opus. Indeed he might be able, if he were conscious about himself and his personality, to provide an extra paragraph or two for the famous book.

So, the M.O.H. rigged the needle with a drop or two of water, rolled up his sleeve and the young master had his way, with evidence of satisfaction and some glee. Probably what should have been dispensed at that point were a couple of shingle strings on the pants. However, the doctor let the account with junior be equated and all hands were happy and smiling about it.

Then there was that five year old on a side street the other afternoon. His mother called "Frankie come in get your sweater on; it's chilly." And this young master blurted in answer: "Aw nuts!" and mother seemed to agree with him because she weakly shut the door and retired from that brief encounter evidently a common experience.

Farmers Arrange Ploughing Match

In the spirit of keeping the torch of agriculture held high, or as high as they can reach in the limitations of war time, the directors of the Peterborough Plowmen's Association decided to hold their annual match on Wednesday, October 13 an the farm of Henry Batten, North Monaghan.

Walter Thorn of Otonabee, was in the chair with about a dozen of the members present. Display of farm implements including combines, buck rakes which has been frequently mentioned in the rural industry for a year or more, one-way discs and so on, will be made a feature of this show.

Directors admitted the difficulties of maintaining interest in plowing competitions during the war period, but they felt that if they suspended their match indefinitely it would take some years to revive it. Some of the younger plowmen of other years are in the military forces, others are on the western harvesting expedition and the rest are busy on the home acres.

These were aspects which were fully considered last night, but the directors decided to make use of them by appealing to the public to keep the plowing match going until peace returns.

Exemption Requested For Fuel Workers

Exemption from military service, temporarily at least, of fuel workers in towns of less than 50,000 population, was asked for in a resolution of the property committee yesterday afternoon.

The government has taken this step for the winter period to enable the larger centres to make delivery of coal and wood, but Mayor Hamilton said that cities of less than 50,000 felt the same need and just as acutely. The letter will be forwarded to the director of Selective Service.

Dance And Draw Nets $46 For War Victims

A wonderful story of real enterprise, reminiscent of many who have succeeded in a large way in the financial world, is revealed in a nice donation of $46.50, which is reported in today's list of receipts for the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund from Mrs. George Parsons of R.R. No. 2, Lakefield, North Dummer.

Backed by a real zeal for a good cause that is undisputably one of the best, Mrs. Parsons first of all sold some dahlia bulbs from which she realized the sum of $1.50, and then wishing to extend this still further, the money was utilized to buy a pair of bath towels, for which tickets were sold so that they might be made the prize for a draw, in which she had the assistance of Mrs. Ernie Butler, Mrs. David Payne and Mrs. Gordon Crowe.

By this means the original $1.50 was raised to the sum of $28.00, and then in order to increase it still further, they held a dance in the Warsaw Hall for the purpose of making the draw, and this added another $18.50 which brought the original small sum up to a total of $46.50 as a result of their enterprise in which Mr. Parsons had a full share.

When the draw was made, Mrs. Sherwood Payne of Warsaw was declared the winner, thus bringing to a conclusion an effort on behalf of the fund, which besides producing a substantial sum was notable for the enterprise displayed by those responsible.

The fifty cents included in today's list under the title of "Now you see it, now you don't," came to the fund through a demonstration of how a fifty cent piece could be placed in a box without removing the lid. One of the skeptics in the coffee club poneyed up like a real FEESH, and said it was worth it, after the tumult and shouting had died, but this writer not being a magician can hardly say just exactly how it was done.

Bingo and Draw

The South-end Conservative Association are holding a bingo game next Thursday in the Orange Hall on Brock street commencing at 8 o'clock sharp, from which the proceeds will come to the fund.

Some beautiful prizes have been donated for the occasion, in addition to which, a beautiful hand worked crocheted four-piece set for a table has been donated, which will be the prize for a draw being held at the same time. This set is one which could grace the home of the fastidious person, and tickets are now on sale for it.

Previously acknowledged	$62,926.88
Proceeds of dance and draw, sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. George Parsons, R.R. No. 2, Lakefield	46.50
Now you see it, now you don't	.50

LINDSAY

Court Overrules Evidence; Hendry Guilty

LINDSAY, Ont., Sept. 25 —(ENS) —"This is one time I am going to take the word of a police officer against that of several witnesses," stated Magistrate E. Gee in police court, here to-day in sentencing Sidney Hendry of Eagle Lake, Haliburton County, to seven days in jail on a charge of being intoxicated while driving a car.

Following the passing of sentence Cpl. K. Lockwood of Cobourg, R. C. M. P., laid charges under the War Measures Act for military evasion against Sidney Hendry and his younger brother Herbert. They were ordered to appear in court next Friday.

Provincial Constable W. Hendren of Minden told the court that while driving in the Tory Hill district he had become suspicious of a car in front of him that was weaving from side to side. The driver of the car, Hendry, after refusing to allow him to pass put on speed and then turned quickly into a farm lane way. The constable caught the accused as he was trying to run into the house, he said and found him to be intoxicated.

Evidence was given by Hendry and his brother Herbert and Russell denying that there had been any drinking.

"When I heard the car horn behind me honking I did not turn out for the road was too narrow," Henry claimed, "and I speeded up as I had only a short way to go before turning off to my uncle's house."

Winnipeg Paper Hit By Strike

WINNIPEG, Sept. 25—(CP).—For the third day, the Winnipeg Free Press Friday was published, in part, from stereotype plates of the Winnipeg Tribune — though printed on its own press—as composing room workers continued a sitdown strike.

The printers reported to work as usual but adhered to a "cease work" order as their union representative continued conferences.

The men are seeking recognition of Local 191, International Typographical Union as their bargaining agent. The Free Press management claims it is bound by a contract with the Winnipeg Newspaper Printers' Association, expiring after the war. Printers at the Tribune are members of the W.N.P.A. Union.

Members of the International Pressmen and Stereotypers' Union in the Free Press plant, who have remained on the job, are considering the strike situation with union representatives, while it was understood the W.N.P.A. has called a meeting for tomorrow when their position will be reviewed.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25 (AP). —The thieves who broke into Mrs. Anne Sinicki's apartment, she told police, were most unmannerly. Not only did they steal clothes and kitchen utensils Mrs. Sinicki valued at $850, but they stayed long enough to prepare a dinner from food in the ice box. And, Mrs. Sinicki complained, they left all the dirty dishes for her to wash.

Shake-up Looms For Hungary

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Sept. 25 — (Delayed). — (AP). — The Rumanian radio told listeners yesterday that the Hungarian Government was about to resign and quoted Swiss dispatches as declaring that the Hungarians were seeking a separate peace.

(A BBC broadcast, recorded by CBS in New York to-day, reported that "a cabinet crisis in Budapest, brought about by the people's wish to follow Italy out of the war, is taking place.

("A new ultimatum from Hitler is expected any moment," the BBC said, adding that Hungary's Chief of Staff, Gen. Ferenc Szombathelki, had returned to Budapest from a two-day visit at Hitler's headquarters. The visit followed Hitler's demand last week for 15 Hungarian division to be sent to Dalmatia and Croatia.)

The Rumanian radio broadcast, which included vigorous comment on alleged suffering of Rumanians under Hnugarian rule in Transylvania, gave the impression Rumania is trying to convince Germany that Hungary is about to quit the war and that Transylvania consequently should be returned to Rumania.

Still A Skunk

WELLAND, Sept. 25 (CP). — When Corporal Brenda Stank of the R.C.A.F. made a visit to Welland, citizens gave the visitor a wide berth. Brenda has been deodorized, officials said, but the young skunk, field mascot at the O'Reilly's bridge air station, couldn't reassure the population of the city to that effect.

BANCROFT

Old Resident Dead 3 Days Before Found

BANCROFT, Sept. 25 —(ENS)— Mr. James Ketcheson, an aged resident of Turriff, near Bancroft, was found dead at his home Wednesday morning.

Mr. Ketcheson was a bachelor who lived all alone at his home in Turriff and spent his days fishing and travelling out in the woods and each fall on the usual deer hunt. He was a great sportsman and was last seen alive Monday morning.

Mr. Harold Wheeler, the assessor, was making his rounds Wednesday and on getting no reply to his knocks, he peered in and saw Mr. Ketcheson slumped over in a chair. Dr. Lumb was summoned and on examination declared that the man had been seized with a heart attack, death having taken place two or three days ago.

Relatives at Green's Corners and Belleville were notified of his death and his brother Harry of Belleville arrived at Turriff Wednesday evening along with members of the Martin Funeral Home of Belleville to remove the remains to the city.

Board Considers Railway Wages

OTTAWA, Sept. 25 — (CP)—The National War Labor Board has the biggest case it has yet faced on its books—an application by the standard railway labor organizations for wage increases which affect 140,000 employees of 14 Canadian railways.

The unions are seeking to have the basic wages of men employed in the "running" trades—engineers, firemen and trainmen—brought up to the standard of eastern United States railways. For railway employees not in the "running" trades they ask an increase of 23 cents an hour.

It is expected considerable time will be required for the preparation of a brief by the railways and a rebuttal by the unions, and no date has been set for the hearing.

The unions served notice on the railways last July 31 that they sought the increases and since that time, it is understood, conferences between union and railway officials have been held.

In their original request to the railways, the union said that while railway workers had not received increases since 1927, employees of "almost all of the large Canadian industries" had been given one, and in some cases two, wage increases during the war years.

All Set For Autumn

By ALICE ALDEN

EVERY designer has come through with his or her pet version of the trim, slim woollen suit to be worn now on its own or with furs, and later on, under a coat. One of the most attractive types of this most useful fashion comes from Joseph Halpert, famous for the elegant simplicity of his designs. Silver novelty buttons and a ruched peplum are features of this two-piece red woollen suit dress made with an inverted pleat on the slim skirt.

Suit, Double Duty Dresses Warm Overcoat Are Essential

From coast to coast, the women of America are building their working wardrobes around casual clothes. Because these are the purposeful clothes that will see them through their doubly-busy days and nights, clothes that look right anywhere, anytime, any place. Classifically simple in line, uncluttered with gingerbread, casual clothes are universally flattering. And in these days when we all want to save precious time and money, it's wise to remember that casual clothse give maximum wear for seasons and require precious little care. For the business girl who does hostess duty afterhours at the USO, for the war worker, for home front housekeeper, its casual clothes that fill the bill for 24-hour service. First and most important essential in your casual wartime wardrobe is a good classic suit. Use your good common sense and good buy the best suit you can afford because it will repay you with seasons of smart good looks. Next essential is a good warm versatile overcoat that you can wear over everything from your suits to your most exciting date dresses. Underscored for double-duty wear is the beloved Chesterfield, the new and wonderfully warm fur lined overcoat, the "easy" officer's reefer with deeper armholes to accommodate your suit. Or if you prefer a furred overcoat, choose the furred tuxedo casual. Marvelously flattering as it is warm and fashionable, it's smart over your suits, adds drama to your casual and date dresses. Because of its tremendous popularity, you can have your tuxedo overcoat with lynx-dyed fox, beau marten dyed skunk, sheared beaver or persian lamb fur trim. Taking top billing in wartime wardrobes is the double-duty casual dress. Streamlined for action, sophisticated yet young, it steals the show for all-around good looks, versatility and wear-everywhere smartness. Because these days when every second counts, women want and must have simple functional dresses that look right behind a desk as they do for dinner and movies later. One of the top favorites is the young button-front coat dress, especially wonderful time-saver too because it's easy to slip into and doesn't muss your coiffure.

Equally popular is the smooth fly-front coat dress set off with saddle stitching, the cardigan coat dress, and the perennial favorite, the shirtwaist dress. And don't think for a second that these new casuals haven't got lots of fashion news—they have definitely! First, they're all softly tailored which makes them so right from A.M. to P.M. Smart dressmaker details such as self fringe trim, interesting buttons, self ruffles and tucked details add to their smooth good looks. Biggest news about the casual shirtwaist dress is the soft bow-tied neckline—marvelous for that fresh-faced young look. Besides which it offers endless changes — switch your bow — and you've a different dress! The two-piece suit dress is another wardrobe essential and one that will serve you well and often. Their fitted jacket tops are universally flattering and because they are classifically simple they invite quick-change dickies, collars as well as your pearls. Of course the skirt is super with separate blouses too! Two-tone combinations are noted and offer double smartness. Underscored for junior figures is the light-topped jacket with peter pan collar and slim dark skirt — fetching for business as it is for furlough dates! In gabarines, flannels or sheer wools—these casuals are wonderful for fuel-rationed homes because they'll keep you warm too.

Active Duty Overcoats

You'll be walking more this Fall and Winter — buck the wind in a good warm overcoat! Definitely an essential in your working wardrobe, choose yours carefully with a sharp eye to warmth, good looks, versatility and duration wear. Definitely recommended is the furred tuxedo overcoat—wonderful over suits as it is over date dress The all-season overcoat, button-in fur lining, is another sound investment. For first Fall days it's your topcoat—button in the warm fur lining and it's your Winter overcoat! Casual sports clothes by the score, are No. 1 essentials for today's busy woman whether she's a war worker, college or career girl or home front mother. Because they're the most multiple purpose clothes in any wardrobe.

Extra slacks can be teamed smartly with the jackets. Vests are becoming increasingly popular because they add the finishing touch to a shirt and skirt costume.

For Sunday, September 26

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a fairly fortunate one, especially for church affairs, for students and for placing the interests on a secure and enduring foundation. Social and cultural associations should happily offset dubious business conditions.

Those whose birthday it is may have an opportunity during the year, to put their affairs and the future on a firm and enduring basis. With application, good methods and perseverance there should be progress and happiness.

For Monday, September 27

Monday's astrological forecast is a difficult and disintegrating one, with sudden and radical upheavals or separations. This might be due to erratic or impulsive behavior or some emotional disturbance.

Those whose birthdy it is are on the eve of a difficult year, in which estrangements, sudden reversals or abrupt upsets may complicate matters. This may be owing to interference of elders, strangers, or busy-bodies, inciting to impulsive or erratic behaviorisms. Tact and restraint may avert such difficulties. Sign all writings with great care and deliberation.

A child born on this day may be temperamental to its detriment. It should have discipline.

This Is Everybody's War

By MOLLY BROWN

Rationing is all very well, when necessary, but it does seem as if, having rationed us in the staple commodities, such as butter, sugar, meat, tea, coffee and jam, the powers that be would regard it as our own business what we did with our allotted portion; as if, short of reselling our unwanted rations at profit and without coupons, we would be allowed to use them as we saw fit.

But the powers that be, apparently do not see things in that light, because authorities on all sides seem to be warning us against swapping our tea for a neighbor's butter, telling us we are engaging in and encouraging black markets by helping each other out of little emergencies and indulging in the time-honored custom of borrowing cups of this and quarter pounds of that from our neighbors.

Take for instance the case of Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Jones, who are neighbors and friends, accustomed to swapping recipes, gossip, advice and other necessities of life. Mrs. Smith has two husky boys of twelve and fourteen for whom she receives rations including those for tea and coffee. But the boys don't drink anything but milk, so she has plenty of tea for herself and her husband. The boys and their father, however, eat for breakfast heaping bowls of cereal liberally sprinkled with sugar, and Mr. Smith takes sugar in his coffee. It takes all Mrs. Smith's housewifely ingenuity and her constant vigilance to make the sugar ration go that far, let alone having any sugar over for any cooking she may want to do.

Mrs. Jones husband is in the Air Force and she has no children. She's slimming, and doesn't use much sugar, especially as she doesn't do any baking, except whne LAC. Jones is home on furlough, which isn't often. So she has plenty of sugar, more than she can use, but she finds it impossible to make her coffee ration last.

Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Jones, being friends, compare their ration troubles, and make a little arrangement whereby Mrs. Smith gives Mrs. Jones some of her surplus coffee in exchange for some of Mrs. Jones' sugar. Now the growing Smith boys are getting a little extra helping of the energy-giving sugar all boys need, and Mrs. Jones has enough coffee. A nice neighbourly arrangement any reasonable person would say. But no, say the authorities. Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Smith are sabotaging the war-effort, conducting a private black market, and generally behaving in a highly reprehensible manner. They'll be fined if they're caught.

How far can this thing go? Suppose I go on a diet. No butter, no sugar. Can my family, my brother and sister, my mother and father, share my ration of those staples, or must those ration coupons remain unused? Suppose a friend of yours drops in for a chat in the afternoon. Can you invite her to tea, and partake the family's ration of tea, sugar and butter, possibly of the jam made with rationed canning sugar, or the rationed honey? Or is that a black market too?

And suppose Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Jones decide they'd like to entertain some of the lonely soldiers stationed in their city. They arrange a little party for Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Jones, who is still slimming, will provide a cake, using some of her butter and sugar coupons, and will also make the sandwiches. Mrs. Smith, having received a larger canning sugar ration, will supply jam and will make the coffee from her extra rations. The boys will have a good time, because Mr. and Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Jones are nice people. But perhaps they have broken the law!

Then LAC. Jones arrives nome on a "48" without any ration coupons. Will Mrs. Smith be risking a jail sentence if she sends in a little coffee, because she knows her friend is short?

And if Mesdames Smith and Jones and you and I do all these things, who is going to know about it, unless the ration authorities propose to call in the assistance of Herr Hitler's famous—or rather, infamous—Gestapo?

QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

A large number of parents and friends were present Friday evening for the presentation of certificates to the graduating classes of Queen Mary School.

The chairman, Mr. Olmstead voiced his appreciation of being able to participate in the graduating exercises. The guest speaker, Mr. F. Dearborn, won the hearts of his audience with his sincerity and humour. He gave the credit of the success of the graduating class to the teachers, parents and the children. "If your life stands the approval of your better self" was the measure that the speaker gave for success, the subject of his address.

Mr. Dearborn pointed out that success does not depend upon wealth and education but education helps a person to be successful.

Three factors contributing towards success are health, education, and helping others. Mr. Dearborn also said that success depends upon what you are.

The valedictory address was given by Louise Leslie, who on behalf of her fellow pupils, expressed regret at leaving the school and also thanked the teachers for their valued help.

Mr. O. M. Steer and Mr. Wagar presented the certificates to the two graduating classes. They congratulated the students, wished them success and thanked the parents for their co-operation during the year. Mr. Steer said that he had never had a class with more ideas of their own.

Two piano solos were given by Margaret Jane Loucks and Marie Adams and community singing was enjoyed during the evening. Mrs. Dobson presided at the piano.

At the close of the program the graduating class was the guests of the Home and School and refreshments were served.

RATIONED DATES MAKE LIFE NATURAL, PLEASANT FOR GIRL

Dear Miss Dix: I have a daughter of 15 who is very attractive. She is very dependable and truthful. She has asked me if she can date, but I feel that she is too young and have told her to wait another year, then I might consider letting her go out occasionally with boys. She tells me she is old enough and that all the other girls are doing it and she is missing all the fun, and that I am being unfair to her.

It isn't that I don't trust her, but I am afraid she might get in with the wrong crowd. I take her out to places of amusement, but she wants to go out with boys and girls of her own age and is very unhappy because I won't let her do it. What should I do?

WORRIED MOTHER.

Passing Childhood Always Shock

Answer: It is always a shock to a mother when she finds out that little Susie isn't content any longer to just go about with her and be held by the hand, but that she wants to step out a bit with the crowd. For Susie still seems a baby to Mother, but Susie thinks herself grownup and entitled to some grownup privileges and liberties.

Mother thinks Susie is too young to begin thinking about boys, and says that when she was 15 she was a nice little girl who never even thought about boys, which may be true. Or perhaps Mother has forgotten. Anyway, it is Susie's case and not Mother's, and Mother will have to come up-to-date and realize that we have speeded everything else in life up in the last 20 years, even age, and that Susie at 15 is just as old and far more sophisticated than Mother was at 18. Susie hasn't read modern fiction and gone to the movies for nothing.

Of course, no mother who takes her motherhood seriously is going to snap all the bonds and turn a 15-year-old girl loose on the world to range it as she pleases and with whom she pleases, but, all the same, she is a wise mother if she doesn't try to drive Susie on too tight a rein. For, if she does, Susie is likely to bolt, whereas if she gives her her head a little and takes it easy, she can keep control of her.

So I would say: Don't make Susie wait for a year for her first date when she is longing for it so passionately. Give it to her freely. Sympathize with her desire to do what the other girls are doing. Make everything easy and pleasant and natural for her and she will not only be eternally grateful to you for it, but you will establish an intimacy with her that will make it possible for her to confide in you.

Also, she will not resent your rationing her dates, because while it is well enough for her to go to some parties and to have some boy friends, there should be no dates during school time and no orgy of stepping out every night. A father of my acquaintance, who handles a teen-age daughter of Susie's age very successfully, has established this rule, and he insists upon his girl going in crowds when possible and never with just-one young boy.

Boys are a part of every girl's education, and a mother makes a fatal mistake when she refuses to let her daughters begin a study of the species until they are 19 or 20. If a girl is segregated from boys in her early adolescence, she never learns how to handle them, or to judge them, or to take them in her stride. She always thinks of them as little tin gods and is flustered when one pays her any attention, and generally marries the first one who asks her; whereas if she has played about with boys all through school, she has their numbers and no illusions about them.

As for keeping Susie from getting into the wrong crowd, the best way to do that is to write welcome on your doormat and make the crowd free to come to your house. In that way you can get to know the youngsters and weed out the undesirables.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a married woman who foolishly became involved in a love affair with a married man. I realized how wrong I was, and for three years now I have done everything in my power to evade him and break with him, but he 'phones me every night begging and pleading to see me, and this causes many embarrassing situations which can only be covered up by lying.

I do not know what desperate act he may commit to see me and I am greatly worried, for even though he has a wife he says he doesn't love, and four children, I cannot make him understand that I have realized the mistake I made and wish to be let alone to try to make up to my husband in my own way for what I have done.

I feel sure that any action I might take against this man for his continual pursuing of me would make him reveal the situation as it once stood to my husband. I would rather die than continue to cheat my husband and I will surely do something desperate if I cannot induce this man to cease his attentions. What is your advice in the matter?

Answer: Your problem is indeed a serious one and far beyond my poor powers to solve. For it seems that the man must be actually crazed with passion if he will not respect your wishes to end your liaison and return to the respectability of the domestic fold once more. Certainly if he had any of the true and tender affection for you that makes a man put the happiness of the woman he loves above his own, he would not persecute you with attentions that are bound to bring disaster upon you.

His continually calling you on the telephone when he must know your husband is at home indicates that he is trying to make a break between you and your husband that will throw you into his arms. How you are to stop this, I do not know unless you call his bluff by refusing to answer the 'phone at all. That may cause a showdown, but it will be better than living in the anxiety you suffer now, knowing that a sword is held over your head all the time.

Dear Miss Dix: Is it proper for a girl to visit a young man in his home in another city if his sister has also written to her and extended the invitation? We are not engaged but on many week-ends this young man has been a guest in my home with my family.

LEE

Answer: Certainly it will be perfectly proper for you to accept such an invitation. It is only a return courtesy that the young man is paying you for the hospitality your family has shown him. Go and have a good time.

GIRLS GIVEN HOME

DETROIT, Sept. 25 (AP) — Pte. Harry Barany, the draftee who reported to the Fort Custer reception centre with his two young daughters in tow, won't have to worry about the girls when he puts on his uniform Monday. Barany said yesterday that the Red Cross had found a home for the girls, Joan, 6, and Jane, 5, with a private family.

Young and Smart

By ALICE ALDEN

SOME OF the nicest and smartest of the year's clothes are those devoted to the college girl. The styles are wearable and attractive, yet manage to retain the youthful charm and appeal that such fashions should keynote. This perfect date costume is a two-piece suit that is Victorian in feeling, yet ultra new. It is in winter red woollen. Frog button holes and an unusual slit peplum bordered with black braid are interesting details.

MARMORA

Leaders School Subject Of Talk

MARMORA, Sept. 25 —(ENS)— The September meeting of St. Andrew's United Women's Missionary Society was held this week at the home of Mrs. Clarence Wallbridge with a good attendance.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher. A letter from Mrs. Albert Empey of Eldorado, the district president, was read in which she urged every member of the auxiliary to do her utmost to further the work of the society both in the foreign and home mission fields. Notice was given of the sectional rally to be held at Thomasburg United Church on October 8.

Mrs. J. W. Richardson offered her home for the October meeting The theme for the study period was "Christ for all the world and all of life", it being in the form of a litany in which all present took part. Mrs. H. R. Haacke told of her attendance at the school for leadership in Whitby and Mrs. C. Chambers gave a very timely reading, "V" for Victory.

The new outfit is composed largely of members of last year's Y Gym and Y Cadets teams and include some of the best scorers and all round performers in the loop, so that it should be up in the running all the way through. But the girls are in need of backing and any firm or organization that is ready to sponsor a strong girls' basketball team is asked to telephone Isobel Crary, 5572 or Beryl Dobbin, 3189. The accent is certainly on the feminine in the girls' league this season. Not only are girls holding all the offices but it is the intention to train girl officials this season. A number of girls will be used as umpires and it is hoped that before the schedule is finished the girl officials will have come along so well that they will be able to handle games without any assistance from the sterner sex. In Toronto there have been girl referees for some time and the plan has worked out well there.

Dancing Learned in Home Lessons

Good Dancer Sure of Steps

She looks so lovely—waltzing! Other girls feel clumsy when they watch her.

She may, though, have learned to dance at home, following simple diagrams. Many good dancers have! For when you know how to place your feet in each step, and know pointers on following, you can dance well with anyone.

Try our forward waltz step to a 1-2-3 rhythm. On count 1—Step forward on your left foot. 2—Place right foot a short distance to side of left. 3—Close left foot to right foot.

Other waltz steps are learned as easily. A little practice and you're soon waltzing as lightly, as dreamily as the girl you envied. At a slight pressure from your partner's arm or hand, you glide from one step to another!

Be a popular dancer with the aid of our 32-page booklet. It has foot-print diagrams and instructions for waltz, fox-trot, tango, rhumba, Conga, Samba, Westchester, Peabody, Lindy and shag. Tells how to combine steps, lead and follow well.

For your copy of HOW TO DO THE NEWEST DANCE STEPS AND VARIATIONS send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

In The Nude Only

PITTSBURGH, Calif., Sept. 25 —(AP).—A Japanese soldier who wants to surrender to Allied troops in the Pacific must first take off all his clothing and advance in the nude, says Pte. Albert S. Vedovelli, a veteran of Guadalcanal. Vedovelli, under treatment for shrapnel wounds, explained why: "U.S. soldiers have been fooled by treacherous Japs who feign surrender and then blow themselves and their captors to bits with hidden hand grenades."

"The Authority on Authorities"

ENCOURAGE A SHIFT

HIGH CARD signals on your partner's leads are valuable when used with discretion. They become boomerangs when given automatically. Some players will always start a high-low when they have a doubleton of the suit opened. Others will invariably do likewise if they have an honor in the suit which indicates that the declarer is unlikely to be able to take a trick with high cards in it, due to some honor or honors held by the signaler. But the skilled defensive artist frequently gives a discouraging signal of a small card from such holdings if he sees that a switch of suits appears desirable.

West restrained himself from [illegible] a diamond overcall, as a proposal to take eight tricks would have been highly dangerous while vulnerable, but he opened the suit, the K. East knew, naturally, that this betokened possession also of the A. Having the Q himself, he realized that the tops of the suit were solidly in the grasp of his own side, so signaled with the 8. When West put forth the A, he completed his echo with the 3. Naturally West then led the J.

This made the contract for South. He ruffed that third trick, dropped trumps in four rounds and led the club K, then the 5 to the Q, and finally the J, which West took with the A. A spade came back, but South refused the finesse, going in with the A. Another club furnished a discard of South's last spade, and the final good club was ruffed.

If East had seen the danger of that long club in dummy, as a means of obtaining discards of a spade or spades from South's hand, he should have given a low card on the first diamond, his 3, in order to urge West to shift suits to a spade. If that had been done, the spade K would have been set up for the deciding trick before clubs got established.

BATTERIES SWITCHED.

LONDON —(CP) — Anti-aircraft batteries along Britain's south and south-east coasts have been reorganized to meet Germany's switch-over to sneak raiding to high level bombing. Light anti-aircraft guns successfully countered the tip-and-run raiders and now it is the heavies that deal with high flying aircraft and fighter-bombers.

Expects Nazis To Devastate All Europe

OTTAWA, Sept. 25 — (CP). — The Nazi regime in Europe is apt to fall in flames, leaving a trail of devastation that will enormously complicate post-war economic difficulties, Harold Butler, Chief of British Information Services in the United States, told a press conference to-day.

Mr. Butler said the "most harmonious" teamwork existed between Britain and the United States in the conduct of the war, with improved understanding as compared with the First Great War.

In planning beyond the war, the nations had to recognize that the Germans would leave Europe in a much worse state than it had been after the last war. There was the prospect that as they retreated they would destroy.

Already it was obvious the victorious nations would face a distressed Europe. With the destruction that may still be wrought by the Germans, there had to be considered the "awful" plight of Europe now, with millions of the people uprooted through the Nazi forced labor program for whom homes would have to be found. Not only people but industries would have to be sorted out.

Relations Good.

While the present understanding between the United Nations was a good augury for the post-war period, Mr. Butler said he believed there had been too much attention to political questions after the last war and that this time the economic situation must be considered primarily in planning. A broad, coherent economic pattern could be established, and this would make easier the solving of political problems.

Mr. Butler said he believed there was improved understanding in the United States of the extent of the Canadian war effort, especially in respect to the military side. He mentioned in particular the dispatches of Ross Munro, war correspondent of The Canadian Press, and the "play" they received in United States newspapers.

Such dispatches had shown the United States the extent of the Canadian military participation while news of the R.C.A.F. also was common.

MILLBROOK

40 Guests Give Bride Shower

MILLBROOK, Sept. 25—(ENS)—An enjoyable social gathering was held at the home of Mrs. Clarence Ball, Fallis Line, on Thursday afternoon with Miss Edna McKnight as the guest of honor, preceding her marriage which takes place today at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McKnight.

Over forty guests were present, the community of Fallis Line being the area covered, and the highlight of the gathering was the miscellaneous shower for the bride-to-be.

Mrs. Allie Fallis read the address, and the hostess and her niece, Mrs Earl Armstrong, offered the gifts, which were attractively arranged in a bassinette, trimmed in a color scheme of pink and white, including tiny bells, pink blossoms, and fluted streamers. Following the thanks of the guest of honor, the opening of the parcels occupied some time, the gifts including pyrex ware, plastic sets, fine linens, embroidered towels, and china.

The service of a dainty tea completed the party, Mrs. Ball being assisted by Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. A. Fallis in serving her guests. Fall flowers, with asters and marigolds predominating, were used for decorating the home.

Maltreated Dog

CORNWALL, Sept. 25 — (CP). — Fonud guilty of ill-treating a stray dog, Walter Vinet, of Cornwall, on Friday was fined $100, and costs, by Deputy Magistrate J. S. Latchford.

Witnesses said Vinet had poured a strong chemical on the dog, inflicting painful injuries, and then had tied a tin can to the animal's tail.

Police With Lipstick

NEW YORK, Sept. 25 (AP)—New York's policemen henceforth will sport a combination pistol holster and makeup kit which makes, by a flip of a flap, firearm or lipstick instantly available.

British Sub Attacks Tirpitz

LONDON, Sept. 25 —(CP)— An audacious foray by a British submarine in an attempt to sink the German battleship Tirpitz in a Norwegian fjord was reported today by D.N.B., official German news agency.

Broadcast by the Berlin radio, the report said a British submarine "of the smallest type" stole into the Norwegian island area but was caught and destroyed before it could carry out its mission.

(The British Admiralty made no comment on this report.)

The Germans did not say on what part of the island-studded Norwegian coast the British submarine attack was made, but the 35,000-ton Tirpitz was reported recently to have holed up in Alta Fjord in Northern Norway. The entrance to Alta is guarded by a cluster of islands.

with Russia.

The Berlin radio said the Russians had already tried to cross the Dnieper River only one mile above Kiev where the Desna River joins the Dnieper, but the latest Soviet communique made no mention of a crossing, or an attempt to cross.

that Germany has lost her fight

Nevertheless, the Germans mentioned another attempt by Red Army forces to cross the river below Gomel, at a point where the Pripet River enters the Dnieper. This could serve as a jumping off place for a Russian drive into White Russia.

Russia's great seige guns were already mounted at Borispol, 17 miles southeast of Kiev, and the Ukrainian capital heard the thunder of these giant batteries as they opened fire. To the northeast, Soviet spearheads had already swept through Lyeski, 18 miles from the great Dnieper base.

May Withdraw More.

Breaching of the Dnieper barrier at Kiev on the high western bank of the river, probably would force the Nazis to abandon the whole length of the lower reaches of the Dnieper valley to escape encirclement—just as they have been falling back for two and one-half months across the Donets basin and the Desna salient.

Similarly, collapse of the mighty Smolensk strongpoint is expected to roll the Germans back to White Russia on the boundaries of the Baltic pawn states—Latvia, Lithuania and Esthonia.

The most likely site for the first Nazi defences would be along the Bug River, the Pripet marshes and the Berezina and Dvina Rivers, 75 to 100 miles west of the Dnieper. This would guard Odessa, Minsk and Baltic states.

Suspect Nabbed In Murder Of 60-Yr.-Old Lady

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 25 — One suspect is in custody and further arrests are expected for questioning in connection with the murder early Thursday morning of Martha O'Meila, 60-year-old Niagara-on-the-Lake spinster.

Provincial Police Inspector Andrew Grant, Toronto, and Cpl. C. W. Wood, St. Catharines, who are directing the investigations being conducted by Niagara-on-the-Lake and Ontario Provincial Police, did not disclose the name of the man now in custody.

The suspect is understood to be a 28-year-old man who tried to cross into the United States at Niagara Falls, about five a.m. Thursday morning. He was turned over to military police and later placed in the county jail by Constable F. H. Cooney.

Conducting one of the most exhaustive investigations, Inspector Grant and Cpl. Wood, accompanied by Chief Edward Ball, Niagara-on-the-Lake, traced dozens of reports and suspects referred to police throughout Thursday and Friday. The search led Friday to Niagara camp where Capt. I. R. Robbie, formerly of the Ontario Provincial police, assisted in the investigations.

The post-mortem conducted on Thursday by Dr. Lorne Whitaker, pathologist, disclosed that Miss O'Meila's death was caused by the severe beating she received, combined with shock. Her nose was broken and teeth knocked out and her face was bruised and lacerated.

important in Ontario.

3. Liquor: There is widespread dissatisfaction regarding sale and distribution of liquor, but the restrictions are an attempt to "work out by simple arithmetic the amount of alcoholic beverages which could be sold by each province and still stay within the total supplies available," so the Ontario Control Board had no choice but to observe the restrictions. But, the Premier said, it is hoped proposals may be placed before the Federal Government to improve the situation.

4. Labor: Relations are far from ready to begin an inquiry but, he said, it is impossible to define the scope of activities until the Federal Government announces its policy. Labor Minister Daley of Ontario had arranged to meet Federal Labor Minister Mitchell shortly "in the hope that we may have some indication of their intention." Labor and management generally had done a good job.

To Probe Fuel.

5. Fuel: A committee with "widest powers of investigation and recommendation" has been appointed and its personnel will be announced on Tuesday.

6. Post-war: "I have been pressing for post-war planning for more than three years and our committees will therefore proceed with their inquiries with the greatest possible speed."

7. Education: Canada's future depends on the education of youth but any desirable changes in the current school year are necessarily limited to policy rather than detail because the curricula have already been formulated. Children must be taught a clear understanding of the essential facts regarding the machinery and purpose of the system under which they govern themselves.

Col. Drew also discussed his recent meeting with Premier Godbout of Quebec, saying he believes the conversations "have laid the foundations for co-operation" in matters of joint interest, reviewed the cancelling of seven contracts which he said has restored 13,729,280 acres of timber land to government control and said control "of our forests will be placed under an independent non-political forest resources commission organized on a basis similar to that of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission."

In discussing future government policy, the Premier said Ontario will continue to follow Britain's example because he is convinced that "the most efficient and the most stable and democratic government in the world today is that of Great Britain.

"That is why the whole world is looking to them today for guidance and suggestions in regard to sound government."

Who's Downhearted?—Not These Italian Prisoners

Broad grins light the faces of these Italian prisoners as they pose after their capture by the British Eighth Army on the Italian mainland. Tired of being subordinated by their Nazi "Allies" these Italians are ready to fight alongside the Allied troops to regain control of their homeland.

dering the advance of the 5th Army, with fiercest fighting north of Salerno. This report also told of eastward advances.

Expect Landings

Meanwhile, a Vichy broadcast, also heard in London by the Associated Press, declared that Berlin expects new Allied landings soon along either the east or west coasts of Italy in the next few days.

(London dispatches indicated that the British 8th Army, which includes Canadian 1st Division units, may be regrouping its strength as it gradually pushes northward, getting ready for the next round of hard fighting. The Canadians have not been mentioned as in action recently and apparently have not been in close contact with the enemy. There has been no recent mention either of the Canadian 1st Army tank brigade, reported unofficially to have taken part in the Salerno fighting as part of the 5th Army.)

The first of the daily headquarters announcements made no mention of the situation on the Island of Corsica, where French patriot forces were said to be closing in on the last of the German defenders.

Leaders Confer.

Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, leader of the 8th Army, appeared at 5th Army headquarters yesterday and conferred with Gen. Clark on what the latter afterward described as future plans for operation of the two armies.

Gen. Montgomery said he had wagered a correspondent five shillings against his spending Christmas at home, adding: "Just where we will spend it I don't know."

A delayed dispatch said Gen. Montgomery had welcomed troops of the British 5th Corps into the ranks of the 8th Army on September 22, declaring:

"It's us out here and what we do that keeps the morale high on the home front. If the morale at home went down we might well lose the war."

Allies Now Use Jap Equipment

KISKA ISLAND, Aleutians, Sept. 25 — (CP).— Canadian troops are "dug in" on this barren, fog-bound Aleutian isle—as much at home as an army can be among the rock, tundra and bone-chilling dampness that is Kiska.

There isn't much here to remind the Canadian boys of their homes. But with their American brothers-in-arms they're settling down under canvas and in abandoned Jap huts and dugouts.

Things have changed on Kiska since August 15-16 when the three Canadian combat teams making up the Canadian force stormed ashore with the Americans only to find the Japanese had fled.

The Kiska harbor "junkyard" the Japs left behind has disappeared. Gone are many of the tumble-down buildings. In their places are army tents in neat, orderly rows.

Jap-damaged trucks and motorcycles have been repaired and put to use. Inspection crews have boarded freighters the Japs left beached. One, half-sunken, is being raised.

The Canadian force under Brig. H. W. Foster with Lt.-Col. Scott Murdoch as executive officer, work in close co-operation with the American forces.

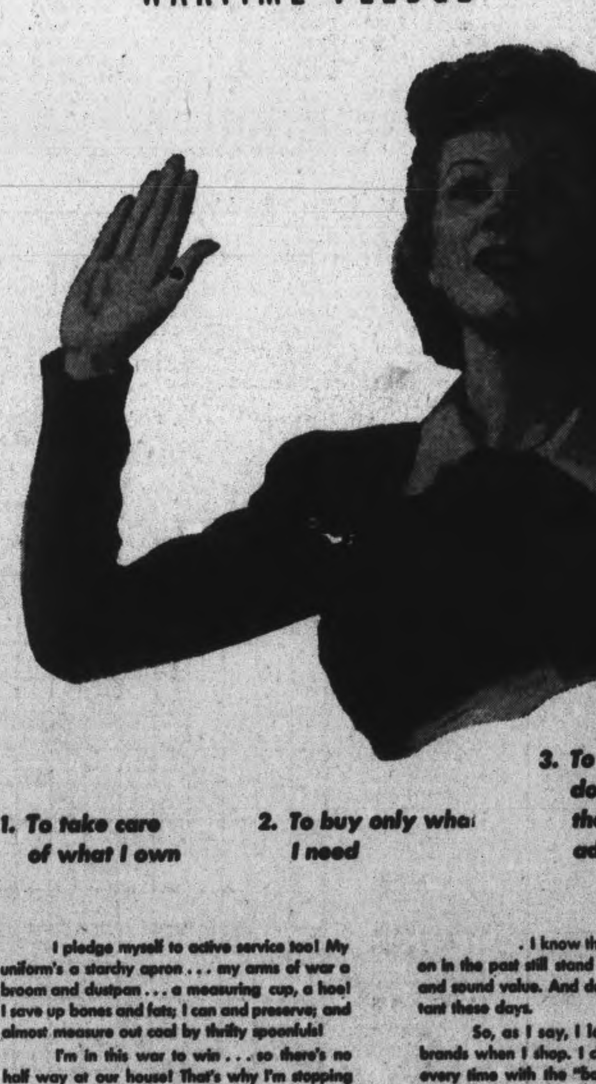
THE HOUSEWIFE'S WARTIME PLEDGE



1. To take care of what I own
2. To buy only what I need
3. To spend what dollars I must, to the best possible advantage ★

I pledge myself to active service too! My uniform's a starchy apron . . . my arms of war a broom and dustpan . . . a measuring cup, a hoe! I save up bones and fats; I can and preserve; and almost measure out coal by thrifty spoonfuls!

I'm in this war to win . . . so there's no half way at our house! That's why I'm stopping up every little leak in the family budget,—repairs that might have been avoided or fixed up sooner; careless, unplanned spending for things we don't need . . . and things that just don't last the way they should.

★ And that's why I still look for EATON'S own brands when I shop . . . still look for the old trusted names on carpets and light bulbs, tooth powder and enamelware, shoes, dresses, stockings . . I know that the names I've relied on in the past still stand as hall marks of quality and sound value. And dependability is so important these days.

So, as I say, I look for EATON'S own brands when I shop. I check my list of needfuls every time with the "badge of merit" labels at EATON'S. The lines, of course, are not as numerous as in the past—war needs have taken their toll—but those that are still on hand are safe landmarks when you're spending your dollars to the best possible advantage.

This is EATON'S Own Brands Week throughout the store. See the special displays! Look for the labels!

Russian Guns Trained On City Of Kiev

Dnieper Crossed By Reds At Several Points

LONDON, Sept. 27—(CP). — Red Army units were battling for toeholds across the broad Dnieper River today as the Germans reeled westward in retreat along a smoking front which a Soviet communique said extended from the Kuban bridgehead 750 miles northward to the war-wracked city of Smolensk.

The glittering domes of Kiev, ancient holy city of Russia, lay under Soviet siege guns on the eastern bank of the Dnieper with the Polish frontier 100 miles beyond, while at least a half-dozen other key towns along the winding river appeared ripe to fall into the hands of the hard-driving Red Army as Nazi resistance continued to crumble.

The Russian communique told of advances which brought Soviet forces abreast of the Dnieper in the vicinity of Dnepropetrovsk, industrial centre at the easternmost bend of the river; in the Kremenchug sector 100 miles northwest; to the south of Pereyaslavl, 100 miles southeast of Kiev, and in the Kiev area itself.

Berlin Admits Losses.

The Russian claims were substantiated by the Berlin radio in a broadcast yesterday which admitted the Russians had penetrated the German defences and had reached the river's edge at several undisclosed places. The broadcast also said that in some instances the Red Army assault had carried across to the western bank. The Germans did not say they had succeeded in throwing the Russians back across the 1,400-foot stream.

More than 5,000 Germans were killed in the day's fighting, the Russians said, declaring many of the enemy were drowned as they were driven into the Dnieper. There were indications that in some sectors the German retreat was developing into a rout and the communique told of huge stores of war material and food which had been abandoned.

Prime prize in the present drive was the City of Kiev, held by the Germans since the early days of the war, and it seemed probable that Russian units on the flanks which were already on the eastern bank would attempt to smash their way across in an encircling movement.

Hun Artillery Stalls Allied Tanks

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

ON THE ADRIATIC COAST, Sept. 25—(Delayed)—(AP)— Armchair theorists of super-modern warfare should be sitting today on this dusty hill overlooking historic Cerignola to see another stalemate in the argument of tanks versus guns.

As night falls over the broad sweep of the Foggia plain, the armored spearhead of the British 8th Army is halted until tomorrow only two miles from Cerignola and about 20 miles from Foggia.

A small amount of German anti-tank artillery has forced this temporary pause.

Today's struggle occurred about 10 miles from the bite of ancient Cannae, where Hannibal's elephant-borne Carthaginian invaders wiped out the Roman army in 216 B.C.

Back To Hannibal

Hannibal won Cannae, but never entered Rome. Any Tommy around me now will bet he will have better luck than Hannibal.

Several times in the last few days surviving remnants of a German division that fought in Sicily have barely eluded encirclement by the 8th Army. The commander of the advance guard tried again to snaffle the enemy this afternoon, sending six Sherman tanks in left flank sweeps toward the outskirts of Cerignola.

Raising plumes of brown dust, this armor, accompanied by scuttling little Bren carriers, advanced over plowed fields toward the edge of thick woods on higher ground.

The tanks had almost passed the boundary of the woods when the sharp crack of field guns and the clatter of machine-guns announced the enemy defence.

The tanks raised such a cloud of dust we could not distinguish from less than a mile away whether enemy tanks had also entered combat, but the sputtering wireless conversations of the Sherman crews furnished a running commentary on the action.

"Observe where their fire is coming from and have a shoot," said one tank captain to another.

"Sorry, can't see a thing because of the dust and machine-fire bullets whizzing by my head," was the answer.

"I'm returning along the track," said another. "Please give me clearance and cover."

"Righto," came the answer.

"I'm returning too, but I can't cover," said another voice, unmistakably cockney.

Carriers Retreat.

We saw the Bren carriers race back first and swerve toward a distant, undefended hill to furnish observation. Then the Shermans rolled ponderously toward the rear and left flank tanks began firing, each burst spewing a cloud of dust forward. The radio was crowded with others and requests for ranging.

The liaison officer for the batteries of 25-pounders behind us asked the major of the control car:

"We will shell the woods, of course, but how about putting down a crump

Emden Base Smashed In Day Raid

No Enemy Planes Encountered In Aerial Swoop

LONDON, Sept. 27 (CP)—Speedy R.A.F. Mosquito bombers kept the Allied aerial offensive going throughout the night by bombing targets in the Rhineland, the air ministry announced today. All returned safely while one enemy bomber was destroyed over its base in Holland.

Today American four-engined bombers, carrying U.S. air force opertions in Britain to a new month's record, bombed Emden, German shipbuilding centre.

This second stab by Flying Fortresses in two days hit the Nazis' nearest submarine and shipping base and the receiving port for Scandinavian ore.

10th Raid

The raid was the 10th this month for the Fortresses which thus equalled the number of missions they performed in July. With the 19 attacks this month by U.S. medium bombers—compared with six in July—U.S. operations reached above any previous level.

Yesterday the Fortresses lashed at the Nazi airport and repair base of Rheims, 80 miles northeast of Paris while U.S. fighters swept over Northern France in support.

Soon after the raid on Emden, U.S. medium bombers swept down on the Nazis' Beauvais-Tille airbase, 45 miles north of Paris, for fifth time in 10 days and the eighth time this month.

After yesterday's sweeps over Northern France, returning pilots said that for the first time in their European operations they encountered no enemy opposition.

Flak was light as the bombers sent their bombs away over the targets, but no Nazi fighters rose t challenge them.

All American planes returned, but two R.A.F. fighters were listed as missing from an offensive patrol over France earlier in the day.

Famine Growing Across Bengal

CALCUTTA, Sept. 25 (Delayed)—(AP)—The predicament of Bengal Province's hungry millions has become worse in Calcutta and the hinterlands where hundreds are dying from starvation each day.

A large proportion of those starving in Calcutta are from rural districts where the situation is deteriorating rapidly. Persons able to move attempt to reach Calcutta where they hope for help, and many die along the roadside.

Nearly 150 free kitchens have been opened in the city, mostly sponsored by private relief societies, but they are not enough to feed 100,000 destitute people in Calcutta alone.

Last week Calcutta hospitals, filled to capacity, received 5,000 cases. One thousand were suffering from starvation while the remainder were diseases resulting from hunger. Cholera and tpyhodi cases were increasing on the outskirts of the city.

Force Of Habit

YONKERS, N.Y., Sept. 27—(AP).—Stephen Sackett, 46, who has been arrested 20 times on intoxication charges, walked into police headquarters. "I thought I'd bring myself in and save you the trouble," he announced. Police again charged him with drunkenness — and ushered him to a cell.

Expect Premier To Set Election Date

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Sept. 27 —(CP)—Some 300 registered delegates, official guests and members of the National Liberal Federation advisory council went into two-day session here this morning to elect a permanent executive and reorganize the party from coast ot coast.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King gave the welcoming address.

Mr. King is expected to tell the federation today or tomorrow what his decision is as to the probable time of the next general election.

At last week's caucus Mr. King was told by members of parliament from all provinces that they did not want a general election just now.

Changes Tune

But at the close of the caucus he said to newspapermen he had told his followers frankly that he could not say at the moment what the decision would be. He said it was possible he could tell them more at the federation meetings.

One member said today, as he entered the meeting place, that last Friday he had been certain there would not be an election this year.

"Now I would not bet a cent against an election this year," he added.

Most of Mr. King's cabinet colleagues were at the meeting this morning, along with many of those who attended the caucus last week and new arrivals of party workers, men and women, from every province.

All the provincial Liberal premiers except Hon. Stuart Garson of Manitoba and Hon. Adelard Godbout of Quebec were present. Mr. Godbout was scheduled to arrive this afternoon.

Harry Nixon, former Liberal premier of Ontario also attended.

Following the address of welcome the meeting appointed committees—one to prepare a slate of officers for the executive and another on resolutions.

It was reported R. T. Graham, Liberal member of the House of Commons for Swift Current, 56-year-old lawyer and veteran of the First Great War, was a likely candidate for the office of president, and that Gray Turgeon, Liberal member for Cariboo, would be one of the vice-presidents.

The meeting opening here today is the first to be held by the federation since the war began.

While the meeting was closed to the press a digest of proceedings was given to reporters later by Mr. Turgeon. He quoted Mr. King as saying that the war is far from won and that thousands of young Canadians will have to "suffer perhaps as soldiers have never had to suffer before."

5th Army Advances 10 Miles Naples May Be Outflanked

By N. NORGAARD—Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 27 — (AP). — Smashing a 10-mile-deep salient into the mountains, troops of Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark's Anglo-American 5th Army have captured the town of Cassano, 50 miles due east of Naples, Allied Headquarters announced to-day. As a result the Germans began a withdrawal in the Naples sector flanking their positions around the broad bay and port, and offered only rearguard opposition.

Simultaneously, the British 8th Army of General Sir Bernard Montgomery drove rapidly up the east coast to within 22 miles of the airport centre of Foggia, capturing the Adriatic towns of Cerignola and Margherita di Savoia, the latter a large salt manufacturing centre.

British troops, after crossing the Ofanto River which empties into the Gulf of Manfredonia, were meeting only the slightest resistance and were sweeping along on straight r ads across flat, open country which extends to 30 miles beyond Foggia.

(A Cairo broadcast, recorded by Reuters News Agency, said British troops were within 18 miles of Foggia, an air base with 12 satellite fields which would give Allied air forces a great springboard for attacks on all parts of the Balkans and much of Germany's south-eastern domain.

(The German communique admitted that Nazi army troops were carrying out another of their retreats "undisturbed by the enemy" in the eastern sector after destruction of traffic installation, but asserted attacks northwest and northeast of Salerno were repulsed).

In capturing Cassano, American troops drove to a point 18 miles northeast of Salerno and 10 miles southwest of Avellino, which with Benevento forms two of the main hubs of German communications in the area east of Naples. Benevento is 15 miles north of Avellino.

The troops also plunged up the Seleriver, farther to the east, for a gain of 4½ miles and captured Calabritto, a mountain community 27 miles east of Salerno. The town is just north of Valca, capture of which was announced yesterday.

In the central mountain sector, British forces also were marking up steady progress and extended their lines beyond Muro, 18 miles northwest of Potenza and 38 miles directly east of Salerno.

The Allied lines thus ran almost straight across Italy in a north-easterly direction, with only a slight bow in the middle.

Muro, 18 miles northwest of Potenza and 32 miles east of Salerno in the central sector, also fell to British forces.

The communique confirmed field dispatches which reported yesterday that the 8th Army, led by Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, on the east coast had crossed the Ofanto river.

At the centre of the line across the Peninsula, Gen. Montgomery's troops were announced as "still in contact with the enemy just north of Atella," capture of which was disclosed yesterday.

Canadian Units In Italy Headed For Taranto Gulf

By ROSS MUNRO—Canadian Press War Correspondent

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 26—(Delayed)—(CP Cable).—The 400-mile advance Canadian troops made from the Reggio beaches to southern Italy took them deep into the Calabrian Mountains, then out to the east coast of the Italian toe and up the roads to the Gulf of

During this push the Germans did not know where the Canadians were operating, so little could be said concerning their whereabouts. But that part of the campaign has been successfully completed, and here is where the Canucks went in their travels.

(Speculation as to the whereabouts of the Canadian force came from German propaganda sources several times during the battle for the Salerno beachhead. At one time the enemy had the Canadian 1st Division in that area, saying it had been leapfrogged up the coast and thrown in an as a reinforcement.)

Mountain roads wind east from Reggio right up the centre of the Italian toe and the main Canadian force took this route from the beaches. They went to Gambario, where the landscape looks like the Laurentian ski country, and pushed on to Delianuova, 25 miles from Reggio.

(This "main Canadian force" has never been officially identified, although it is generally believed to be made up of units from the Canadian 1st Division that fought through the Sicily campaign.

The Canadians were in the Delianuova area, where the first lateral road cuts across the toe, on Sept. 2. They continued on for 15 miles to Cittenova on the second lateral road. The Germans could have defended ooth these sectors but there was scarcely a shot fired.

Nazi Women Must Enter War Plants

Foreign Laborers Slow Down Vital Production

By EDWIN SHANKE
Associated Press Staff Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 27 (AP)—A million and a half more German women must be harnessed into war industry because of the failure of foreigners to produce, while at the same time German's raw material supplies have reached such a low level that the most extreme economy must be practised.

The longer the war lasts and economic attrition drains and strains Nazi resources, the clearer it becomes that the Nazis actually are not solving their manpower shortage by impressing foreign labor.

One Nazi district leader revealed in a speech that most German women would have to go to work in war plants, because "all the foreign workers are very bad. They have been used on important jobs and they loaf more than they work. Regular German workers must stay at the front. We must use more German women."

Curb Unessentials

Professor Albert Speer, production Czar, pointed to this and other difficulties in September when he decreed that all production not serving a war purpose must have special permission.

In Munich, street cars are being used to deliver express goods for the addressee to pick up because there are not enough hands to make home deliveries. Invalid soldiers are taking over Nazi party work formerly done by able-bodied men.

Nazi economic writers have been making astounding admissions regarding shortages.

In the light of Russian Army advances these acute supply shortages in this fifth year of war are most significant.

An official of "Deutschen Waffen und Minitionfabric," one of Germany's outstanding munitions firms, has said bluntly that Germany lacks lead for bullets. He listed brass, zinc, copper, wolfram, quicksilver, manganese and "to a certain extent even steel" among war-vital metals on which factories "must economize in the most extreme."

London Approves German Group

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(CP Cable.)—A Provisional Free Germany committee elected at a meeting of Germans here Saturday night is pledged to help "end Hitler's criminal war of conquest."

An appeal to the German army and the German people to oust the Nazis was drawn up. Its lines were similar to those of a manifesto issued recently by the National committee of Free Germans formed in Moscow.

The committee is headed by Dr. R. Kuczyneski, described as a statistician active in attempting to unite various democratic and progressive forces in Germany before Hitler came to power.

Other members were said to be Liberal. Social Democratic and Communist members of the Reichstag of 1933, with some representatives of the German underground movement and German refugee organizations in Britain.

Red Army Units Aim At Vitebsk

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Sept. 27. — (AP). — Pushing on from captured Smolensk with the aid of a sudden spell of good weather troops moved deeper to-day into White Russia, drawing hourly closer to the Gomel-Mogilev-Orsha-Vitebsk German defence line on the banks of the upper Dnieper river.

The Russians have reached the swamp, forest-covered land characteristic of White Russia. Progress from now on may be expected to be hampered should the arrival of fall spring rain or snow.

A dispatch to the Communist party organ, Pravda, said that as the Russians approached Gomel the

Mennonites Find Happiness

20th Century 'Pilgrims' Carved Out World Of Own

By STANLEY ROSS
Associated Press Staff Writer

ASUNCION, Sept. 27.—(AP).—In a world at war, 5,000 peace loving Mennonites have found happiness in the remote and forbidding Paraguayan-Chaco.

Almost out of touch with the rest of civilization, subject only to their own laws and taxes, speaking the dialect of old German, the 20th century "pilgrims" have created a world of their own. Except for a few battery radios and community-owned farm machines the Mennonites are living almost as primitive an existence as did the religious refugees who landed on Plymouth Rock in 1620.

Paraguay's Mennonites are former citizens of the United States, Russia, Canada, Britain, Holland and Spain who began their trek into the Chaco 16 months ago. The Paraguayan government granted them complete local autonomy, including religious freedom, exemption from military service and a 10-year exemption from import duties and national taxes. The tax-free agreement was later extended an extra decade.

The government has also prohibited the sale of liquor in or near the Mennonite colonies, a restriction it has been unnecessary to force. For, aside from several tribes of Nomad Indians, the Mennonites are the only settlers in the area.

Aided by friendly Indians, the hard-working Mennonites send some of the world's best cotton to Asuncion. They also produce tobacco, cotton-seed and peanut oil, using the proceeds for community works. They have a refrigeration plant, sawmill, cotton-gin, oil press, several trucks (now stalled for lack of gasoline) and farm machinery.

Dnieper River Battle Reaches Crisis

Mud Bogs Down Red Transports Bringing Supplies As Nazis Retreat

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The bloody battle of the Dnieper—750 miles of hell along the winding reaches of Europe's third biggest river—has reached its crisis in a struggle for the crossings of this expansive waterway behind which the retreating Hitlerites hope to take refuge unless the onrushing Russians gain control of the passages.

It is one of the great dramas of the war. The Nazis have been racing back in costly confusion which in places has taken on the nature of that most dreaded of military misfortunes—a rout. German loss of life and material have been colossal.

Now that pursued and pursuers are close to the Dnieper barrier, the Fuehrer's forces are threatened with double disaster: (1) Being caught and annihilated at many places before they can make the crossings; (2) Losing control of the feasible passages of the river and allowing the Reds to get across to cut up and smash the disorganized German front.

Many Slain

Already many Nazis have been slain on the eastern bank, within sight of their defences across the way. Moscow reports great numbers of them have been forced into the icy waters of the river where they have drowned.

The Nazis doubtless have been praying to Hitler—or whomever it is they pray to, if at all—that the Russians would be bogged down in the sea of mud produced by the Autumn rains. The Russians suffer the disadvantage of greatly extended communications through a country in which the railways and highways have been destroyed by the enemy. The Germans, on the other hand, have been falling back along comparatively good communications which at least permitted fast movement of men, if not of heavy equipment.

But the rains have come and turned the terrain into a mass of clinging mud.

Mud Traps Cars

In the drive on the Dnieper, the Red motor transport and even caterpillar-equipped machines have been sucked in the mire until it seemed they couldn't move. Still the Muscovites have driven through it, bringing along their artillery and supplies.

On the whole, it looks as though in Smolensk the Russians have discovered the Achilles heel of the German line. Through the Smolensk gateway they may be able to pour disaster upon the Nazis, even if it's impossible to achieve the vital crossings of the Dnieper farther south.

Veto World Police Plan

Prefer Larger Nations Keeping Standing Armies

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—(AP).—There is a growing disposition among top United States policy-making officials to discount entirely all talk of a world police force to maintain peace after this war.

In diplomatic as well as military quarters the view is frequently expressed that a peace-enforcing organization made up from the military and naval services of the United Nations would be unwieldly and impractical.

The counter-proposal to which the United States Government is understood to be giving most serious consideration is that each of the United Nations, but particularly Britain, the United States, Russia and China, should keep in service land, sea and air forces sufficient to discourage any acts of aggression.

This is the principle which underlay State Secretary Cordell Hull's statement, in his speech on foreign policy earlier this month, that maintenance of peace must be based on the willingness of co-operating nations to use force if necessary.

According to the principle broadly stated by Hull, each country participating in some future world organization for peace—whether based on a system of alliances, a world court or a league — would support peace forcefully in two ways: by maintaining an army and navy able to cope with any predictable outbreak and by always being willing to use those forces when necessary.

FEARING SUICIDE SEA BATTLE HUN SAILORS MUTINY ON WARSHIPS

Three Armies Converge On Finschhafen

By OLEN W. CLEMENTS
Associated Press Staff Writer.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTH-WEST PACIFIC, Sept. 27 — (AP). — Japanese defenders of Finschhafen, with their hands already more than full in coping with Australian troops at their very doorstep, to-day stood the imminent and additional risk of being swept up from all sides.

Hardly more than 20 miles to the rear of their position on the north-eastern tip of New Guinea was another Allied force pushing steadily eastward along the shore of the Huon Gulf from captured Lae.

On their land flank, 10 miles or less distant, was tsill a third Allied ground element, a section of the Australian jungle troops who debarked on the coast six miles north of Finschhafen five days ago.

To-days communique from Allied Headquarters placed the force from Lae at Hanisch Harbor, nearly two-thirds of the way to Finschhafen from its starting point.

Pincers Closing.

The inland arm of the pincers from the north was said to have touched Sattelberg, north-west of Finschhafen and six miles from the coast, as long ago as September 24. Since then it may have aproached much closer to the Japanese base.

But the main body of the seaborne Australians presented the enemy with his most pressing problem. These seasoned jungle fighters were reported to be scarcely three-quarters of a mile from the heart of Finschhafen itself and to have come up against the core of enemy defences on the north — sturdy earthworks and elaborate trenches.

Wait For Reserves.

There, in the face of stiffened resistance, the pace of their advance slowed, but a headquarters spokesman gave the Japanese no cause to believe their positions were secure.

The drive was slackened, he explained, only so reinforcements could be brought up and the final attack made with full assurance of success.

There was little respite, either, for enemy forces holding mountain positions in the interior of northeastern New Guinea or seeking to withdraw to less immediately vulnerable bases along the north coast of the island.

Allied Airacobra attack bombers and big four-engined planes made two sweeps September 24 and 25 along the Upper Ramu River valley and supply trails linking it with Madang. Bridges were blasted, roads destroyed and troop centres set afire by 75 tons of bombs.

Allied airpower also engaged in bombing and strafing missions over the whole island war zone from Selaru, southwest of New Guinea, eastward to Kolombangara, in the central Solomons.

Through Mountains.

British troops who had landed between Reggio and San Giovanni had taken the west coast road up Calabria province and progressed at about the same speed as did the Canadians, though they did not have terrible mountains to contend with.

The Canadians by twisting through mountains and then going over to the east coast travelled farther than any other force in Italy.

While the main Canadian strength was going through the mountains, one patrol swung around the southwest tip of the Italian toe, reaching Melito and going north to link up with the divisions at Gambarie. (Presumably this is a reference to Maj.-Gen. Guy Simons' Canadian 1st Division.)

Other Canadian patrols kept going along the east coast road from Melito and reached Locri. Canadian Headquarters reached the Locri area Sept. 9 and there the speed of the advance was stepped up.

The 8th Army had the task of getting into Southern Italy as fast as possible to relieve the situation around Salerno Bay, south of Naples, where the Germans in the opening stages of the campaign hammered the Anglo-American 5th Army post landings. The 8th had to make a long-range flanking movement to draw the Germans from the eastern sector of Salerno Bay and speed was the answer.

The Canadian commander formed a battle group which was called "the Locri force" and this was given the assignment to push right ahead along the east coat towards the Gulf of Taranto.

With tanks, infantry and guns, the Locri force thrust forward over road demolitions and around blown bridges to occupy Catanzao on the Gulf of Squillace. For days this force commanded by a tank colonel was even out of wireless touch with headquarters, it was moving so far ahead.

Capture Cotrone

The rest of the Canadians followed up as the Locri force went through Catanzaro and swung right to Cotrone, a port on the bulge of the Italian foot. The coast highway here was in better shape than the mountain roads and the division swept rapidly northwards. During the advance it was expected daily that the Germans would stop to fight somewhere.

But the story was one of pursuit of enemy demolition parties and covering forces which would blow up bridges, crater the roads and then pull out with the Canadians steaming up behind them. Leading the advance was the battle group of infantry, tanks and guns.

Going day and night, it prodded forward and on Sept. 20 captured a town after some fighting in the streets.

For several days it was nip and tuck for the Canadians pushing on the town.

As the 8th Army moved into the line and built up its strength, the whole Salerno Bay picture changed for the better and the fight of the British and American troops on that bloody bridgehead turned into victory.

fighting was becoming more violent, with the Germans throwing in large numbers of tanks in an attempt to halt the advance.

The day's biggest struggle appeared to be up and down certain sectors of the Gomel-Chernigov highway. The Red Army has taken Repki on this highway and is beating its way northward toward Gomel.

Principal Red Army objectives of the moment appeared to be:

Vitebsk—The Red Army was 20 to 30 miles from this big base inside White Russia. The Soviets are in possession of scores of villages just to the east of the city and are making steady progress of from three to five miles daily.

Orsha— Next big city south of Vitebsk on the Smolensk-Minsk highway, is the junction of three railways. The Red Army was 57 miles to the southeast at captured Monastyrschina.

Mogilev—39 miles south of Orsha, is under threat from three directions: From the east from Tziganovka; from the northwest from Monastyrschina, and the southeast from captured Khotemsk in White Russia.

on that village ahead to scare any Boche out of it?"

The Major shrugged politely. "I wouldn't do it. The Jerries have got to leave this place tonight anyhow and we don't want any unpleasantness with the Italians."

Our control car had been in full view of the woods for an hour when suddenly a German 75 began paying us attention. Five shells burst in the air behind us.

"What a vicious noise," commented the Major coolly. "Another 60 minutes and we could have cleaned up this German pocket. Now we will have to stop for the night and sent out the infantry to do the job."

Report Crews Sabotage German Fleet

Tirpitz, Scharnhorst Damaged In Norwegian Fjord

LONDON, Sept. 27—(CP). — A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Stockholm said today that rebellious crews sabotaged three German capital ships, the Tirpitz, Scharnhorst, and Luetzow, as they lay at anchor in Alten Fjord in northern Norway following news of the surrender of the Italian fleet.

The dispatch, which carried no further details, was not confirmed, but it was known the ships have been held in Norwegian waters and Norwegian sources in London said all three of the vessels as well as the pocket battleship Admiral Scheer took part in the German raid on the Arctic Island of Spitsbergen early this month.

The Tirpitz, completed in 1941, is a battleship of more than 40,000 tons, while the Scharnhorst, completed in 1939, is 26,000 tons, and the Luetzow, formerly the pocket battleship Deutschland, is 10,000 tons.

Some London quarters were inclined to credit the dispatch on the basis of unconfirmed rumors of outbreaks and disorder among the crews which were said to fear the Nazi Admiralty was planning a suiside battle with the British fleet.

Such a venture has been the subject of considerable unofficial speculation in London. It was believed the ships might leave their Norwegian haven in force to attack the northern supply route to Russia, thereby involving the British home fleet in an ocean search of far greater proportions than that entailed in tracking down the Bismarck.

For more than a year the three ships and at least two cruisers of the 10,000-ton Hipper class and a number of fast and powerful destroyers have been penned up in harbors in the vicinity of Trondheim.

The Germans said last week a small British submarine had sneaked into one Norwegian harbor in an attempt to torpedo the Tirpitz but had been unsuccessful.

German E-Boat Sent To Bottom

LONDON, Sept. 27—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today that at least one German E-boat was sunk and several others were damaged Saturday in a clash which developed when British light naval forces intercepted a flotilla of Nazi ships off the east coast of Britain. The announcement said the British trawler Franc Tireur was sunk in the action.

The British ships which included trawlers, Corvettes and destroyers engaged the Nazi craft shortly after midnight and the German ships started to withdraw. Two motor launches set out in pursuit and one of the two rammed a German boat which was then set on fire by British guns.

The German crew abandoned ship just before it was destroyed by an explosion.

Another group of German E-boats was engaged at close quarters and some of them were hit but poor visibility prevented accurate observation of results.

The Berlin radio, meanwhile, claimed several of the British craft were damaged, but made no reference to German losses.

Use Lamp Posts

These shortages are showing up in practical ways even after five years of scrap collections. Street lamp posts, for example, are slated for war melting pots. Breweries are surrendering their copper kettles and copper alloy, using substitute utensils.

One Swede who fought on the eastern front with the Germans as a volunteer said soldiers no longer are permitted to shoot as much ammunition as they please. Every hand grenade must count and war vehicles must no longer be warmed up—a gas-saving measure.

An example of what is happening in Germany was given by a worker who recently arrived in Sweden after spending four months in a metal plant. Between the end of April, and Sept. 1, 1942, he said, production deteriorated in the plant by 40 per cent.

Farmers Bring Young Pigs For Market Sale

Chickens 35 to 37 cents a pound, year olds down to 30 cents, butter 40 cents, eggs 35 cents a dozen to 48 cents.

These were some of the price staples on the local market Saturday, unchanged from the previous week.

In the outdoor section a group of farmers had brought many of the apparent excess of young pigs, some of them six weeks old and others two months, ten weeks and so on.

There were scores of them, the youngest selling down to $5.50 and $5 a pair, and the oldest up to $7 and $8 a pair. Some of the producers said the demand was light, and if some further subsidy was not forthcoming from the government farmers would get rid of a great number of young pigs rather than attempt to feed them through the winter.

According to the weekly report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture the price of young pigs has been weaker throughout the province during the last three weeks.

The fruit and vegetable men unloaded a large quantity of their garden and orchard harvest. Harry Falls of Bailieboro, sold two truck loads, including green beans at 15 cents a quart.

Here are some of the odds and ends: Hubbard squash 15-20, 25 cents each; egg plant two for 15c; pepper squash 2 for 15c; broccoli 10c a head; celery 10c a bunch; tomatoes 35 and 40 cents for six quarts; beets and carrots, 35c for a six quart basket; cucumbers 50c for six quarts; vegetable marrows 10c each; cabbage 10c each; cauliflowers 10c to 25c each.

Yellow Globe Danvers onions 75 cents a pack; potatoes, $1.75 to $2 a bag. Melons 5c to 16c.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill to the effect that difficult times are still ahead, said Mr. Turgeon.

Mr. King outlined reasons for calling the meeting and predicted its discussions would assist the party. The Liberal federation was a federation of provincial associations and its functions were "policy-creation and policy circulation."

Has New Job

Mr. McLarty outlined the work the federation could do in building up the strength of the party in the country and in assisting the government on policy formation and in keeping in touch with the people.

The first federation secretary and a former president, Senator Norman Lambert said the federation was distinct from the election organization of the party, Mr. Turgeon told reporters. The Senator said its functions were essentially related to policy and doctrine and their dissemination, rather than to campaign machinery.

On behalf of a committee appointed to organize the meeting Roy Graham, member of parliament for Swift Current, submitted a report which was under consideration at the noon recess.

It recommended setting up the following committees, with suggested chairmen, nominating committee, D. A. McNiven, member for Regina; Federation organization committee, A. W. Roebuck, member for Toronto Trinity; resolutions committee, Brooke Claxton, member for Montreal St. Lawrence - St. George; finance committee, J. A. Blanchette, member for Compton.

The meeting here is to elect a permanent federation executive and reorganize the party from coast to coast.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 27— (CP). — Good general buying, coupled with light offerings, advanced wheat futures into higher ground on Saturday on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. October posted a new seasonal hight of $1.30. Final quotations were ⅝ to 1⅝ cents a bushel higher.

Eire took close to 500,000 bushels of wheat from the pit to bring export business in the past week to more than 6,000,000 bushels.

Cash wheat trade was small owing to the tightness in the October future. Fair amounts of oats and barley were taken to meet current feeding requirements in Eastern Canada.

Rye futures were stronger, and values reached higher levels on light buying.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest
Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. Church Leaders In Missions Visit St. Paul's

Special services were held in St. Paul's Presbyterian church on Sunday when two noted missionary leaders were present in the persons of Rev. E. H. Johnson, formerly of Manchuria and Miss Laura K. Pelton, secretary of the Women's Missionary Society

Mr. Johnson spoke at the morning service in which he took as his subject, "Christians Hold the World Together." In opening Mr. Johnson referred to Mr. and Mrs. Davis, former missionaries from St Paul's, who worked in Manchuria with him. When missionary work there became impossible on account of the Japanese invasion, Mr. and Mrs. Davis went to the Phillipines and were there when the Japs overrun the islands. For almost two years no word was heard from them but recently they were reported in a prisoner-of-war camp in the Phillipines.

In discussing 'Missions' Mr. Johnson stressed that the work done by the missionaries was only carrying out the instruction of Jesus Christ. The disciples of Christ's day were missionaries and it was only through them that this world and its people to-day know about Jesus Christ and are able to call themselves Christians. While there have been periods of sorrow and disappointment down through the centuries it has been the Christians and the Christian nations who have held the world together.

At the morning service Mrs. Jessie Spencely and Tel. James Hawthorne rendered the beautiful duet, "I Gave My Life For Thee."

At the Sunday school in the afternoon both Miss Pelton and Mr. Johnson were present and Miss Pelton told a short missionary story and Mr. Johnson illustrated his address with pictures taken in Manchuria.

Miss Pelton was the speaker at the evening service and she took as her subject, "The Church Has the Answer" and in her discourse told how the great problems of to-day could all find a solution in the church.

The choir loft was occupied by the men's choir and the junior and senior choir were also in attendance. Following the services a rally of the young people was held.

Sunday Lecture Attracts Large Audience

A lecture on "Christian Science; The Truth About God and Man," was delivered on Sunday at the Centre Theatre by William D. Kilpatrick, C.S.B., of Detroit, Mich., before one of the largest audiences to attend one of these meetings in years. Mrs. Mabel Loudon introduced the speaker, and the stage of the theatre was decorated with seasonable flowers.

Times like the present must give pause to the man who is inclined to think and weigh events in the light of intelligent analysis. One cannot look upon a world torn with strike, war, hatred, and all the baser passions of men, without some contrasting or contradicting emotions. The question is bound to suggest itself to the thoughtful as to just where the onus of guilt must rest for the mental and moral upheaval which seems to be tearing down and destroying the spiritual and intellectual building of the Christian era. Where, one might ask, does Christianity fit into this picture of moral desolation? What, in the light of present-day savagery and unrestrained rapine, has the Bible accomplished in the hundreds of years it has been looked upon as a guide and manual for the conduct of Christian men and nations? One might be tempted to question within himself—Is there a God? If so, why all this murderous destruction, this strife between Christian peoples, this cancerous growth of hate, jealousy, and revenge?

These inner questionings of the human consciousness, these doubts which stealthily and insistently steal into thought, these suggestions of pessimism and skepticism, are not without justification; and except for the explanation and light which Christian Science throws upon the Bible and the teachings of the phophets, Jesus, and the apostles, I am doubtful whether a convincing reconciliation of the present with the unequivocal promises of Holy Write could be evolved. However, through the revelation of the spiritual significance of Bible teachings which Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, has given to the world in her book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and other writings, the seeming ambiguities, inconsistencies, and contradictions which present-day conditions emphasize, are explained and all doubts and misunderstandings are replaced with the spiritual conviction and assurance which comes with the enlightenment thus provided.

I am convinced divine prophecy, expressed through the pages of the Bible from cover to cover, is today being fulfilled not only in the history of the human race but also in the appearance at this time of Christian Science as a world movement—as the "Comforter," which Jesus foretold and promised would lead us into all truth. The presence of Christian Science at this juncture in the affairs of men is not merely timely and opportune, but it is God's certain and directed answer to humanity's cry for freedom from doubt, skepticism, fear and the bondage of hate, mad ambition, covetousness, dishonesty, policital intrigue, strife, war paganism and the anti-Christ of totalitarianism. Christian Science not only gives the student of this faith a full and analytical understanding of present-day events, but it supplies, with no uncertainty or equivocation, the answer to all human questionings and forebodings. It provides assurance of the eventual fulfillment of God's promises to deliver His people from the thralldom of human strife, contention, bitterness, and hate.

To those not blessed with the stabilizing and assuring influences with which the study of the Bible, in the light of Christian Science, endows one, the future may seem to hold little of promise or hope, but when, through the lens of spiritual perception, gained in the study of Christian Science, the mists of strife, struggle, and rancor are pierced, there is revealed a background of spiritual beauty, holiness, and permanence which nothing can efface.

COBOURG

French Guests Repay Hosts With Robbery

COBOURG, Sept. 27 (ENS) — Repaying their hosts by allegedly stealing their belongings, four French Canadian youths were locked up Sunday on vagrancy charges, which will be increased to theft. The quartette are said to have stolen two leather windbreakers and two woollen coats from Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Denyes of Colborne on Sunday morning. The accused are Lionel Langlois, Roger Vaillancourt, Emile Darveau and Maurice Beauloin.

According to Provincial Constable Douglas Wilson of Colborne, who investigated, the four Quebec transients called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Denyes, west of Colborne Saturday night. Mrs. Denyes, with rural hospitality, fried them all the eggs and potatoes they could eat and then Mr. Denyes bedded them down for the night in the barn.

Sunday morning two of the transients did a meagre amount of work around the place and left soon after. The other two disdained doing any work and also departed. Not long afterward, Mr. Denyes discovered that he had been robbed. Assisted by a neighbor he rounded up Darveau and Beaudoin, while Provincial Constable Douglas Wilson located the other two near Grafton.

All four were taken to Cobourg and locked up.

Cobourg Briefs

Only 78 made the Sunday trip over to Cobourg from Rochester on Sunday to wind up the season. The weather was very chilly, in contrast to the warm Sundays of last month, when 1,500 often came over on the local car ferries.

Girls from many different countries are registered for the fall term at Hatfield Hall, Cobourg, an increase of over 30 per cent. over last year. Besides from Canada, girls are registered from the United States, the Bahamas, Jamaica, Newfoundland and England.

The Blood Donor Clinic will be held on Tuesday of this week in the basement of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The clinic was to have been held on Wednesday but due to the fact that many of the doctors will be away attending a medical convention, it will be a day earlier.

Quisling Faces Cabinet Split

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 27 — (AP). —A wide-open split appeared to be developing to-day in the forces of Vidkun Quisling on the third anniversary of his taking over the Norwegian Government under the auspices of Hitler.

Information reaching the Norwegian Legation in Stockholm from Norway indicated that five of the eight members of his cabinet were ready to resign after a dispute.

The split was said to have been precipitated by Eivino Blehr, Minister of Food and Supplies, who submitted a memorandum which declared that Quisling's state of emergency decree of August 16 had created "an extraordinarily bad impression on members of the government."

Four other members of the cabinet were said to have supported Blehr and took the position that Quisling's decree apparently meant that "Germany regards a state of war between Norway and Germany as existing."

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 27 — (ENS)—The Bemersyde Chapter of the I.O.D.E. is planning to hold a tag day to raise money for their war services fund on October 16, according to an announcement made following their meeting held last week.

The meeting was held in the Chapter's rooms and was presided over by the Regent, Miss Eleanor Ferris. Between now and October 30 the Chapter has set as its objective the filling of fifty ditty bags, and to push this work plans to hold a shower for the items these will contain, were made. Each member was asked to turn in one of the long list of articles (valued at not less than 25 cents) at the next meeting.

Furth... arrangements were made for the bingo which is being conducted by the Chapter in connection with the fall fair here next Wednesday and the war work convener revealed a number of items, which will go on display in the war work exhibits section, had been selected.

The Salvage Convener, Mrs. A J. Armour, made a renewed request or old newspapers, which are again to be collected locally, and Mrs. J D. McEachern revealed Group 6 is meeting an enthusiastic response in the sale of tickets being offered on a turkey. A cash donation of $3.00 to the War Services Fund from Mrs. E. Henson was acknowledged.

Marshall As Generalissimo

The report that General George C. Marshall, the American Chief of Staff, has been "nominated" to the post of Commander-in Chief of the Anglo-American forces has several implications. It is an assurance that plans are being made, or have already been made, for operations on the largest and most complex scale and that the problem of choosing a man to put the plans into operation is now being considered. The difficulty of making such a choice is enormous; not only must the appointee be capable of doing the job, but he must also be acceptable to large numbers of intensely critical people in all the countries concerned. No one will envy him his responsibilities, but many will envy him the power and the glory which his exalted position brings. The cautious use of the word "nominated", in the report about General Marshall, shows that the appointment is not yet fully agreed upon.

The opinion of the public in such a decision is of little value, yet it looks as though General Marshall would be an excellent choice for this tremendous job. As Chief of Staff he has done splendid work in directing the American forces, and it is as an organizer of operations that his reputation has been gained. He is not a field commander, but he is a brilliant co-ordinator and organizer. In the first Great War he made his reputation as Chief of Operations for the American First Army; he did most of the organization for the St. Mihiel offensive. When the First Army was in sore straits in the Meuse-Argonne offensive it was Marshall who set them on their feet again by a series of brilliant re-groupings.

The Anglo-American Generalissimo will have to be an organizer of the highest order. The fighting will be done by such men as Wavell, Eisenhower, Alexander, McArthur, Montgomery, Patton, Anderson, Clark, Mountbatten, Devers and McNaughton, and it will be the Generalissimo's job to use these men and the great forces which they command to the best possible advantage; it is responsibility such as has never fallen to any soldier in history. There is evidence that Churchill and Roosevelt think that Marshall is the man for the job, and the confirmation of his appointment to the post for which he is now "nominated" may be expected any day.

In this connection it may not be amiss to comment briefly upon the somewhat odd situation in the Pacific theatre of war. Lord Louis Mountbatten has been put in full charge of operations there, and General Douglas McArthur has made a statement on that appointment which appears to be ambiguous. There are indications that General McArthur thinks that he has been ill-used. It is always unfortunate when men in the armed services of their country make statements which can be interpreted as appeals for popular sympathy, and this is not the first time General McArthur has shown pique. The whole Allied world admires what he has done, and will give full credit for what he will do in the future, but his personal ambition to return to the Philippines cannot be allowed to overshadow the desire of all the Allies to reach the Imperial Islands of Japan.

Danger From Military Trucks

Although Canada is most decidedly a country at war, we cannot see that it is necessary for everything which the army does in this country to be done as though we were under fire. We refer especially to the presence on the public highways of military trucks, travelling at night with insufficient light.

It is not uncommon for motorists driving at night to come suddenly upon large military convoys which have blackout shades over their right headlights and little or no light showing in the rear. Civilian drivers are prosecuted for driving with only one headlight, for by so doing they cause confusion to other drivers; when from five to forty trucks are driving in the same way the confusion is greatly increased. Military trucks, also, are among the largest on our roads, and unless they have lights to show their width, both front and back, they are very dangerous. The blackout regulation is no doubt imposed on the convoys in order to give the drivers practice in driving under these conditions. But, in the interest of public safety, could the regulation not be relaxed when the convoys take to the most freqdently-travelled roads?

There is danger also, we feel, in the steps which are taken for inspecting cars on the highway when a search is being made for escaped prisoners of war. Often motorists are stopped by a small group of soldiers who signal to the driver with a flashlight. But if the driver does not know that a search is being made he may assume that the man with the light is merely a soldier looking for a lift, and he may drive on without stopping. On more than one occasion drivers who have done this have been shot at, and hit. The soldiers, presumably, are ordered to make a thorough search and may reasonably suspect a car which rushes past them.

Why not give such searchers red lanterns, or at least red flashlights, so that the motorist will be warned that something unusual is afoot, and draw up beside them? Such signals would not warn an escaping prisoners any more quickly than the present ones, and the danger of shooting a timid driver would be greatly decreased.

Nobody, it must be repeated, wants to hinder the military in any necessary training or searching, but their present customs in the matters referred to are dangerous to the general public on the highways.

The Truth About Hess

More than two years after Rudolf Hess dropped on British soil Mr. Anthony Eden revealed to the British House of Commons the reasons for his strange visit. We cannot suppose that the revelation came as a great surprise to the people of Britain, for there have been many accounts of the Hess flight in the press and in periodicals, and the best of these were accurate in their outlines and in most of their details. Mr. Eden's speech, however, makes the explanation official.

When the war began we had the highest respect for the German intelligence and for the ingenuity of the Nazis. We tended, indeed, to think that they were much more clever than we could possibly be. Nowadays we are beginning to feel that German intelligence and Nazi ingenuity have serious blind-spots. The idea that the British would make a shameful deal with Hess to end the war was an utterly fantastic one; the idea that the Duke of Hamilton would be able to swing the deal was equally absurd; if the Nazis knew anything about British life they would know that no Duke, however rich or popular or powerful he may be, is able to override Parliament or the power of the Prime Minister.

The suggestion for the Hess flight came from Dr. Karl Haushofer, the great exponent of geopolitics and one of the chief brains of the Nazi organization. The war has shown that geopolitics—at least as expounded by Dr. Haushofer—is a lot of bunk, and the Hess debacle shows Dr. Haushofer to be a strangely uniformed and misguided man. The Nazis, for all their cleverness, must be very gullible folk if they accept such fanciful schemes as the Hess mission, and put them into action.

The Nazis are German romantics of an advanced type. We know how strong and ruthless they can be, how keen they are in detail and how formidably they can fight. And we are also finding out how soft they are. Persistent reports from occupied countries tell us how amenable their officials are to bribery and corruption; knowledge gained from prisoners of war show us that they are strong as iron, but that they have also the brittleness of iron when they are hit in the right place; and the story of the Hess exploit shows us that they are unrealistic in their estimation of races which they despise. After the war the Germans might do well to encourage the tourist trade, so that they may see what real people are like.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Men often criticize girls who wear revealing garments, but they ignore those who don't.

To hear the Nazis tell it, the Russians aren't fighting fair—they're hitting below the wheat belt.

Hitler attacked Russia because he thought that she was a menace to Germany. How great a menace, he has still to learn!

In Britain shortage of labour has led many women to attempt to sweep their own chimneys. And, as London Opinion expresses it, this puts a new complexion on the mater.

Farming News and Views

By
HON. DUNCAN MARSHALL

IN conversation with a livestock farmer in Western Ontario he expressed the opinion that one hundred million bushels of feed grain would be shipped to Ontario from the West this year. It is certainly very fortunate that we have this grain grown in Canada to supply our present demand for feed. Without this home grown grain a great many head of livestock would have to be sold and our breeding stock depleted. It is also fortunate that the Federal Government has been able to arrange for the payment of transportation charges so this grain is available to Eastern farmers at the same price as at the head of the lakes. What is more important to farmers in Ontario is that price ceilings have been placed on this feed grain so that the crop failure in this province is not going to add to the farmer's burden by compelling him to pay famine prices for feed.

The publication, some few weeks ago, of a few prices in Newfoundland, where there are few price ceilings, indicates what would have happened. In Newfoundland beef was recently selling at over $1.00 per lb., eggs at $1.20 per dozen and butter at $1.25 per lb. As Newfoundland does not produce these products for its home needs the speculator has got in his fine work. The lack of feed grain in Ontario this year would have been a great opportunity for something similar to happen.

The production of beef and bacon as Canada's contribution to war demands is of the highest importance, and the preservation of our breeding stock has not only a present but a future value, so the feed to grow livestock and fit it for market is vital to Ontario farming, and the car loads of Western grain now being unloaded at stations all over this province are going a long way toward the avoidance of an agricultural calamity here.

Where we recall that just a few years ago much of the Prairie country was suffering from a near famine as a result of lack of rainfall, it looks like a law of compensation that when this province is suffering from excessive rains and destruction of crops, that the Western provinces have reaped two or three crops from which surpluses have been piled up sufficient to supply our present demands.

The storage facilities to take care of our huge surplus of grain in Canada, are extremely large and our building abilities have been taxed to their extremities to provide additional accommodation for storage of food in the form of grain, but Canada is thus not only protected from any famine threats but we are able to come to the rescue of other friendly nations that are or soon may be.

ANIMAL products are bound to become scarcer as time goes on and the war continues so that feed for the production of meat of all kinds is today of the highest importance. The recent shipment of small horses, or cayuses, from Alberta to California, to be used for meat, indicates something of the shortage of meat in the United States. There are a good many bunches of these small horses running wild in Alberta. They are useless for work, even when broken; are fat after a summer's grass and are being bought to be shipped to California for slaughter. Buyers are only paying 1c per lb. live weight for these cayuses delivered at shipping points. They will not be very dangerous competition with beef in the matter of price. There is likely a large European population in California to whom horse meat will not be objectionable. Getting these useless horses off the free range in Alberta will serve a useful purpose.

THIS has been a most encouraging year for weeds. Not only have they been well supplied with moisture but short crops naturally means more weeds. It is a sort of anomaly that when useful plants do not grow well weeds are always ready to take their place. There should be definite plans made to meet the weed menace now threatening Ontario farms. Wild carrots have flourished this year and when cut, in many places, have produced a new crop of blossoms and may go to seed later. This weed is a biennial plant and so any plan for eradication must be carried on for at least two years. Sheep will often do a good job on a pasture infested with wild carrot. They will nip off the blossoms and thus prevent it from going to seed, but the sheep have some help. The weed situation must not be neglected following an excessively wet year such as this or the toll of our crops taken by weeds, which is large now, will become excessive.

I drove through part of Lambton county some days ago and found many fields brilliant with Goldenrod. This flower is not always classed as a weed but when you see it in profusion along fences you may be sure that it is one of the varieties of this flower with a running rootstalk and that means a dangerous weed. Most of the bloom I saw was in fence corners and as in many cases these were filled with this "golden glow" it will take some work to get rid of it. Cattle will not eat it nor have I known of sheep feeding on it. These filled fence corners or strips along wire fences are very untidy and will not be good for crops on these fields. It may look more alarming than it is but it would be much better to get rid of it. This plant flourished on land where the fertility is greatly exhausted and is not a sign of good farming. Spraying it with a good chemical weed-killer along these fences would be the best plan.

REPORTS indicate that Alberta will market some 800,000 pigs this Fall while Ontario will produce about 500,000. Abundance of feed right at hand favors the Western province, but it would also require some effort on the part of the farmers themselves to do a job of this kind. This will be an all time high for hog production in Alberta, and it must also be kept in mind that it is more difficult to produce two liters a year in a climate like that of Alberta, than it is in Ontario. Alberta has made good progress, over a period of years, in the improvement of their type of hogs to conform with the British demand for choice Wiltshire sides.

WITH the feed situation as it is early pasture may be very necessary next spring. It is not too late to sow fall rye and this will give a very early and nourishing pasture. For pasture I would seed rather heavy, using a little over two bushels per acre, and if the pasture is needed through the summer, a grass mixture of timothy, blue grass, red top and orchard grass could be sown with the rye. The fall growth of rye creeps over the ground instead of standing up and this covering is a good winter protection. Such a field could then be plowed the last of July or early in August and be ready for fall wheat. A little sweet clover sown in the spring and then harrowed will make feed and improve the soil. I think we should not be afraid to put plenty of seed on land for pasture. Bare spots, even though not large, will give weeds a chance in a pasture. New seeding has come on so well this year that extra pasture may not be needed in the spring, but fall rye will give an early bite and that may be important.

I FIND quite a few farmers sowing winter barley this fall. Where it has been tried it has proved to be a good yielder of very plump grain. Experiments with it have been somewhat limited so far but results are encouraging. I found Harry Nixon seeding a little of it a week or two ago He had only two bushels but from reports of its success he was anxious to try it. If it does well in thi province it will help to get that much extra seeding done in the autumn.

THERE is quite a good deal of fall wheat sown along the way to Unionville. Some of it is up but most has just been seeded with a view to dodging the hessian fly. The grain has gone into a good seed bed and with a little rainfall it should come along well. There is enough soil moisture to give it a start, and probably carry it on for a time.

Choosing One's Own Education

A SARACEN UNIVERSITY had no program, no curriculum, no departments, no rules, no examinations; it gave no degrees nor diplomas. It was simply an institution of learning. Not of teaching, but of learning. A man, young or old, went to a university to learn what he wanted to know, just as an American goes to a grocery to get the food he wants.

Men who knew (or thought they knew) something, and wanted to teach it, opened a school to sell their knowledge. Success depended upon the demand for the knowledge they had. If they prospered, other teachers joined them. So the schools became universities, and century after century public-spirited men added buildings, just as individuals and groups of alumni add to American universities.

The teachers lectured in open classrooms. Anyone was welcome to listen. An incoming student wandered about, listening. When he decided upon the teacher he wanted, they discussed privately whatever he wanted to learn and needed to study, and agreed upon the fees. Then he joined the class regularly. If he was not satisfied, he could quit at any time and find another teacher. When he had learned what he wanted to know, he left the university to use his knowledge....

A thousand years after the Saracens built these universities, far away in time and on a continent that they never knew existed, a revolutionary leader, Thomas Jefferson—who knew little or nothing about the Saracens—realized the dream of his life when he created the University of Virginia. His dream was a new kind of education.

Proudly, almost bragging a little, he wrote to a friend in the medieval-university system of Harvard, "We shall allow them (the students) uncontrolled choice in the lectures they shall choose to attend. Our institution will proceed on the principle....of letting everyone come and listen to whatever he thinks may improve the condition of his mind."

For more than nine hundred years the University of Cairo proceeded on precisely that principle. Until the end of the nineteenth century, Europeans were not able to impose upon that university any tinge of the European belief that minds acquire knowledge, not by actively seeking to know, but by passively being taught whatever Authority decides that they should know.—From "The Discovery of Freedom," by Rose Wilder Lane. WartimeRole of Canadian Railways

(FROM KINGSTON WHIG-STANDARD)

ADDRESSING the Canadian Club of London earlier this week, Mr. D. C. Coleman, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, described the contribution to the war effort made by North American railways and declared that "it is safe to say that none of the warring nations has been better served by its railways than has the Dominion of Canada." It is a bold statement, and yet one which will, we think, meet with general acceptance both in this country and in others where the part played by Canada's railways is fully realized.

On more than one occasion, the tremendous increase in Canadian industrial output and export business resulting from the demands of war has been commented on in these columns and elsewhere. Amazement has been expressed that a national economy could expand to such vast proportions in so short a time and still be capably and efficiently handled. And throughout this expansion, it must be remembered, the heavy flow of raw materials and finished products has been mainly handled by the railroads of the Dominion. Without the exceptional elasticity displayed by Canadian railways in absorbing the mountainous increase of freight loadings, the war effort of this country would be a sorry thing.

In the final analysis, in a country of Canada's physical characteristics, railways must form the backbone of its transportation system. Waterways, highways and airlines are auxiliaries—important auxiliaries, but each one limited by its own particular nature from replacing completely the transcontinental networks of iron roads serving this Dominion. Especially is this fact obvious in the present emergency, when short supplies of the gasoline and rubber have curtailed motor transport, and when expansion of airborne traffic is prevented by the same shortages and by the nation's needs of planes and pilots for other purposes. Limitation of waterways is, of course, the closed season when inland navigation ceases.

Our railroads have had to take up the overload from these auxiliaries as well as handle their own phenomenally enlarged traffic, and they have had to do this at a time when the military needs of the nation have drawn heavily upon their personnel. Literally thousands of Canadian Pacific and Canadian National employees have answered the call of a higher duty, yet these great railroads continue to play their important part in wartime transport. When the economic side of Canada's war effort is under review, a large place must be set apart for the contribution made by the country's transcontinental railway systems.

Whitman Is America

Of course the essential elements of all first-class artistic and literary productions are always the same, just as nature, just as man, are essentially the same everywhere. Yet the literature of every people has a stamp of its own, starts from and implies antecedents and environments peculiar to itself.

Just as ripe, mellow, storied, ivy-towered, velvet-turfed England lies back of Tennyson, and is vocal through him; just as canny, covenanting, conscience-burdened, craggy, sharp-tongued Scotland lies back of Carlyle; just as thrifty, well-schooled, well-housed, prudent, and moral New England lies back of her group of poets, and is voiced by them,—so America as a whole, our turbulent democracy, our self-glorification, our faith in the future, our huge mass movements, our continental spirit, lie back of Whitman and are implied by his work....

In him the new spirit of democracy first completely knows itself, is fearless, tolerant, religious, aggressive, triumphant, and bestows itself lavishly upon all sides. It is at ease in the world, it takes possession, it fears no rival, it advances with confident step.—From 'Whitman," by John Burroughs. ((Boston: Houghton Mifflin.)

NO PAY

A gipsy fortune-teller dashed excitedly into a police station and rushed up to the desk-sergeant.

"Help! Police!" he cried. "My wife has run away. You must help me find her."

The sergeant eyed the gipsy.

"You're a fortune-teller aren't you?" he asked. "Why don't you study the cards and see where she is hiding?"

The gipsy wrung his hands.

"Yes," he howled. "But who's gonna pay me?"

CAMPBELLFORD

I.O.D.E. Girls Send Magazines

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 27 — (ENS)—The Trent Valley Chapter of the I.O.D.E. held its inaugural meeting of the season on Thursday evening when they met at the home of Mrs. G. A. Ironside, Booth Street to discuss plans for the coming months.

The Regent, Miss Betty Adamson, presided and a feature of the meeting was talk on "India" by Miss Aileen Parker, B.A. Three new names were added to the membership roll, Misses Gloria Anderson, Pauline Cassan and Shirley Rowe and Miss Adamson gave a report for the treasurer in the absence of that officer and she revealed there was a balance on hand of $19.75 in the general fund and $43.87 in the war fund.

It was announced that a large consignment of magazines was ready for shipment to I.O.D.E. headquarters in Hamilton. Regarding a request from fair officials, who asked that the branch put on a display of war work at the Fall Fair here, members announced this would not be possible since items suitable for such a display had already been forwarded to headquarters. As a part of their war work members decided on making as their special objective the sending of parcels, at Christmas, to girls from this district who are in any branch of the service. It was hoped that local citizens would assist them in this work by providing them with names and addresses of such girls.

Knox Emphasizes Japanese Battle

LONDON, Sept. 27 — (CP). — United States navy secretary Frank Knox asked the British press to-day to educate the public "to the necessity of fighting this Japanese war."

"Nothing would more disturb the growing American confidence in British co-operation than to believe the British feel that when Hitler is disposed of it all will be over," he told a press conference.

Asked if Prime Minister Churchill's recent statement had not dispelled all such feeling, the secretary replied:

"No, it hasn't been dispelled in America."

He added that during his current visit the attitude he found here "is the real war is in Germany and the other a sideshow."

Knox reiterated that although fully one-third of Japan's merchant fleet, including additions since Pearl Harbor, have been sunk, the war in the Pacific would be costly to the Allies and bitterly fought by the enemy to the end.

"You are a naval people," Knox told Britons, "and the war in the Pacific is the greatest naval war that has ever been fought by either us in the most difficult circumstances and against the best armed foe."

OMEMEE

Rev. W. Barfoot Visits Auxiliary

OMEMEE, Sept. 27 — (ENS). — The annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Deanery of Victoria was held in Christ Church, Omemee, this week.

The session opened at 10:30 a.m. with a celebration of the Holy Communion. The celebrant and preacher was Rt. Rev. W. F. Barfoot, Bishop of Edmonton. The service was in charge of the rector Rev. F. W. Pooley, assisted by the Rev. P. C. Howard of Bobcaygeon and Rural Dean of Victoria. About 100 members of the W.A. together with the clergy of the Deanery received Communion. Mrs. W. G. Stephenson presided at the organ, and the choir attended.

Luncheon was served by the ladies of Christ Church W.A. and St. John's, Emily. In spite of the wartime rationing a very satisfying meal was enjoyed.

Twenty Years Ago.

The afternoon session, which was in charge of the acting Deanery officer, Mrs. Isaacs of Lindsay, commenced with Intercession conducted by Mrs. W. Simpson of Blackstock. The address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. F. W. Pooley on behalf of Christ Church W.A. The speaker commented briefly on the uniqueness of the occasion inasmuch as the W.A. Deanery of Victoria was organized and met in Omemee for the first time exactly 20 years ago and that this year also marks the fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the branch of Christ Church.

Minutes of last meeting were read and adopted and the treasurer's report received, also correspondence from the Diocesan treasurer, Miss F. C. Kingston. Those of the Deanery called to Higher Service were then remembered and prayers for the present world crisis were offered by Mrs. Isaacs.

Permanent Rectories.

An inspiring missionary address was delivered by Bishop Barfoot. His Lordship spoke of conditions not only in his Diocese but of all Western Canada. He emphasized the need of permanent rectories for the Western clergy and the importance of those here in the East realizing that all our efforts are worth while. The offering was received and later in reply to an appeal was voted towards the furnishings of staff rooms at Fort George School.

Mrs. J. McKibbin then addressed the meeting, speaking of her work in connection with the Samaritan Club in Toronto and her more recent activities in conjunction with the Neighborhood Workers.

The next meeting of the Deanery will be held at Blackstock and the new Deanery officer appointed was Mrs. J. McKibbin of Fenelon Falls.

Archdeacon Simpson then closed the meeting with the benediction, after which afternoon tea was served.

Pte. Gauthier Dies On Gallows

LONDON, Sept. 27 (CP Cable)— A murder case believed unique in some respects in British criminal history ended Friday at Wandsworth prison in the hanging of Pte. Eugene Gauthier, French-Canadian soldier, for the Bren-gun murder of Mrs. Annette Pepper last March. The victim was the wife of a British prisoner of war.

Gauthier waited in the condemned cell for 60 days while his legal representatives sought a reprieve. This is believed the longest wait of this kind any convicted murderer has had in Britain.

His counsel appealed the conviction to the court of criminal appeal and when this failed the Canadian Government requested that the case be taken to the House of Lords. The Attorney-General, Sir Donald Somervell, refused a fiat permitting this.

The Crown charged Gauthier killed Mrs. Pepper with a Bren gun because he was jealous of her friendship with another soldier.

WESTCLOX LOSE SECOND GAME AND TITLE CHANCE TO STRATFORD

Locals Fail To Hit With Runners On

Inability to come through with hits when they had runners in scoring position proved fatal to Westclox girls here Saturday afternoon when they were beaten 5 to 3 by Stratford Kroehlers, who thus took the provincial playoff round in two straight games.

The Peterborough representatives had thirteen left on bases. Right off the reel they lost a chance to break well in front in the opening inning when they filled the bases with nobody out and then couldn't score and in the final frame they had the tieing runs on second and third, with not a hand down and again couldn't produce a hit in the clutches.

With a win in hand Stratford reserved their ace pitcher Hazel Baynton for a third battle if necessary and used Greta Harmer. The strategy worked, although they had to call on Hazel Baynton to save the game in the final inning. She came in with runners on second and third and no one out and snuffed out the up-rising in a hurry, retiring the next three batters.

Greta Harmer who was the Kroehler starting pitcher was not exactly a mystery, the Westclox getting to her for twelve hits but she was steady in the jams and in addition had almost perfect control, allowing but one walk and that to the first batter who faced her. Kroehlers took no chances in the last inning and the relief pitching of Hazel Baynton saved the day.

Isobel Bullock went the route for Westclox and while she was not hit hard had trouble with her control, aggravated by some erratic umpiring. The Westclox pitcher issued seven bases on balls and five of those passes blossomed into runs. In addition she got no breaks defensively for three of the Stratford runs were unearned. The first two came after a throw that should have meant a side-retiring double-play had been dropped and the third cashed in on a passed ball with two out and the batter struck out on the next ball.

Good Fielding Plays

There were some neat fielding plays by both teams. The brightest defensive gem by Westclox was a running one-handed pickup by Marg. Hawthorne for a force play at second. Doris Walker made two nice running catches in right field for the winners and the first should have resulted in a double-killing for she followed it with a perfect throw to third that should have cut off a a base-runner. Helen Doubrough, at first for Kroehlers went far to gather in a foul fly and Ruby Huras in centre field had a long gallop to gather in a short drive to right centre.

Betty Appel was the only Stratford batter to get more than one hit. Beryl Dobbin, Westclox catcher, had three clean singles in five trips to the plate and Aggie Anderson, Isobel Bullock and Marg. Hawthorne each came through with two hits, the last-named having a homer and a single and Aggie Anderson a double and a single.

There was no scoring in the first two innings, although Westclox blew two good chances. In the last of the first Aggie Anderson walked, Viola McLean dropped a single into centre and Isobel Bullock singled through short to fill the bases. However Marg. Hawthorne fanned, Marg. Watson popped to first and Betty Appel, Stratford shortstop threw out Beryl Dobbin. In the second Doris Walker and Jean Castle both got on on errors with one out but the next two batters went out in order.

Stratford Score First

Kroehlers started the scoring in the third. With one away Gladys Heinbuch drew a pass and Evelyn Easson also walked. Doris Harloff was out on a nice catch by Doris Walker but the runners advanced after the catch when Marg. Hawthorne dropped the throw to third Jean Aiken received first on interference by the catcher filling the bases. Betty Appel dropped a single into right, the first hit off Isobel Bullock, to score Gladys Heinbuch and Evelyn Easson. The play on the second run was decidedly close but Umpire Page called the runner safe. Ruby Huras struck out to end the inning.

Westclox evened it up in their half. After Isobel Bullock and Marg. Hawthorne had popped to Betty Appel at short Marg. Watson scratched a single off Gladys Heinbuch's glove and Beryl Dobbin dropped a Texas Leaguer into centre. Barbara Rome doubled down the first base line,

LAWN BOWLING

Any bowling that takes place on our greens after the end of this month will have to be done during the afternoon and very early in the evening. We have been informed that there will be no lights for night bowling after September 30.

And looking over our 1942 records we find that we did considerable daylight bowling up to and including Monday, October 12. Almost every afternoon the ladies held some kind of a tournament, and then the men's games committee scheduled something on Wednesdays and Saturdays and wound up the season on Thanksgiving Day with a mixed tournament.

True, we had a few rainy days during the early days of October, but we also had a lot of afternoon bowling.

The last open tournament to be held by our club for this year is scheduled for this Wednesday, September 29. It is being sponsored by the ladies' section, and it is for rinks. If the weather is favorable the ladies intend to commence at 1:30 o'clock and play right through maybe stopping between the second and third games for a cup of tea; on the other hand, if the weather is cold and rough, it is most likely that there will be no tournament. However, in the meantime let us hope for fine weather, and be sure to line up a rink and be in the tournament. Rules will be announced prior to the beginning of play.

IS LENDING MONEY A WAR INDUSTRY?

While Campbell loans are not as important as ships or planes, in many instances they have helped the men who build the weapons of war. Here are typical examples.

Take the case of John Y... expert machinist. John quit his job in the north country to work in a tank arsenal. It would have taken John many months, maintaining two homes, to save the $300 he borrowed to move his family and furniture. Now he repays the loan at only $23.35 a month (for 15 months)—much less than it cost him for a single room and board. Today John is building better tanks because he has peace of mind—and his family is with him in his new home.

Peter A—, contractor, had an accident with his truck while engaged on an important war construction job. A Campbell loan helped him get a new truck immediately. The job was not delayed. Peter kept the contract and is repaying the loan in easy monthly installments. Campbell loans are confidential, friendly and quick.

● These are typical of the loans Campbell Finance men are making every day. Loans that free important war workers from worry—that ease their minds and help them work for Victory. SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

For the second year in succession, Westclox, local girl softball champions, have bowed to a Western Ontario club in the provincial playdowns in a series that could quite as well have gone the other way. The Big Bens were nosed out here Saturday afternoon by Stratford Kroehlers 5 to 3, giving the Classic City girls the round in two straight games and rendering a third contest unnecessary. Like the first game in Stratford the other day the Saturday contest was a close fit and with a break or two the Westclockers could just as easily have come down in front. They had to be unlucky not to score in the first inning after filling the bases with nobody out and again in the final frame when they had the tieing runs on second and third and not a hand down. They broke through the delivery of Greta Harmer for twelve hits including a homer and a couple of doubles and yet had difficulty in cashing in on the blows. As a sample of Westclox luck Saturday Marg. Hawthorne came up in the first inning with the bases loaded and fanned. She strode out to the plate in the fifth with nobody on and drove a homer over the left fielder's head. If the order had been reversed the Big Bens would have taken the ball game.

The Stratford girls, a clean and clever collection of girl softballers played good ball and we are not trying to rob them of credit for their double win but they would be the first to admit that the two close games might have had a different ending. Westclox, of course, were not at the top of their form. The long layoff undoubtedly had something to do with that and the team was ragged in spots both offensively and defensively. Kroehlers were smart enough to save their ace pitcher for a possible third game and they were also smart enough to get Hazel Baynton into the box when danger threatened in the final frame. She made a perfect job of putting out the fire after the Big Bens had put runners on second and third with nobody out. A hit then would have tied up the ball game but the first string Stratford pitcher, aided by a Westclox squeeze play that went sour was boss of the job, getting three batters in a row to end the game and the series. Westclox have had a good season and if they had been able to enter the playdowns as soon as the local campaign was over might still be in the running. They gave all they had, had little luck and now retire for the year.

Three Bad Men

With three villains on the card at the Tunney wrestling show at Brock St. Arena tonight the program looks like a series of dog fights. Doc Felice plus Bunny Dunlop plus Rowdy Dick Hogan adds up to two hours of mass murder. On the spot of course is Housepainter Hogan. He has a well earned reputation as a bad man but by the time Doc Felice and Bunny Dunlop get through with their exhibitions of gouging, punching, kicking and strangling there will be nothing new in the line of meanness for Rowdy Dick to produce. The bad-tempered Yugo Slav grappler Felice takes on Jumping Joe Maich of Brantford and will have a big edge in weight on the Telephone City acrobat. In addition he will use all kinds of skulduggery on Maich who is apparently in for a bad half hour unless his speed saves him. Bunny Dunlop meets a newcomer in the person of six-foot-four Joe Christie, a California product. Christie can make himself solid here if he turns the semi-final into a near-massacre of the Toronto strong man. The main bout, with fast-moving Jack Clayborne stacked up against Dick Hogan, should be a wow. Clayborne beat Hogan here some weeks ago after a stormy session and should do it again but en route he will probably have to take a lot of abuse from the roughhouse Hogan. The rowdy from the coast doesn't worry about wrestling rules, referees or hostile fans and if he's beaten he'll make it plenty tough before he bows out.

There were a couple of plays in Saturday's ball game that caused many of the fans to wonder what was what. The first came in the fifth inning when with two out and three Kroehlers on the bases Hazel Baynton shot a low liner at Marg. Watson who came up with the ball and fired toward the plate. The runner on third was safe at home but the ball was tossed to third where the girl who had been on second and had held up on the play was called out. That made the third out on a forceout and of course the run didn't count. Marg. Watson maintains that she caught the ball in the first place. The other play was in the sixth. With one out Beryl Dobbin was on first when Barbara Rome struck out. Jean Aiken, Stratford catcher missed the third one and then drilled the ball to second where Beryl Dobbin was out trying to make the middle station. Meanwhile Barbara Rome had raced down to first and it looked for a while as if the umpires were going to allow her to remain there until it finally dawned on everybody that the Westclox batter was automatically out, having struck out with first base occupied before two were out. The Stratford team was on its toes on that play for Jean Aitken wasted no time firing to second and Evelyn Easson at second remembered that there was no force on and that the runner had to be tagged.

Hurricanes' Close Call

There are three unbeaten teams in the senior O.R.F.U. race and strangely enough all three of them had to come from behind Saturday to keep out of the loss column. The closest call was at Ottawa where the Toronto R.C.A.F. Hurricanes nosed out the Combines 9 to 8 on the strength of a last minute field goal by Charlie Prince. Last year's champions were down 7 to 0 going into the last quarter but staged a battling finish that finally saw them win by a nose. The Hamilton Wildcats made it two in a row Saturday by beating the Navy 24 to 11 but the game was a lot closer than the final figure indicates and the Wildcat supremacy was not asserted until the final stages. Navy, inexperienced but game, fought hard and were twice in front of the Hamilton squad, but the Wildcats finally got their attack geared up and won with a driving finish. The other club that hasn't tasted defeat yet this season is Balmy Beach who triumphed over Toronto Indians in a game played at Hamilton by 14 to 3. Annis Stukus, Balmy Beach quarterback scored all fourteen points for his team, getting two touchdowns, converting one of them and kicking a goal from the field. It must have been all very gratifying to Big Stuke for he had been coach of the Indians last season and was ousted in favor of Selkirk at the beginning of the present campagin.

The Governors' Cup series is all tied up. Syracuse Chiefs and Toronto Maple Leafs have each won two battles in the best-of-seven final round and will clash in the fifth game at Syracuse tonight. Then the clubs will return to Toronto to finish the series there. Toronto took the Saturday night game 3 to 1 on the strength of superb pitching by Al Jarlett. Up to the eighth frame Jarlett had blanked the Chiefs and allowed only one hit. He was touched up for two successive triples in the eighth and Burleigh Grimes took no chances. He yanked Jarlett and Harry Shuman vindicated the action by coming in and taking the Chiefs under control. It was different Sunday when Millard Howell stopped the Leafs' attack almost completely with a smartly pitched two-hitter and the Chiefs took the tussle 4 to 1. Jim Hopper who failed to go the route was the losing Toronto pitcher. Howell was a little shy of control but the Leafs could not do anything in the way of hitting. Luke Hamlin who lost the first game of the series to the Chiefs will probably get another crack at them tonight. He has shut them out five times this season and is likely to come back with a masterpiece.

Oshawa Moves Into O.S.A. Finals

OSHAWA, Sept. 27. — Oshawa Colts, 1942 intermediate "A" softball champions of the Province, advanced to the O.S.A. finals here Saturday afternoon when they eliminated the classy Toronto Invictus A.C. team, scoring their second straight win, 6-2.

The Invictus Club trotted out their strongest lineup in a desperate attempt to stave off elimination, but their ace hurler, "Long Jwan" Sinclair, failed to halt the heavy-hittings Oshawans, while "Preem" Whiteley, veteran speedballer of the homesters, allowed only four singles and not a single earned run.

London Army Defeats Co-ops

LONDON, Sept. 27—(CP) Making the most of their 11 base knocks behind the solid seven-hit hurling of Johnny Moyer, London Army Saturday moved to within one victory of the senior "A" championship of the Ontario Baseball Association. They scored their second straight victory over Hamilton Co-ops, 10-4, before 1,500 fans at Labatt Park.

The third game of the best-of-five series will be played in Hamilton Wednesday.

Sunday to take the first of the play-offs for the O.B.A. Intermediate "B" championship. With two men out in the ninth and two on base, and the score tied, Morley Hillier slammed a line drive to left field to bring in the winning run.

STUKUS STARS AS BALMY BEACH DRUBS TORONTO INDIANS 14-3

Fliers Defeat Ottawa By Slim Margin

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Annis Stukus set out Saturday to prove "A" that Stukus is a pretty fair football player and "B" that Toronto Indians should have known better anyway. He suceeded—except for one little item.

He should have scored two touchdowns for Indians. That would have made it close.

As it was, big Stuke did all right. He personally ushered Toronto Balmy Beach into a three-way tie for Ontario Rugby Football Union leadership, scoring all 14 of his team's points (two touchdowns, one convert, one placement) as Beaches thumped Indians 14-3 at Hamilton. They shared the mortgage on the throne-room with Toronto R.C.A.F. Hurricanes, who sliced out a fine 9-8 verdict over Combines at Ottawa, and Hamilton Flying Wildcats, successful 24-11 over Toronto Navy.

Repeat Wins.

Saturday's three inning clubs thus repeated opening week successes, leaving a four-point leeway between the leaders and the three losing teams. But all three losers showed enough stuff to indicate they will be heard from before season's end.

Combines were particularly stubborn. A single by Jack Pumple, a touchdown by Ike Norris on Arnie McWatter's forward and a convert by George Fraser made it 7-0 for Ottawa entering the fourth quarter. Sgt. Fred Kijek's touchdown, converted by Sgt. Charlie Prince, hauled Hurricanes back into the game, but it still looked good for Combines when Frasers single made it 8-6.

With the minutes waning, Ottawa elected to pass. FO. Mike Ozarko intercepted, enabling Prince to kick a game-winning placement.

8,000 Fans

At Toronto the Sailors had most of an estimated 8,000 crowd rooting for them as they led a more experienced Hamilton 11-5 midway through the third quarter on touchdowns by OS. Bruce Richardson and OS. Tom Waldon against Dick Groom's touchdown for the Wildcats. But Hamilton's superior ground power began to tell as Paul (Polly Miovinovich, playing football for the first time this season, powerhoused his way forty yards downfield to the Navy two. On the next play Miovinovich added the touchdown yardage and Joe Krol converted, tying the score.

After that, it was all Hamilton. Bill Irwin raced 10 yards for a try on a three-man pass play with Krol and FO. Murray Crowe to make it 17-11. When FO. Chuck Stollery converted. The Cats added se en more in the last quarter on Mel Lawson's 65-yard touchdown gallop, a Stollery-to-Jimmy Smith pass convert and Krol's deadline hoist.

While Stukus was flinging his high-explosive charges at Hamilton, his mates held Indians to a first-quarter placement by Earl Selkirk, who took over from Stukus as co-coach of Indians this season Indian officials say Stukus left the club as a result of a "personal misunderstanding" by Stukus—but it looks today as if the misunderstanding were on the other side of the fence.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian Press Staff Writer
TORONTO, Sept. 27.— (CP).—Uncertainy concerning the forthcoming hockey season evoked one of the keenest guessing contests in the history of Canadian sport. Sports columnists across the country spent thousands of words endeavoring to anticipate the puck future. Now the main questions on the quiz program seem to be answered. The National and American Professional Leagues have announced plans for 1943-44 operation. The Army and R.C.A.F. have made their service teams free to participate in senior amateur competition.

In laying down their hockey policy, the Army-R.C.A.F. turned a trick right down the alley of the average fan. Their conditions included these points: In any league containing six or more teams, four team should participate in play-offs; in a league of less than six team, not more than three teams should compete in the play-offs.

Many fans were soured on the system which sometimes saw all teams in a league enter play-offs For example all six teams in the Quebec Senior League, which produced the Allan Cup champion Ottawa Commandos, entered the play-offs last spring.

The play-offs were the revenue producers in hockey and they were extended gradually until in latter years play-offs started in February and ended in May. League play became merely a preliminary series amounting to little more than exhibitions.

The service policy will reduce the number of teams entering play-offs. By other conditions the new policy, play-offs will speeded up. Limiting of all league and inter-league play-offs to two-of-three games will save two or three weeks in the play-off schedule.

The policy will reduce revenues of rinks, clubs and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association But it is likely to meet favor of fans. It is probable that league schedules will be extended into March instead of ending in mid-February This will give fans in all sections of the country an extended season and avoid such complaints as came last spring from the Niagara Peninsula where all senior teams were eliminated from play-offs by the end of February. All through March and April, fans in Niagara district cities—St. Catharines, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, Port Colborne—were forced to depend on accounts of activity in other centres to satisfy their hockey interests.

Interest Shifts To Race For Home Runs

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Outside of debating the relative merits of tthe St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees in the coming World Series, interest in the major leagues shifted today to the George Case-Wally Moses base stealing race and the Rudy York-Charley Keller struggle for the home run championship.

Case, fleet outfielder for the Washington Senators, stole three sacks yesterday to go one up on his rival from Chicago White Sox. He has swiped a total of 56 to 55 for Moses.

Charley Keller walloped two walloped two homers for the Yankees yesterday to boost his season total to 31. York likewise smashed out a couple of roundtrippers for Detroit against Boston Red Sox York thus retained the home run lead with a total of 33.

Keller's roundtrippers helped the Yankees to a double victory over Cleveland Indians 3-2 and 6-5 in 10 innings. The Yanks went 14 innings to beat Detroit 2-1 Saturday for the victory that clinched their third straight American League flag, their seventh in eight years and their 14th altogether.

Tigers Lose Two

York belted his pair of four-masters in a lost cause as the Tigers dropped a doubleheader to the Red Sox, 3-2 and 6-2. Jim Tabor connected for a 10-inning homer to win the opener.

After taking a 15-3 lacing in the first game, Washington Senators rallied to beat the White Sox 5-2 to split a twin bill. Case swiped his three bases in this game. Moses, who recently stole three bases against the Athletics, did not make any attempt.

In the National League Cincinnati Reds came up with two neat four-hit pitching performances on the part of Elmer Riddle and Johnny Vander Meer to beat Boston Braves twice, 2-0 and 1-0, thereby tightening their hold on second place.

Howie Krist continued his mastery over the Phillies as the Cards split with Philadelphia. Krist pitched a 4-1 victory in the opener, but the Phils took the nightcap, 3-2, in 11 innings on George Munger's wild pitch.

Dodgers Split.

Brooklyn Dodgers, fighting to stay in third place, divided a bargain bill with Chicago Cubs. Claude Passeau hurled a five-hitter for the Cubs in the opener, but lost 5-1, on Bobby Bragan's home run with one on and Luis Olmo's triple with three on. Bill Nicholson paced the Cubs to a 5-3 triumph in the nightcap by hitting a double and his 27th homer of the season.

After Bob Klinger shut them out 5-0 in the opener, New York Giants beat Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3, in 10 innings to gain a split for the day Johnny Rucket singled home the winning run in the second game.

St. Louis Browns swept a doubleheader from the luckless Athletics, 3-1 and 1-0.

New York's clinching the pennant featured Saturday's doings in the American League. In other games, Chicago beat the A's twice, 4-2 and 5-2, and Cleveland defeated Boston 6-3.

In the National League, Cincinnati won 3-0 and 4-1 over the Braves, Pittsburgh defeated New York 7-2, Chicago thumped the Dodgers 5-3, and St. Louis edged out the Phillies 5-4.

Young People Need Courage To Follow God

"It is not easy to be a Christian and it takes courage on the part of the young in these days to say they believe in God in the New Testament meaning of that faith," it was said on Sunday by Rev. William Thomas, M.A., of Cooke's Presbyterian Church, Toronto, in an address delivered to the congregation at the special rally day in George Street United Church.

It was easy to say one believed in God, to go to church, to sing in the choir or to teach in the Sunday School, Rev. Thomas dedeclared but to believe in the sense that one had come by an "inescapable gateway" to honor Jesus Christ, "the gift of all gifts from God," was an altogether different and higher thing.

In his special address to young people, Rev. Thomas asserted the blighting influence of humanistic philosophy, which had, he said, robbed young men and women of the ability to find faith in Christ. To see the new light and to learn to love God and with Him go onward and upward, it was necessary to lay down the arms of rebellion and fear, not to lay aside any position of personal preeminence; it was necessary to take a firm stand and not be ashamed.

Make Own Way

But, the preacher said, "the end of exhortation was the beginning of action," and once exhorted it was the duty of the individual, in communion together with his God, to find the path of faith. This no one could do for him.

Taking the text of Exodus, "They came to the mountain of God, even to Horeb," Rev. Thomas compared the position of Moses on that eventful day to the position of many a young man or woman who suddenly obtained an insight into the meaning of the Church and whose life was changed from that moment forward.

On the mountain Moses had seen the burning bush, which burned but was not consumed, and had seen a vision and heard the voice of God, who sought Moses as a leader in the emancipation of the people of Israel from bondage. Moses' day of destiny had dawned, the speaker said, and Horeb was "the place of unexpected opportunity." So, likewise, a chance visit to a church and the words of exhortation of one of God's ministers might prove an unexpected opportunity to the young and indifferent.

Call of Life

It was not, Rev. Thomas said, merely a question of youth as measured in terms of a man's years. For he pointed out, Moses was all of 40 when his great moment came, an age at which it is generally supposed a man is clearly settled in his ways and not easily altered by novel influences. And so also there were in these modern times men who felt the call to a new way of life and communion with Christ after they were well established in a life which left little or no room for religious considerations.

"God's passport," the preacher said, "does not always lead into pleasant pathways, but often into difficulties." To be a Christian in itself could mean the beginning of conflicts, but where faith existed God would compensate by instilling new personal resources adequate to cope with new dangers and difficulties. There was no difficulty that God could not solve, and where the individual advanced "in the regal splendor of a tremendous spirit" He would inevitably aid that person in finding the answers to his problems.

Huns Withdrawing

The Russians said the Germans had already begun to withdraw from the city, third largest in Russia. A Moscow broadcast recorded by Reuteurs News Agency said:

"There can be no doubt that detachments of Hitlerite plunderers are already fleeing from Kiev like rats from a sinking ship."

The Russians admitted they were meeting stubborn German resistance in the Dnepropetrovsk area, where they said more than 1,000 Nazis had died in a futile attempt to recapture several strongpoints yielded in yesterday's battle.

With German resistance smashed on the three south-central fronts —Kiev, Kremenchug and Dnepropetrovsk—other Soviet forces under Gen. Vassily Sokolovsky were battering their way toward the river near Gomel. In some sectors they were near the vital main lateral Leningrad-Vitebsk-Kiev railway line, capture of which would threaten Nazi communications.

In the Smolensk area the Russians swept forward six miles toward Vitebsk on the edge of White Russia, west and slightly north of Smolensk, fall of which was announced Saturday. The district centre of Kaplya was among the 200 villages taken in the advance.

5th Army Advances

Peninsula to the east coast and hit enemy motor transport north of Foggia. Headquarters announced yesterday the German air force has fled from the major airbase and 12 satellite fields there.

From the Middle East, British Liberators and Halifaxes kept up the Allied hammering at the Balkans by attacking the Kalamaki airdrome near Athens Friday night, a Cairo announcement said. Beaufighters also left a merchant vessel smoking in an attack in Syros harbor in the Aegean Sea yesterday.

In sweeping to within 22 miles of Foggia, the 8th Army has deployed on the southern stretches of the sea-level plain that stretches 30 miles beyond Foggia.

In land near the centre of the Peninsula other British forces swept through Spinazzola and Atella, and 5th Army troops, smashing out eastward from Salerno, captured the twin villages of Senerchia and Valva, 28 miles from the west.

Thus, the line of battle stretched across the Peninsula in a generally straight route from a few miles northwest of Salerno to a point on the Adriatic north of the Offanto river, with both British and American forces in position to sweep westward in a flanking move against Naples.

The 5th Army frontal assault of this second largest of Italy's ports was said in yesterday's Headquarters bulletin to have engulfed Cava Di Tereni, a village seven miles northwest of Salerno overlooking the valley that dips to Mount Vesuvius straight ahead.

(A Berlin broadcast last night placed the scene of battle only seven miles south of Naples, but no Allied announcement has put 5th Army forces closer than 22 miles.

(In another broadcast the German radio estimated the invading Allied armies in the Salerno area is being made up of 16 British and three American infantry divisions, two British brigades, one American "invasion" division, two British "invasion" divisions, two Britsh armored divisions and one American armored division—a total of 26 divisions amounting to perhaps 350,000 men.)

Meanwhile, out across the Tyrrhenian Sea in Corsica, the French high command announced yesterday it had thrown the fierce Moroccan Goums, who terrorized Axis troops in Tunisia, against the trapped German garrison.

Oletta Captured

The French announced the capture of Oletta, less than seven miles southwest of Bastia, enemy stronghold in the northeast sector of the island from which the Germans were trying frantically to get out by sea and air in the face of a tight Allied blockade.

(The United Nations radio at Algiers, in a broadcast recorded last night by the Associated Press, said that Bastia already had been occupied by French forces.)

While other air force squadrons continued to hammer enemy troop concentrations, depots and supply lines in the immediate battle area, big four-engined bombers made a 1,400-mile round trip Saturday to bomb rail installations at Bolzano, just 30 miles south of the Brenner Pass.

The bombers also made their first attack on Verona, 100 miles south of the Northern Italian frontier, and delivered their heaviest blow on the rail yards at Bologna, focal point for traffic from Germany as well as well as from Yugloslavia and Hungary.

October's End To Bring Burma Drive

NEW YORK, Sept. 27—Always an unpleasant month in Burma, October may bring new misery to the Japanese there this year.

The monsoon may be followed by Mountbatten.

And Burma may be caught in a three-way Allied squeeze. Selection of Lord Louis Mountbatten — the Royal Sea Rover—as supreme Allied commander in the Southwest Asia Command was bad news indeed for the Japanese.

For the cousin of the King also led the famed Commandos, and when the southwest monsoon stops sweeping the drenching rains, Lord Louis and his Allied marauders may be the next call from across the Bay of Bengal. But Nippon can't concentrate all her Burma power on the coast. For along the India-Burma battle line to the north, British and American troops are drawn up—bolstered by a hand-picked crew of veteran Chinese soldiers, battle-scarred and hungry for revenge.

That Burma is the likely spot for the first blow of the new supreme command is borne out by the need to reopen the Burma Road—the blocked supply route from Chungking to the sea.

Within Free China are the potential air bases from which Tokyo and all Japan proper could be bombed. The supplies required to do the job could flow over the Burma Road to Chungking and on to scores of Shangri-Las. But the Japanese sit across the road in Burma.

Chinese soldier — drawn from a dozen battlefields of Burma and China—will strike soon, but where remains as much a mystery as where Lord Louis will first move in, and how strong the forces at his command will be. But the moist misery of the monsoon will be over in October—and Burma looks like the logical scene for a big Allied squeeze.

MARMORA, Sept. 27 (ENS). — Cars driven by W. A. Sanderson of this village and Frank Bedore of Madoc collided at the intersection of No. 7 and No. 14 Highways about 3.15 p.m. on Saturday.

W. A. Sanderson who was driving south on Forsyth street was alone in his car while passengers in the Bedore car travelling east on No. 7 Highway were Mrs. Rilles Harrington and Iv Harrington of Springbrook and Mrs. Ethel Watson of Madoc. The latter sustained a scalp wound which required 3 stitches as treatment was given by Dr. H. Crawford. Both cars were damaged to some extent. Constable W. D. Lavender investigated.

Small Polish Boy Forgets How To Cry Leads 50 Youngsters 600 Miles To Iran

NEW YORK —From Iran comes the story of little Wladzio of Sokal, Poland, —a ten-year-old hero who spurns tears because "a leader may not weep." He arrived on the Iranian border one day followed by a little band of fifty ragged youngsters.

Wladzio had brought the little band six hundred miles across Russia because he had heard the Polish Red Cross was in Iran and would feed the youngsters for whom he felt responsible.

The six-hundred mile trek took months. Each morning Wladzio had to find out in which direction he should lead his band where he could sleep them safely that night where he might beg for food—and at night he'd comfort those who sobbed in their sleep.

Now he's gaining weight in a Polish school in Iran. But the Red Cross women wonder if they ever can get old-man look out of his eyes.

Today, because of stories like Wladzio's, the Poles of the world are kneeling in prayer behind locked doors to celebrate a war-born holiday — "Polish Children's Day." The Polish Telegraphic Agency says Poland's children are scattered like the children of no other nation in history— close to two hundred and fifty thousand in refugee camps from India to Mexico—most of them with no knowledge whether their parents lived or died.

The Polish Government pays for their keep — sixty-three thousand dollars a month for every thousand children—except for one group of five thousand in India. Behind that group lies a story of international friendship.

The Maharajah of Newanagar—His Highness Jam Sehab— chancellor of the council of Indian princes, is keeping the five thousand children on his estate. He built a village for them: roads, telephone wires, and a water system. He does this because Paderewski and his father were friends.

Some Features Of The War As It Affects Great Britain

By JAMES A. ROY

It was the men and women of the Civil Defence services who were the front-line fighters of the British people when they successfully withstood the enemy's onslaughts from the air during the Battle of Britain. London was bombed every night except two, from the 7th September to the end of November, 1940. Yet life and war work within London were never fatally interrupted. This was largely due to the men and women of the Civil Defence Services, wardens, firemen, police, rescue squads, drivers, nurses and auxiliaries. I was told that on one occasion a railway tunnel beneath a London street was damaged by a heavy bomb but that even while enemy aircraft were overhead firemen were fighting the flames from a burst gas-main and railway staff were shoring up the tunnel. Materials for repairing the tunnel were being rushed up while the heavy raid was still in progress. At the time of the great blitz on Coventry about 80,000 people were working in that district. In 14 days 77,000 of them were back at work. And Coventry was only one of the very many of Britain's provincial cities that suffer in the blitz. After eight nights of blitz on the Liverpool docks, every shift was working in three days after the attack had ceased. Another thing—during the Battle of Britain one warden in six was a woman.

Britain's Help to Russia

By the middle of November, 1942, Britain had sent to Russia enough equipment for 20 armored divisions on the German scale. She has sent to Russia a vast number of aircraft, tanks, machine tools, metals, small arms, ammunition, medical supplies, thousands of tons of aviation spirit and fuel oil, and great quantities of tin, wool, lead, jute and shellac. She has also sent thousands of tons of sugar and precious rubber, quantities of industrial equipment and millions of pairs of boots. Britain has also dispatched a very considerable number of her best locomotives to Russia and has done fine engineering work in opening up transport through Persia on the southern route to Russia. Thousands of British railwaymen have been sent to Persia. By an agreement of the 27th June, 1942, the British Government agreed to ensure the Soviet Government military supplies and other military assistance, supplies to be made available free of payment.

British Help to America

The British have not been able to repay the splendid generosity of the Americans, but they have done a good deal towards meeting the debt. The British Navy helps to protect America and in return for 50 over-age destroyers Britain gave the United States the right to establish defence outposts and naval bases on British island possessions in the Western Atlantic. In September, 1941, the production of three shell-making factories, which were working exclusively for Britain, was diverted to the United States. Accommodation for American troops in the United Kingdom is provided by Britain as reciprocal aid. The construction program undertaken by Britain for the United States forces in the country, will involve an expenditure by Britain of £150,000,000, it is estimated. Britain has sent America anti-aircraft guns, Rolls Royce engines, thousands of barrage balloons with no cash payment in return. Britain has supplied America with her newest inventions such as radiolocators and astrographs. Britain has made available to America the results of her practical experience in various campaigns and has provided much valuable military and technical information on such matters as anti-submarine equipment, magnetic mines, special explosives. Britain supplied the basic design for the American "Liberty" ship. Between September, 1939, and September, 1942, Britain spent 7,000 million dollars of cash purchases in the United States, much more than the total American lend-lease deliveries to Britain at that period.

All-out in War Production

Britain kept up war production all through the blitz. One factory worked at 90 per cent of capacity while part of it was still on fire. In 1942 British workers were turning out more per head of population than those of any other country in the world. This applies to shipbuilding as well as to work in factories. British production of aircraft had reached parity with German aircraft production in April, 1942. British pursuit aircraft are the fastest and most efficient in the world. By September, 1942, all capital ships, aircraft carriers and cruisers lost in the preceding two-and-a-quarter years had been replaced: losses of destroyers and submarines had been more than replaced and a fleet of corvettes had grown up, which numbered more than 200 by the beginning of 1943.

Out of a total adult population of 33¼ millions, 23½ million British men and women are mobilized in the services or in vital industry. Two out of every three Britishers, men and men, between the ages of 14 and 65, are doing full-time war work. Many do more jobs than one (industrial workers in Home Guard, etc.). Many others, such as housewives, who are unable to do full-time, do part-time war work as far as they can. Women who work less than 55 hours a week, and men who work less than 60, have to do 48 hours a month of additional national service in the Civil Defence, fire-watching or Home Guard. In addition to the 23,500,000 in the Services and essential industry, nine million more jobs are being done by voluntary or unpaid workers. Over 2½ million married women are now in employment. They have been withdrawn from less essential industries so that the munitions and other vitally essential industries have altogether benefited by an increase of nearly 2,000,000 women workers in the three years.

Flower Holders Raise $15 For War Victims

All summer long, from shortly before the annual decoration day ceremonies were conducted by the Peterborough Lodges of Independent Order of Oddfellows, up until the present time, the office and staff at Little Lake cemetery have had a number of flower holders for sale with the entire proceeds to come to the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund.

These were made and donated for that purpose by William Naish of Lock street, who in doing so, repeated an act of last year which was responsible through the same cooperation in raising a nice sum to help the fund, and this year they have to date realized the sum of $15.00 which is recorded today.

The sales this year were not as numerous which was to be expected, since those who had previously bought them could save them for further use, but those that have not been sold have been carefully put away, and they will be offered for sale under the same auspices next year.

This collaboration and effort on the part of Mr. Naish and the cemetery staff has now raised over $38.00 for the fund, and may finally result in close to the $50.00 mark being realized, a very worth while effort on the part of all concerned to give assistance to those in need.

Junior Horticultural Show

The foregoing donation was made through receptacles to hold flowers, and contingent with this in today's list, comes a donation from the Peterborough Horticultural Society which promotes the growing of these beautiful creations of nature.

Ever since the fund commenced operations, this society has made its various meetings the occasion to try and raise money for the fund, the latest of which appears today in an amount of $10.55, which was raised through a collection taken at a lecture held by Mr. John Clark and at the Junior Flower Show held recently.

Following this up, they are making a similar appeal at their annual distribution of prizes and awards, won in competitions sponsored by the Society during 1943, and which will include the presentation of the Ontario Horticultural Association Meritorious Service Diploma to Sandford T. Harris for his outstanding work in the field of Horticulture.

This is to take place on Tuesday, September 28, in the auditorium of Murray Street Baptist Church, commencing at 8 p.m. and will be accompanied by an illustrated lecture by John F. Clark of Toronto on "Bulbs, Lilies and Beautifications". The place that all kinds of Horticulture holds in the life of the city, and the making of a more beautific spot to live in should commend the Society to all the support interested citizens can give, and should bespeak a good attendance.

Keeping still on the same topic of flowers, in two other instances donations are recorded today which have these same messengers of a loving sympathy for those in sickness or distress as their root, there perhaps being nothing more appropriate because of the projects the fund seeks to assist.

William A. Taylor of Crawford's Grove has on two former occasions this summer made his garden the means of helping the fund, and now for the third time, another $2 has come from the same source, and Miss Kitty Flowers is listed with a donation of $2.25 in a like manner, both of these donors having given from the same source during last year as well.

One personal contribution of $1 was received through the mail with no identification of its donor attached, and Betty Starsmeare is credited with a donation of 75c which may have been intended as part of the Bette Davis Club, although nothing was said to identify it as such.

Today the fund has chalked up another record with the crossing of the $63,000 mark, and is on the high road to another achievement, for it now needs only the sum of $135 to complete the next contribution of £500, which will mark the 25th time money will have been raised and cabled direct to London, England.

If his patch of Katahdin potatoes assays anything like the samples J. A. Middleton, Park street, showed the Examiner today he should not have to call on the farmers for additional stock to carry through the winter. One of these three weighed 1½ pounds and the two others 1¼ pounds each.

FAIRS THIS WEEK

Fal fairs this week are scheduled as follows:— Stirling—27 and 28; Campbellford—28 and 29; Napanee, 27-29; Bobcaygeon, 28-29; Tweed, September 30 and October 1. Picton, Oct. 1 and 2. Most of these are one-day fairs and those nearer Peterborough are: Stirling, Tuesday; Bobcaygeon and Campbellford Wednesday; Tweed, Friday.

HOME WITH LIMIT

Taking with them two lunge, eight pickerel and six bass each, J. J. Ratchford of Canton, O., Jerry Saunders of Cleveland; Paul Swager of Monaco, Penn., and Ralph Logan also of Pennsylvania, left for their homes Saturday after a highly satisfactory vacation with Mr. and Mrs. J. Dunkerley at Stoney Lake. The lunge ranged from seventeen pounds down to nine.

80 CORDS TODAY

Eighty more cords of fuel wood were sold this morning at A. G. Metheral's office, corner of Simcoe and Queen street. Some of the applicants arrived at 8.30 o'clock, and a few of them reported that they had no wood over the week-end. Alderman Glover, as chairman of the special wood committee, is hoping for an "open fall" and many of these sunny October days.

TAG DAY

Collected in Saturday's Tag Day raising funds for Christmas boxes for men and women in service outside Canada was the sum of $752.85, a figure higher than last year's receipts. Peterborough Women's Active Auxiliary and the five I.O.D.E. Chapters acted as taggers.

ANOTHER WINNER

Mrs. A. J. Lashbrook of 179 Rubidge street was winner of the "Treasure Trail" quiz program's telephone question in October, 1941, and for answering the question "What is the capitol of India?" she received the sum of $98. In the release given the Examiner by the sponsors of the program it was said that the telephone question had twice been won by contestants in Peterborough, but Mrs. Lashbrook's name is a third winner which the sponsors omitted to mention.

Bags 24 Ducks On Opening Day

Joe Williams of the C.G.E. and his partner Bill McIntyre, solved the meat shortage for over the week-end at least when they went shooting at McIntyre's Bay near Keene on Saturday morning, taking advantage of the first day of gunning south of No. 7 highway.

It was an auspicous trip from the start. They reached a good hide, shortly after six in the morning and within a matter of minutes ducks were winging in for the morning feed along shore. When the shells were exhausted and the final count was made, the boys looked at their watches and it was 20 minutes to nine. They dad their quota for the day, a total of 24 for the pair, and the bag consisted of 15 blue-winged teal, four mallards and six blacks, real big fellows.

They report quite a heavy barrage all along the lake, with the sounds indicating 16 and 20 gauge guns being used, probably because of the ammunition shortage. This condition may result in more winged ducks, which will probably be a straight loss, and the lesser guage guns having the wallop at a distance to knock down the fast travelling ducks. Both McIntyre and McWilliams were using 12 guage shotguns, and they didn't lose a single duck.

Farm Sales Announce Farmers Are Quitting Tilling The Land

The decision of the Peterborough Plowmen's Association to hold a county match on October 13 is contrary to the opinions of some objectors who say that it is a waste of time that could be spent to better results working at home or elsewhere, waste of gasoline and so on; that farm help is scarce, boys are off to the war or the west, and the match is likely to be poorly attended by competitors and spectators. No doubt, all these 'points are well taken."

Those who have favored the match (and it is not a serious matter in any way of regarding it) were considering the difficulty of revival in the event of a lapse of one year or more, possibly more.

On the other hand, and these are just some random thoughts, one of the tools which have helped Britain through four years of war, is the plow. We have seen so many pictures of "jeeps," and many types of motorized transport cars that we are inclined to forget the importance of the basic agricultural "tool," the plow. No need of my expanding that thought, but here are a few quotations from "Britain," May 1943, reprinted from the News Chronicle...

"By this spring, if all goes well, we shall have increased our ploughland acreage above 1939 by 7 (seven) million acres or 53 per cent. Our arable land should then be exceeding 17 (seventeen) million acres, equal to half the land surface of England and Wales, almost as great as in 1867, when arable farming was at its zenith.

In the last war, the arable acreage never quite reached the 16 (sixteen) million mark, and then not nearly so much farming land had to be given over to airdromes, housing schemes and roads."

And so on.... Quoting a farmer... same article.... "By the old method, three men should just about run this 150-acre dairy farm. Now we ought to have five, farming the way we do. But some how we just carry on with the three, although one of them's now a girl instead of a man.... My farm's not unique. It's the same everywhere. We'll keep on. But one day the men in the fields will be just too tired to keep it up any more. That day, however, won't be before the day after the end of the war, whenever that may be."....

That is the end of the quote.... Article continues in part.... 'the dairy farmers of Britain are somehow supplying the fresh milk for a national consumption that was running last summer (1942) at 45 per cent above the pre-war figure. Last war, in 1918, consumption fell by 35 per cent.'....

'The net result is that our soil is now producing for us two tons of food out of every three tons we eat. The increase is some four or five times as great as the most expert opinion thought possible in 1939.'

Sentiment might attempt to glorify the prosaic plow, which actually is entitled to some place in the honor list of war machines,—but it remains just the same old plow farmers too often neglect by leaving it sometimes out in the rain. However it has done a great job, in the hands of farmers to whom the credit is due, and perhaps the time of those hundreds who attend farm sales at this time of the year when the bulk of the work is nearly done might be just as profitably spent at a plowing match....

The mention of farm sales recalls a recent observation of six or eight bills advertising farm sales in this district. You recall Premier Drew's articles on his tour of rural Britain several years ago, and his recent action to implement the impressions which remain with him.... appointing county committees and a general provincial farm group to direct the entire effort whose exact objectives are beyond me....

But, as a matter of contrast.... advertised farm sales, indicating a downing of tools on the farm, for one reason or other and on the other hand this quotation from the News Chronicle article....

"The Ministry of Agriculture called in the local farmers to administer a scheme that was centrally directed. There are about five thousand of them, organized in 478 district committees. They have given their time and work for nothing. These were the men who knew local conditions and knew their neighbors.

It wasn't always very pleasant work. No one would enjoy going to an old friend with whom you may have shot and hunted for years to tell him that if he can't make the grade he must leave the farm where he may have lived since boyhood. But, they did it, and because those to whom they gave orders recognized them as sensible and practical men, the plan worked. Only a minute percentage have failed to respond and so have had to be compelled."

Compulsory farming in Britain, but freedom of action here, even to the extent of selling out. It is hardly likely that Colonel Drew would attempt to apply to agricultural Ontario the ultimate orders in Britain such as.... produce more, farm in a more efficient way.... or we shall have to put a better farmer on your land....

Enthusiasm Ran Away

REIDSVILLE, N.CV., Sept. 2.—(CP). — An auctioneer at a War Bond rally here on Saturday became so enthusiastic that he took off his trousers and underwear, and sold them to the highest bidder. Officials said $1,350,000 in bonds were sold.

NO TONGUE TWISTERS.

No word in the Chinese language has more than one syllable.

Husbands-to-Be Find Fiancees Winning Now They Too Wear Gold Wedding Rings

War creates strange repercussions and one of the strangest of these, during this war, is an ever-increasing demand for gold wedding rings.

The sale of wedding rings has rocketed far beyond normal consumption, not only because in war more men marry but also more married men wear wedding rings.

In European countries the two-ring ceremonies have been popular for many decades but the custom has never caught on in Canada or the United States. Enterprising jewelers have tried to promote the custom, which would mean two ring sales per wedding instead of one. Wives have encouraged it for reasons of sentiment and because it tends to show the world (particularly the women's world) that her man is already hitched, but Canadian, American and many English men have remained adament. They would not wear wedding rings. They said it was sissy. To the wife that was their excuse. To themselves they said, "Why tell every girl I see I'm married?"

But war has done what neither jeweler nor wife could do. War has made the double ceremony bands popular.

Men Like Gold.

In Peterborough jewelry stores they say the trend has been in evidence towards gold rings for men during the last year, and merchants are accustomed now to keep in stock a number of plain and engraved gold bands where as a rule it would never have occurred to them to do so before.

In Toronto leading jewelry shops used to carry a stock of three or four gold wedding rings for men, now about one-third of the entire stock is made up of men's rings and the majority of buyers are servicemen.

Mostly the reasons for this change are sentimental. The brides like it. They persuade, their bridegrooms, usually in front of the jeweler, who also does some persuading. Nor can the man resort any longer to the old-time "sissy" argument. Obviously not even a plain gold ring can brand a sailor, a soldier or an airman sissy. Then, too, there are the restrictions a uniformed man meets in regard to jewelry. Plain gold rings are about the only personal adornment they can wear under military regulations.

Double Ceremony Popular.

Some jewelers estimate that at least 50 per cent. of the wedding rings purchased are of the double-ceremony type. Others claim the custom is growing rapidly.

Seldom does the husband or husband-to-be buy a wedding ring without gentle pressure from his better half. It is a rare occurrence for a man to buy himself a wedding ring. Either he and the lady of his choice purchase the rings together or the wife is sole buyer.

But, irrespective of how the ring materializes, most important result of this repercussion of war is that more and more married men are wearing wedding rings.

RADIONICS

The most priceless thing on earth is good health. Are you endangering your health by not paying sufficient attention to the danger signals that nature is giving you? Headaches, sore throat, bronchial cough, pain over sinus and antrum, constipation, kidney and liver conditions, pain over the appendix area and urinary bladder. These are all warning signals, if you will only heed them.

RADIONIC EXAMINATION will determine the cause of any of these symptoms. If you have infection of the sinus, teeth, tonsils, kidneys, appendix, bowel, etc., the Radioclast will find it and trace it to the part affected. Don't neglect your health by not knowing what the cause is.

War—25 Years Ago

By The Canadian Press

Sept. 27, 1918—The Hindenburg line in front of Cambrai was broken by the British who took Beaucamp and Graincourt, and the 1st, 3rd and 4th Canadian divisions under General Sir Arthur Currie forced a passage of the Canal du Nord taking Sains-les Marquoi and Bourlon Wood.

Need 20 Women For Tomato Crop

Canada Packers need the temporary help of twenty women to pack the tomato crop. Supplies from the lakeshore district have not yet arrived in quantity, and so far have escaped frost. However, the season is advancing toward the 'dead line' and C.P.C. are anxious to speed up their work while the weather is still favorable.

It is understood that the work of tomato canning is slightly behind schedule, and women who join up now to help finish the job will have a hand in an essential work that simply has to be compressed into the remaining few weeks of the season.

Cuffed Trouser Is Permitted

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.—(CP).—The Canadian male got this news from the Prices Board to-day. He can buy trousers with cuffs and get two-pant suits.

These things were banned in March last year because developments in the Pacific indicated the entire Australian wool supply might be cut off and because the rapidly-expanding Canadian armed forces created vast demands for uniforms.

"Recent developments in the Pacific seem to ensure continued availability of Australian wool and the demands of the armed forces are less of a burden," the Board said to-day.

"Anyone who prefers a cuffed trouser or wants an extra pair of pants when he buys a new suit now will be able to satisfy his wish as stocks become available and his clothier can lawfully accommodate him."

Other restrictions made in March, 1942, eliminated style features like pleats and patch pockets.

"These will continue because the fabric supply, labor shortages and costs of production still require that unnecessary frills be eliminated in order that the supply of suits may be maintained under the price ceiling.

"No increase in price will be permitted for cuffs on trousers and pricing for two-pant suits must conform with ceiling regulations."

McConkey Bull Wins Senior Championship

The following summary of the results of the Black and White day at Lakefield Fair has been issued by the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada:

"Supreme Grand Slam was named grand champion and his progeny dominated the junior classes, taking junior and reserve for both the male and female sections, at the Peterborough county Black and White day held September 22 at Lakefield. It was a strong show both in quality and number, 11 exhibitors showing 101 head.

"Supreme Grand Slam was the only senior bull shown, winning senior and grand championship for N. W. McConkey, Peterborough. His son, Otonabee Supreme Colanthus, took the junior and reserve grand honors for J. T. Tully, Peterborough, after heading the junior calf class. A daughter, also shown by J. T. Tully, was first prize senior heifer calf and junior champion female. Another daughter, a junior calf, owned by Stewart Nelson, Keene, was reserve junior champion, while a son exhibited by Coughlin Bros., Peterborough, topped the senior bull calves and was made reserve junior champion.

"The senior and grand champion female was Stewart Nelson's milking three-year-old, Keendale Lodge Pietje Lass, who repeated her win of the previous week at Lindsay. The reserve senior and reserve grand champion award went to N. W. McConkey, Peterborough, on his first prize aged cow, Alcartra Jennie Posch. Altogether Stewart Nelson headed seven classes, J. T. Tully six, N. W. McConkey four, Stanley Wood, Peterborough, three, and Coughlin Bros. one."

Asks For Trial In Higher Court

After hearing three crown witnesses Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning bailed Theodore Disautel for trial on a charge of indecently assaulting a thirteen-year-old girl.

At the beginning of the hearing John A. Bradshaw who appeared for the accused said that Disautel wanted to change his election and take trial by a higher court. Defence counsel intimated that the accused would ask for speedy trial in the county judge's criminal court.

The charge against Disautel arose out of the finding of the accused and the girl on the river bank just north of the C.P.R. bridge one night recently. Constables Gordon Trennum and John Morrow who had investigated the case, after receiving a complaint, gave evidence this morning and the girl was also called by the Crown.

Magistrate Langley intimated at the end of the preliminary inquiry that he did not consider the case a very strong one but that there was enough evidence for bailment for trial. Bail was set at $200.

Hazel I. Waters Weds Richard Baker

Mission Band Meets For September

The first fall meeting of St. James' Mission Band was a real rally of the children, who gathered in the primary department on Sunday morning.

"We worship God through serving," was the theme of the worship service led by the president, Miss Elva Sollitt, who presided throughout. The scripture lesson was read by Ronald Wallace, and the members were led in a litany of praise by Miss Freda McMahon. The offering was received by Gordon Bullied and was dedicated with a prayer hymn. A reading, "The Calling of Samuel," was given by Sylvia Ferguson, and a lovely solo contributed by Barbara Wallace, was accompanied by Elva Sollitt. "Wing finds a new friend," from the Mission Band study book "We Worship Together," was the story of the day, told by Miss Constance Wagar.

The business session followed, with minutes, roll call and the attendance stars awarded.

Announcement was made of the Mission Band Rally to be held in George Street United church, October 23. World Friends, the Band paper, was distributed by the secretary, Ray Harris, and the meeting closed with prayer led by Mrs. Davis.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, September 28

With vigilance, harmony and exceptional skill and sagacity the affairs of this day are likely to fall into safe, progressive and productive grooves, although they may be stubborn obstacles, and opposition from elders or superiors. There also may be loopholes for fraud and duplicity. Frankness and good nature may arrest the antagonisms and suspicion, while logic and astute decisions may avert loss.

Those whose birthday it is, although possibly hampered or worried by tenacious obstacles, aggravated by the antagonism of superiors, employers or elders, may secure its place and fortunes, by clever or skillful manipulation of tricky, depressing or stagnant situations.

A child born on this day may have much skill, talent and mental grasp of frustrating circumstances which it should use to avert difficulties and antagonisms in both private and business life.

IF WISHES WERE FEATURES ALL GIRLS WOULD BE BEAUTIFUL.

Any Woman Can Be Easy on Eyes If She Makes Self Approach Heart's Desire

If every girl in the world could have the thing she wishes for most, she would be beautiful. But that, alas, is an impossibility. Nature is a capricious old dame who bestows her favors with a stingy hand, and when she distributes her supply of classic profiles and peaches-and-cream complexions and naturally curly hair and violet eyes, few there be who get them.

But the girl who feels that she has nothing to cheer about when she looks into her mirror need not lose heart for all of that and think that she is destined to be one of the also rans in life. Her face may not be her fortune, as the old proverb has it, but she can acquire other assets that are more valuable than good looks if she has only the wit and will to do so.

Simple Touches and Charm.

To begin with, any woman can be easy on the eyes if she has the courage and the energy and the intelligence to make herself over nearer to her heart's desire. If she is fat, she can turn herself into the similitude of a stringbean by laying off the candy and the mayonnaise and whipped cream, and by walking and playing strenuous games, instead of flopping on a couch and reading sickly love stories and getting out the car if she wants to go around the block. She can buy a hand-made complexion better than any girl baby was ever born with, and she can learn to comb her hair so as to camouflage her bad points and bring out her good ones.

And, thanks to Mother Eve, whose first act after she ate of the Tree of Knowledge, and got enlightenment, was to make herself a dress, there are clothes. None of us distinguish between a woman and what she wears, and a homely girl who is smartly dressed can snap her fingers in the face of a frowsy bathing beauty. Many a woman's reputation for beauty rests on her pink chiffons. It is pretty is as pretty has on, and if you doubt your taste in dress, pick out some woman who is clothes-conscious and make her the guardian angel of your wardrobe.

Then face the fact that inasas you are short on pulchritude, you must be long on other attractions. Not being beautiful you can't afford to be dumb. Make yourself an interesting and agreeable companion. Study and read. Keep up with current events so that you will have a ready line of conversation that you can adapt to any audience.

Interested Listener Attracts Friends.

Cultivate the art of listening with an absorbed expression of interest on your face while men talk to you of their hobbies, and women tell you the last smart thing the baby said, and nobody will care whether you are as beautiful as a movie star or as plain as a mud fence.

Stress your femininity. That always was, is, and always will be woman's best bet. Girls who were passed over when the good looks were handed out often think that their cue is to make imitation men of themselves, so they dress like men, and drink like men, and swear and curse and tell dirty stories and try to be tough and rough.

Never did anyone make a greater mistake, for in dropping their womanly sweetness and gentleness they show characters as unlovely as their faces. A very pretty girl may perhaps be a bit daring and get away with it, but it is fatal for a homely girl to go hoodlum.

Be amiable. Be sweet and pleasant and easy to get along with. They are the old-fashioned standardized feminine charms, but nobody has ever been able to improve upon them, and they still work. A sour, petulant, ill-natured expression will turn the most beautiful face into a gargoyle, while the face that is always bright and cheerful and that wears the smile that won't come off is the one that we like to have about us and at which we never tire of looking.

Gentleness of Woman's Eyes Shows Soul.

It is not the size, nor shape, nor color, nor brilliance of a woman's eyes that attract us to her. It is the gentleness in them, the tenderness, the sympathy, the understanding. It is their being the mirror of a beautiful soul, and that beauty does not have to be the gift of Fate. It is something that can be attained by cultivating unselfishness and kindliness and a philosophic attitude towards life, instead of nourishing one's own vanity.

So, girls, don't envy Miss America. Just go her one better. In a few years her good looks will be gone, but if you have made for yourself the beauty that comes from being intelligent and interesting and sweet and charming, you will have that which age cannot wither and that grows more and more potent as the years go by.

Hannah M. Carew Marries Mr. Neal Millen

The Bethany Gospel Taberncale was the scene on Saturday of the wedding of Hannah Marjorie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Carew, to Mr. Neal Millen, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Millen. Rev. Walter S. Crone officiated and the church was decorated with baskets of mixed autumn flowers and ferns. Mrs. Vincent Millen presided at the organ and played "I Love You Truly" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor-length gown of white sheer with a V-neck line and a ruffled yoke, the skirt ending in a light train. She wore lace mittens and a finger-tip veil of white net caught with a halo head-dress, and carried a bouquet of red roses. Mrs. John A. Willock, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a long gown of blue sheer with bracelet length sleeves, and a matching shoulder length veil, caught with a wreath of pink and blue flowers. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Mr. Vincent Millen, brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Mr. Harold Millen, also brother of the groom, and Mr. Wallace Carew, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony a reception was held at Hooper's Palm Room, where the bride's mother received in a gown of black crepe with gold trim, black hat, and a corsage of red roses. Later the couple left for Niagara Falls and points west, the bride travelling in a navy tailored suit wtih matching accessories.

The bride was lovely in a long gown of white sheer over taffeta with embroidered bodice, sweetheart neckline and bishop sleeves. Her finger tip veil of embroidered tulle was caught with a halo of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of Briarcliff roses and bouvardia.

Miss Isobel Free, Coleman street, Belleville, was bridesmaid and she chose a floor length gown of chartreuse embossed organza of fitted design with embroidered neckline and shoulder length veil held in place by a Mary Queen of Scots headdress. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and baby 'mums. Mr. Edward Heaseman of Stirling assisted the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception, at which about twenty-five guests were present, was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Jos. J. Poulton, River street. Here and There in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Despite continued protests from Halifax on the designation of Kingston as the birthplace of hockey by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the National Hockey League, sport leaders of the Limestone City proceeded with plans for the "shrine" at a Sunday meeting at which Capt. James T. Sutherland gave details of the circuits' approval of the project.

The meeting talked of ambitious steps for the post-war construction of a sports plant at Kingston to embody the hockey hall of fame and to include an arena and outdoor stadium. The proposal was made for a poll of sports writers of Canada and the United States for the selection of players to be memorialized in the "sanctum" of the winter sport, the voting to be supervised by a board of officials from major hockey cities. The election of a comprehensive committee was conducted at the meeting to work on preliminary arrangements for the Kingston sports palace but methods of financing and operation were left for a future gathering.

Navy Ahead

Royal Canadian Navy holds a 3-2 game lead in the Nova Scotia senior baseball finals against the Springhill fence busters and the sixth encounter in the best-of-seven series for the provincial championship is scheduled to be played at Halifax tonight.

Phil Farley of Toronto Scarboro took top honor in the 36-hole medal competition of the Seigniory club's 12th annual convention golf championship when he toured the course Saturday for a 73, giving him the winning gross of 149 for the two days. G. Amyot of Montreal earned the second best gross of 159.

Toledo Mud Hens were eliminated yesterday from the American Association semi-finals when Indianapolis took the deciding game 2-0 at Toledo, one of the runs being a homer by First Baseman Eddie Morgan. Indianapolis stacks up against Columbus Red Birds, starting to-night, and the survivor will meet Syracuse or Toronto in the Little World series.

Winnipeg Wins.

With LAC. Andry Branigan the scoring star and AC2 Johnnie Lake the shining light of the backfield, Winnipeg R.C.A.F. Bombers rode roughshod over the Rough Riders at Regina Saturday to take the opener of the Western Canada Conference 10-2 before 1,500 fans. Branigan scored two touchdowns.

Wins Juvenile Crown.

Toronto Trinity "K" ran up a 6-2 score against Niagara Falls at Toronto Saturday to win the Juvenile Ontario Baseball Association final.

W. C. Mitchell of Kitchener, scored an ace-hole on the Rockway course when he dropped his tee-drive into the 14th hole 208 yards away with a No. 4 iron, while playing with a foursome.

Walter C. Kelly, 71, once sports editor of the old Bufalo Courier, died Saturday night at Buffalo of a heart ailment. He had also been a sportswriter for Cleveland papers and was a sports promoter and referee of boxing.

Fighting Irish To Oppose Georgia Tech

By HAROLD CLAASSEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 — (AP). — Not only will Saturday's two big football games — Notre Dame vs. Georgia Tech and Michigan vs. Northwestern—include four of the country's best teams but the turf at South Bend and Evanston will be torn up by some of the outstanding players of the young season.

Notre Dame has its Angelo Bertelli and Julius Rykovic in the backfield and Capt. Pat Filley, a watch-charm guard. The Atlanta engineers counter with Eddie Prokop, who broke away on an 80 yard touchdown run last Saturday, and centre George Manning, plus George Steber, Vanderbilt great at guard last season but now at Tech.

Northwestern's offensive is geared to Otto Graham. Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch of Wisconsin and Bill Daley of Minnesota, are the two Michigan ball carriers.

Army Wins

All four of the clubs won last Saturday, three of them spectacularly and Northwestern halting a weak Indiana eleven, 14-6, Michigan saw its all-star outfit romp to a 57-6 verdict over Western Michigan and Notre Dame made Pit coach Clark Shaughnessy sorry he revived the T-formation, 41 to 0. Georgia Tech, a pre-game underdog, mastered North Carolina, 20-7.

But all the A1 talent won't be confined to those two gridirons Saturday.

Army unties Glenn Davis in its second home game for the benefit of Colgate and Mike Micka, a combination that spilled Rochester Saturday 7 to 0. The Cadets tamed the Villanova Wildcats 27-0 in their debut. Columbia opens its campaign against Princeton, a 47-9 cropper to a surprising Penn squad Saturday. The Quakers next entertain Yale.

Navy verified every suspicion by blanking North Carolina pre-flight 31-0, and next tackles a Cornell team that was good enough to conquer Sampson, N.Y., Naval 27-13.

Hockey Officials Want Service Teams

PORT ARTHUR, Sept. 27—(CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association last night extended a welcome to service teams and announced that its schedules will be operated to cause as little interference as possible with the training of men in the armed forces.

(Army and R.C.A.F. headquarters announced Friday night that providing play-off games are kept "within certain bounds," Army and Air force teams are free to participate this season.)

Frank Sargent, president of the C.A.H.A., expressed confidence that the Association's branches and leagues will co-operate fully to concur with conditions under which service teams have been authorized to play.

The service policy will reduce the number of teams entering play-offs games.

Toronto Tied With Syracuse

By The Canadian Press

After a busy week-end and two games, ownership of the Governor's Cup, emblem of the International League play-off supremacy, is still a toss-up, the Saturday and Sunday basefights between Toronto and Syracuse resulting in a win apiece and the play-offs tied at two-all.

A big third inning and a trio of infield hits sent the Leafs to a 3-1 victory over the Chiefs Saturday and gave Al Jarlett the game in his win column, although he failed to finish.

Jarlett yielded only one hit, to Garton Del Savio, for eight innings of the close game until Del Salvio and pin-hitter Howell tripled in succession for Syracuse's only run. Harry Shuman came in to finish and had no trouble holding the lead.

But with Millard Howell on the mound for his second victory over Toronto in five days Sunday, the Chiefs evened the series with a 4-1 win. Pitching two-hit ball, Howell balanked Leafs until there were two out in the ninth, then Gus Dugas doubled to score Handley for the lone Toronto run.

Three hits and a walk off Jim Hopper in the first inning that yielded two runs supplies the base for the Chiefs' victory, while another off Tom Ananicz in the seventh on a walk and the fourth in the eighth on a pair of errors and Del Savio's single supplied the margin.

Locals Fail To Hit

scoring Marg. Watson. Beryl Dobbin scored when Ruby Aiken dropped Doris Walker's popper. Jean Castle flied out to end the frame.

Kroehler's got a gift run in the fourth to take the lead again. Helen Doubrough got a walk to start with but was forced at second on Greta Harmer's roller to Viola McLean, Hazel Baynton was safe when her tap got away from Marg. Watson. Gladys Heinbuch struck out, but Evelyn Easson was passed to fill the bases. A passed ball sent Greta Harmer in after which Doris Harloff struck out.

Marg. Hawthorne, first up for Westclox in the fifth, homered over the head of Doris Harloff in left field to sew up the game. Westclox had a chance to go ahead in the same frame for Marg Watson was safe on an error by Betty Appel and Beryl Dobbin singled to left. Barbara Rome's line drive was right at Evelyn Easson for the out, Doris Walker flied to Doris Harloff in left and Betty Castle popped to Helen Doubrough.

Stratford went in front again in the sixth. E. Heinbuch batting for her sister walked and was sacrificed to second by Evelyn Easson. Doris Harloff lined to Viola McLean but Jean Aiken slashed a single through short, scoring E. Heinbuch, another close play at the plate. Betty Appel popped to Jean Castle.

There was no further scoring until the first of the ninth when Kroehlers picked up another run. With two away Greta Harmer drew a pass. Hazel Dayton singled to right centre, sending Greta Harmer to third. E. Heinbuch singled solidly to left centre scoring Greta Harmer but Hazel Baynton was out trying to go to third on the play.

Westclox had a great chance. Isobel Bullock opened the frame by slashing a single through short and Marg. Hawthorne singled to left. When the throw got away from E. Heinbuch, the runners reached third and second, and the Big Bens had the tieing counters on the bases with none out. Stratford took no chances. Greta Harmer was taken out of the box and the Kroehlers' ace, Hazel Baynton came in from right field to save the situation. And she did just that. She got Marg. Watson on a bunt, forced Beryl Dobbin to pop to Evelyn Easson at second and then struck out Barbara Rome to end the game and the series.

Combines Win Lacrosse Championship

MIMICO, Sept. 27 — Mimico-Brampton Combines won the Ontario Lacrosse Association senior title for the second successive year Saturday night at Drummond Park here with a 25-8 trimming of their suburban rivals, Lakeshores, before a crowd of around 2,300.

Combines now meet the Quebec champions in the Eastern Canada finals at Maple Leaf Gardens next Saturday and Monday.

The Combines were back to their early season form, and after gaining an 8-0 lead in the opening period, were able to coast home. The other quarter scores, all Combines' favor, were: Second, 12-3; third, 19-4; fourth, 25-8.

Two Bills, Brunskill and Isaacs, were the payoff men for the champions, Brunskill notching 6 goals and Isaacs four more.

The entire winning team looked impressive with Whoop Arthurs, Bill Mulliss, Scoop Hayes and Harry Graham, a little more prominent on the attack, while Bert Large turned back most Lakeshore shots with ease.

Lakeshores were outclassed, but fought to the last. Lou Vipond scored twice for them and was good going both ways. Tommy Love worked like a Trojan and added two more goals to the 'Shores slim total. Grant Gillespie fooled Large with his tricky submarine shot three times.

The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 27 (AP) — Russ Newland relays this yarn, told by Joe Waterman, the Portland, Ore., matchmaker, about a fighter who hollered his way to a title without even getting into the ring . . . When the former Queen Marie of Rumania visited Portland in 1926, a Rumanian fighter whose ring name was Jimmy Darcy decided to pay his respects . . . Guards in the hotel turned him back so Jimmy raised his voice in some choice Rumanian words . . . The Queen asked the cause of the disturbance and was told Darcy was making a special request to be named the champion of Rumania . . . The Queen, making a good will tour, graciously granted the request—and, as far as we know, Jimmy still is undefeated champion.

ONE DAY MY HUSBAND SAID—
"I'M TIRED OF WEARING SHIRTS THAT LOOK HALF-WASHED"
THEN I FOUND OUT — NO MATTER HOW YOU DO YOUR WASH YOU NEED SUNLIGHT'S "EXTRA-SOAPINESS" FOR THOSE EXTRA DIRTY SPOTS

Now my husband raves about his brighter shirts
HUSBAND: Gosh, Lucy, my shirts have a brand-new look this week. How did you do it?
WIFE: Easy as pie! I just put a touch of Sunlight Soap at the extra-dirty spots. Then, when I washed the clothes my usual way, Sunlight's "extra-soapiness" just eased out the dirt and grease.
HUSBAND: Great stuff! No "half-washed" look about the clothes this week.
WIFE: Everything is so much brighter now that I use the easy Sunlight method of washing. Grimy work clothes come spotlessly clean in no time; without hard rubbing, either! And Sunlight is all pure soap—that's why it's so kind to my hands, too.
Grand For Dishes Ladies! You'll say Sunlight is just as wonderful for speedier, easier dishwashing and all cleaning. Fairly melts away grease. And Sunlight goes a long, long way even in hardest water.

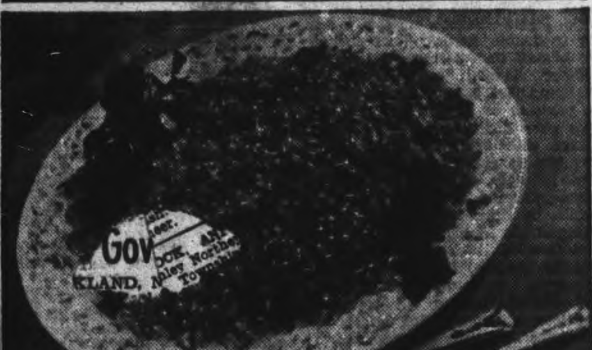
WEEKLY WARTIME FOOD HINTS

Martha Logan, Swift's famed Home Economist, whose weekly cooking column is a regular feature of this page. Look for these valuable hints every Monday
By Martha Logan



2 meals for 4 from 1 coupon
If you want to 'splurge' on a roast occasionally, plan in-between meals that are extra thrifty
Every family enjoys—and benefits, too—from a hearty meat meal. But these days a juicy, succulent roast probably means that you, Mrs. Housewife, have done some careful planning in between.
To help you plan ration-thrifty meals, here are suggestions for two dishes—each to serve four—which only call for 1 coupon between them.
For your coupon you get ½ lb. of hamburger and a little more than ½ lb. of sausages. Chopped meats, of course, should be served as soon after purchasing as possible, so get the hamburger one day and pick up fresh sausage next day. Your meat dealer will be glad to "hold" the coupon for you.
SPANISH RICE
½ lb. hamburger; ½ green pepper; 1 medium onion; 1 cup tomatoes; ½ cup dry rice; ¾ tsp. salt; 2 tbsps. fat; 1 cup water
Melt fat in frying pan, add dry rice, meat, chopped onion and green pepper. Saute till meat and rice are lightly browned. Add water, salt, tomatoes and cover. Simmer 30 minutes or until liquid is absorbed by rice.
SAUSAGE CASSEROLE
¾ lb. sausages
1 cup precooked beans (navy, lima, or dehydrated)
2 large onions thinly sliced
1 can condensed tomato soup
Bring sausages to boiling point in water to cover, lower heat and simmer for 10 minutes. Drain. Arrange in layers in greased casserole. First sausages, then thinly sliced onion, then beans, then onion, etc. Pour in tomato soup. Bake uncovered in a moderate oven for 30 to 40 minutes.

HERE'S HOW I MAKE COFFEE GO FURTHER

FIRST of all—buy coffee for flavor! I use super-rich Chase & Sanborn Coffee!
Then I make it a rule to keep coffee in an air-tight container. And to get the right strength, I always measure the coffee and water carefully. Of course, I keep the coffee-pot scoured clean, and make only the exact amount of coffee needed—never more. And I serve it as soon as possible.
But getting plenty of flavor in the first place is most important! So I say—be sure you get super-rich Chase & Sanborn Coffee. More flavor ounce for ounce. Remember—quality coffee goes further.

Learn Shorthand and Be a Success in the World

SHORTHAND NOT DIFFICULT

If you have ambitions of being a private secretary you must be excellent at shorthand. Even a stenographer is usually required to know the fundamentals and be able to work it accurately.

In shorthand, as in all other arts, practice makes perfect. When you have learned a lesson have the words in that lesson dictated to you. The more times you write each word, the better.

Our ?-page booklet, prepared by the famous Pitman system, contains 18 lessons with exercises and two pages of additional short forms.

Do not sacrifice neatness for speed. Speed in writing will naturally follow neatness and accuracy.

Pitman shorthand is used throughout the English-speaking world to record rapid speech. In countless offices the system speeds up the conduct of everyday business affairs.

To be successful and keep up with the world learn shorthand and practise it daily.

New Zealand Elects Labor Government

AUCKLAND, N.Z., Sept. 27 (CP) —The New Zealand Labor Government was re-elected today, but with its majority reduced, final returns showed tonight.

Labor won 43 seats, compared with 49 it held in the last House. The National Party, which is the official Opposition, won 34, a gain from the 23 it had previously. Independents took two, losing three of their previous five seats.

The standing in the new House thus will be: Labor 43, National 35, Independent 2—total 80.

The Democratic Soldier Labor Party which made a strong bid in many constituencies, failed to elect a single member, but it was believed to have been a factor in the National Party's gain of 12 seats because the new group tended to split the Labor vote.

TORONTO, Sept. 27 — (CP).— In one year the Workmen's Compensation Board of Ontario paid out money for 12,352 falls in industrial acidents, it was reported. "In each 24-hour day there were three falls every 2 hours—falls of sufficient severity to justify payment of money by the Workmen's Compensation Board," the report said.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

DON'T TRIP YOURSELF

There is just one purpose to a high original suit bid—what is usually known as a pre-emptive bid. It is to shut out opponents that you reckon are likely otherwise to find a fit between their hands and get into a game contract which they can make. Experienced players have found that this device does not pay with hands strong enough to justify a normal opening bid of one. There are two reasons for that. In the first place, when you hold such a hand, with its share of defensive values, the opponents are not likely to be able to make a game. On the contrary, your high bid may shut your own side out of finding a fit at a successful game contr...

North: ♠ K 8 6 4 ♥ 10 ♦ A K J ♣ J 10 8 6 5
West: ♠ Q J 10 2 ♥ Q J 4 3 ♦ 9 7 6 2 ♣ 3
East: ♠ A 9 7 3 ♥ 2 ♦ Q 10 8 5 4 ♣ A 4 2
South: ♠ 5 ♥ A K 9 8 7 6 5 ♦ 3 ♣ K Q 9 7

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣	2 ♦
3 ♥	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	5 ♣

And naturally that contract was made right on the nose, with the loss of no tricks except to the two black aces.

But the real point of the deal is not in what did happen, but what c... have happened. South was seriously considering an original pre-emptive bid of 4 Hearts. If he had made that, North would have passed and left him in, reckoning that his own strength might prove just enough to render the contract makeable. South, according to the rule for such bids, had sufficient total playing strength, within three of the number of tricks for which he would have been bidding. His refusal to bid that way was that his hand was not weak enough in high card strength.

With his club honors on the side, and the top two honors in hearts, his hand might be able to do its share in preventing a game if bid by the opponents. Also it might have proved very valuable in a No Trump contract, if North had the cards to justify such a declaration. Third, with a four-card length in a side unit, it was possible that suit might be a better declaration, which proved to be the case.

Havelock School Board Accepts Regination Of Janitor Buchanan

H VELOCK, Sept. 27 (ENS). — The resignation of Caretaker Buchanan was accepted by the School Board at their regular meeting.

Two applications were received for the position, but one had since been withdrawn. Mr. Douglas Young was accepted at a salary of $900 per annum and his duties are to commence October 1. Chairman B. Smith presided over the meeting and trustees Matheson, Young, Anderson and Sarginson.

Principal Jones reported the enrollment at 166 and an average attendance to date of 160.1 in the Public School. The program of Religious instruction was brought up and Mr. Jones outlined a program for the different denominations. On a motion by trustees Young and Sarginson that the different clergymen be invited to meet at the school and arrange the schedule for the coming term.

No Sponsor

In Principal Goheen's report, on behalf of the High School, he spoke highly of the work of the two new assistant teachers, Miss McCorrie, and Miss McDermott. In regard to the school sponsoring th eAir Cadet Squadron, Mr. Goheen stated that after taking the matter up with the Department, he found tha the Cadets do not come under its jurisdiction, but if the Board wishes to take over the Corps, it may do so but they must notify the Department, which in turn notifies the R .C. A. F.

The school has had two fire drills and the school can be cleared in 37 seconds. The High School Library is badly in need of reference books in geography, and supplies are needed for the art classes. On a motion by trustees Matheson and Anderson, the annual grant of $25 was made to the Library and a $5 grant to the art teacher will be made.

A list of supplies required by the Public School teacher was handed to the Board and on motion of Mathison and Anderson was authorized to order them. The matter of rearrangement of seats was left in the hands of the property committee.

Trustee Resigns.

Mr. Buchanan reported to the Board that the new part had been placed in the furnace and a new pipe had been installed and a leak had developed in another pipe; also that there was only a three-week's supply of paper towels on hand.

The resignation of Trustee Miller was read and accepted on motion of Trustee Mathison and Sarginson. The caretaker was granted $15 for cleaning the school rooms during the summer holidays.

The question of adjustment of pay for teachers who are away from their teaching duties was discussed, and it was decided that if a teacher is away other than through illness the time is to be deducted from her salary, and the secretary is to pay the supply teacher. The rate of pay for supply teachers was increased from $3 to $4 per day, on a motion by trustees Young and Matheson.

Accounts Paid.

The general repairs in connection with the furnace was left in the hands of the Property Committee with instructions to have the work completed as soon as possible.

The following accounts were ordered paid, on motion by trustees Matheson and Young.

Mess Room Chatter

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Sept. 27—(CP). — One Lancaster squadron in Bomber Command in which a bunch of Canadians are flying has "The Shrine of Saint Cecelia" for a theme song.

Pilot Officer H. S. Shortt, a pilot from Whitby, Ont., explains it: "Ever since we started to sing it, as a sort of ritual before every operation, we haven't lost a man in the squadron excepting one night when we forgot to sing it about six weeks ago. Now we never miss playing it on the gramophone every night and morning and we always sing it at breakfast when we get back from a raid."

Another pilot in this squadron is PO. J. H. Mason of North Vancouver, B.C.

Incidentally, these fellows say the new Nazi dodge of dropping flares to illuminate the path that bombers are following into their bombing run is not so hot. It also lights up the sky so that the enemy fighters are more easily visible and gives our bomber gunners a better chance to fend off the aerial target-defences.

Sgt. Mal Summers of Moose Jaw, Sask., whose parents live in Vancouver, come back from a bombing attack on Mannheim and reported having to bank away from a "rocket" that burst in front of his aircraft as he was preparing to release the bombs. But don't misunderstand him. "Rocket" is just another way of saying "flak," and Mal wasn't speaking of some new German defence effort.

Flying Officer Hanbury of the Royal Air Force, pilot of a Coastal Command Sunderland which recently destroyed one of three large German U-boats in the Bay of Biscay, said he flew so low over the sub when they dropped their depth charges that "I had to 'jink' over the conning tower."

The Sunderland crew later dropped their plane's dinghy to Germans who escaped from the submarine before it sank and later learned the U-boat's captain, three officers and three ratings reached the dinghy and were picked up and brought back to England.

C. G. Ruttan, 27-year-old pilot of Belleville, Ont., put on a real celebration for his promotion to wing commander leader of an R.C.A.F. Hampden Bomber Torpedo Squadron from the rank of squadron leader. He went out to strike at a German submarine and brought it to a standstill so it could be destroyed later by a Liberator.

Ruttan straddled the submarine with depth charges and then, out of ammunition, signalled for another aircraft to come in and make the kill while the submarine was idling on the surface badly damaged.

When the Liberator hit the sub fair and square all that was left was a great swirl of water, some wreckage, and some bodies. Flying with Ruttan was PO. Alfred Smith, D.F.M., 24-year-old gunner from Toronto who first sighted the sub. Other members of the crew were Sgt. W. E. Bill Norquay of Selkirk, Man., and Flt. Sgt. C. Ellood of the R.A.F.

200 Friends Honor Mr. and Mrs. Jewison

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 27 (ENS)— A gathering of interest was held this week in South Monaghan municipal hall, when about two hundred people met to honor Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jewison, bride and groom of recent date, and presented them with a studio couch, two occasional chairs and a wall mirror.

A program had been prepared and Melville Wood acted as chairman. A vocal solo was sung by Miss Fern Gainer, piano solo played by Homer Ouellette and a duet with guitar accompaniment given by Yvonne and Eddie Lee.

Jack Greer read the address and Fred Hie made the presentation for which Henry thanked their friends. The following spoke a few words: Reeve Fred Barnard, Councillors Jay Whittington and Harry Campbell, Messrs. Robert Kelly and Gerald Anderson.

The balance of the evening was spent in dancing to music supplied by Ouellette, Bradshaw, Gilmour and Armstrong.

Navy Gets Badges

OMEMEE

Women Taught Care Of Clothes

OMEMEE, Sept. 27 — (ENS). — Miss Kidd of Toronto, a representative of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board gave an interesting lecture and demonstration on the "Care of Clothing" under the auspices of the Women's Institute, on Thursday afternoon. Miss Kidd commenced her lecture by urging the ladies to make the most of what they have, and take care of their clothing. In these times, with a war on, it is necessary that people buy the best material it is possible to get if they can afford it. She spoke of the scarcity of materials such as linen, cotton and wool.

"The civilian population must do with about half as much wool as they did before the war. About 75 per cent of the wool and 50 per cent of the cotton are used for the armed forces. To-day there is more rayon on the market than any other kind of material."

Rayon Composition.

In an interesting way Miss Kidd showed the process of making rayon material. Rayon is a man-made fibre, and originally comes from wood pulp. There are three processes in the making of rayon—first, the viscose rayon made at Cornwall; second, the cuprammonium, which is not made in Canada. This material is known as Bemberg. Third, the cellulose acetate, which melts under heat.

Miss Kidd then demonstrated the care of all kinds of clothing, laundering and pressing clothes, removal of stains from fabrics, mending torn garments.

The women decided to hold a demonstration at one of their regular meetings and Mrs. Arthur Rutherford and Mrs. Walter Magee were appointed to plan the nature of this demonstration.

THE BATTLE OF, BY AND for the GUNS!

Without firearms, the victory cannot be won. Our men must face with equal or superior weapons the modernly armed foe. And our men must have all they need. So the battle for guns—great and small automatic guns—grows in intensity, as the battle of and by guns rages hotter and fiercer.

Bofors anti-aircraft guns, Vickers machine guns, heavy anti-tank guns, trench mortars, light artillery, heavy field pieces, coastal defence cannon. What an inspiring battle for guns our men and women workers are fighting!

Canadian workers in scores of factories are toiling day and night to produce these weapons. Great quantities are coming off the assembly lines—Lee-Enfield rifles, Bren guns,

GREAT AIRBASE CAPTURED AT FOGGIA

Hanover, Brunswick, Emden Smashed In R.A.F. Raid 38 Bombers, 1 Fighter Lost

Nine Canadian Planes Missing In Sweep That Devastated Three Cities Mosquitoes Out On Intruder Prowling

LONDON, Sept. 28—(CP Cable).—The R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. last night rekindled fires in the rubber centre of Hanover, Germany, in a heavy raid.

The Air Ministry announced 38 bombers were missing after the operation and R.C.A.F. headquarters said nine of them were Canadian.

Three types of heavy bomb carriers of the Canadian bomber group went with the R.A.F. in the attack, described by the Air Ministry as in "very great strength."

The Canadian effort involved Lancasters, Halifaxes and Wellingtons. The Canadians concentrated with the R.A.F.—in which hundreds of other Canadian air crew men flew—in the night's main assault on Hanover while other bombers hammered Brunswick and Emden.

One fighter was missing after the night's operations which included fighter patrols and intruder prowling over Holland and northwest Germany, the air ministry said. Seven German planes were destroyed.

Mosquitoes Out

Canadian Mosquitoes took part in these intruder flights and two of the seven enemy planes fell before guns of Canadians, R.C.A.F. headquarters said. They were bagged over Holland.

Both the air ministry and R.C.A.F. headquarters said large fires were started in Hanover.

Hanover, a city of some 73,000, is the site of rubber, arms and vehicles plants, an important factory making light alloys for aircraft and three big railroad yards, one of them capable of handling 1,200 cars a day. The raid caused large fires in the city, the air ministry said.

While the bombers were out in force over Germany, R.A.F. fighters carried out intruder patrols over Holland and northwest Germany, shooting down seven enemy planes.

It was the second attack in force on Hanover within a week, and indications were it is due for the same destructive punches which levelled Hamburg.

The three-ply night offensive in hitting at the high German naval base of Emden, made a swift follow-up to the American heavy bomber raid yesterday in which a mixed load of high explosives, incendiaries and pamphlets were dropped.

Last night's attack was the 11th heavy bombing delivered on Germany this month, and marked the 48th time Hanover—about 380 miles from Britain and 160 miles due west of Berlin—has been bombed since the start of the war.

Returning crewmen reported tremendous flames eating through Hanover, which is a huge rail centre and the site of numerous oil refineries and motor factories, in addition to Germany's latest rubber factory, the continental Gummiewerke.

U-Boat Haven

From Emden, important U-boat haven on the north coast, it was the second blasting within little more than 12 hours.

D.N.B., German News Agency, said the attacks on Hanover and Brunswick caused casualties. It was the third raid on Brunswick, which lies 53 miles northwest of Magdeburg on the main railway line from Berlin and which is important for its metal and machinery industries.

The close attention being paid to Hanover and other German rubber centres—it was the fifth big blow to the Reich's rubber sources in four months—made it increasingly clear the Allies are concentrating on German rubber destruction.

Atlantic Patrol Battles Six Submarines

OTTAWA, Sept. 28 (CP)—Long-range Liberator bombers operating from a base on the Canadian east coast carried out six separate attacks against submarines of a German "wolf-pack" during a recent two-day running battle in mid-Atlantic the R.C.A.F. announced today.

The Air Force made no specific claim of destruction of or damage to any of the U-boats involved, but said one of its aircraft returned to base with "a motor disabled by gunfire and with flak holes punched through the wings, tail and fuselage."

The story of the battle by units of the R.C.A.F.'s "North Atlantic" squadron was told in a press release written by FO. N. A. (Ab) Folland, R.C.A.F. Public Relations officer.

Three attacks each day were chalked up by the Liberators as they guarded a convoy through the U-boats. So fast did the encounters come that when one bomber, its depth charges all used, radioed to another for help the answer came:

Mosher Takes Premier To Task

OTTAWA, Sept. 28 — (CP). — A. N. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, said today in a prepared statement that rather than advising labor of the dire results which he thinks will follow from its association with the C. C. F., Prime Minister Mackenzie King would be better advised to adopt policies to protect the rights of labor and make the war effort more efficient by improving relationships between the works and employers.

Mr. Mosher said he did not doubt the Prime Minister was sincere in advising labor to avoid alliances with political parties. But what the Prime Minister appeared to overlook was that his own party was elected with the support "of a considerable body of Canadian workers."

The endorsation given by labor to the C.C.F. had been due almost entirely to the reactionary attitude of Mr. King's government and party, and the refusal to implement their own program with respect to the establishment of adequate labor and wage policies in Canada."

"Labor's requests for representations on important government bodies have been consistently ignored and in many other ways the present government, in spite of Mr. King's alleged friendship for labor, has shown its disregard for the wishes of the workers and consequently has lost their confidence and support."

Premier To Avoid Election Until War In Europe Over

By C. R. BLACKBURN—Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Sept. 28—(CP).—National Liberal Federation members resumed their two-day sessions this morning with an assurance from Prime Minister Mackenzie King that his wish was to avoid a general election until the war in Europe is over or until the statutory term of the present Parliament expires in 1945.

But they were warned by the Prime Minister in a dinner address last night that a number of circumstances might arise to make an election necessary before then or at any time.

One of those circumstances was dissension in the Government ranks or in the ranks of its supporters, he warned. He assured his listeners that he had "little fear" of anything like that happening but it was a possibility, in the stress of war, that no leader could afford to overlook.

May Come Yet.

Another circumstance would be the possibility of opposing parties so impeding progress of work in Parliament that it would be "next to impossible" for the Government properly to enact necessary war measures.

An election would also be the only alternative, he said, if it became evident that the Government had lost the confidence of "any considerable proportion" of the people.

Mr. King declared the announcement of an immediate election would bring "consternation" and not "rejoicing" throughout Canada, but said that if he were thinking of winning elections instead of winning the war he would ask for immediate dissolution of parliament and have no anxiety over the outcome.

Mr. King delivered a prepared speech as the main feature of the dinner of the Advisory Council of the National Liberal Federation, members and guests of which wound up the first day's activities of the Federation's reorganization meeting.

Nazi Army Has Lost Mobility

By EDWIN SHANKE
Associated Press Staff Writer

STOCKHOLM—(AP)— Germany still is a great war power but her army has lost mobility, one of its greatest weapons, according to Arvid Fredborg, Swedish newspaper correspondent who returned home recently after two years in Berlin.

Fredborg, who represented the Conservative Stockholm paper Svenska Dagbladet, has written a book, "Behind the Steel Wall," in which he says there are many factors in the German military picture besides numbers of soldiers and quantities of equipment.

As he tells the story, when the third Reich lost superiority in the air it also lost the advantage of moving land forces without molestation. The army no longer can exploit inner lines to improve military positions.

The German army represents a powerful force, and while its spirit has grown worse its discipline is undiminished.

Elite Troops Missing

On the fighting fronts the number of elite troops has been greatly reduced by heavy casualties, and inexperienced reservists are used to fill their ranks.

The Air Force has been weakened not only in equipment but in men,

Last Caucasus Base Temryuk Town Captured By Reds

LONDON, Sept. 28—(CP)—Three key cities of White Russia—Gomel, Mogilev and Vitebsk—were in danger from advancing Red Army forces today, while further south other Soviet columns continued their unrelenting pressure against Kiev, Kremenchug, Dnepropetrovsk and Melitpol, springboard for a possible drive into the Crimea.

The last German Caucasian base of Temryuk was smashed yesterday, a Moscow war communique said, practically sealing the fate of whatever Axis forces are left in the northwestern Caucasus. They face certain capture or flight across the Kerch Strait to join the German garrisons in the Crimea. A Berlin broadcast said Temryuk was evacuated Sunday after military installations were dynamited.

Most sensational of the Soviet gains recorded yesterday was the capture of an east bank suburb of Dnepropetrovsk, in a savage hand-to-hand struggle across the river from that big steel and power city on the Dnieper bend.

Fought To Last

Their backs to the broad Dnieper, the Nazis fought to the last. Remnants of their rearguards were hurled into the Dnieper as Red troops overran the suburb of Nizhnedneprovsk and seized huge piles of abandoned war loot, the Russian communique said.

The Russians said they reclaimed 1,320 towns and villages—biggest one-day haul of the smashing summer offensive—in yesterday's action on the war's longest land front. All along the Dnieper's length "Our troops . . . were wiping out or cap-

Germans Land Forces On Island Of Corfu

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 28 — (AP). — With Foggia's elaborate string of air fields in Allied hands, the Germans struck at once to-day in an effort to shield themselves from the grave strategic consequences of the loss of that vital base.

Almost at the moment that the Allied communique disclosed that Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's forces had overran Foggia, the Germans announced two quick steps of their own:—

1. They threw landing forces at the island of Corfu off the west coast of Greece.

2. They attacked and claimed to have regained the Yugoslav harbor city of Split, previously stormed and seized by Yugoslav patriots.

Balkan Front Menaced

In these operations, Hitler was moving with all urgency against a menace suddenly and vastly increased against his Balkan front, for the capture of Foggia by the British forces meant that the whole of Northern Italy, the Danube Valley and Southern Germany itself now have been brought more adequately under the shadow of the Allied air arm.

It meant also that grand-scale facilities for Allied air action against the Balkans had been obtained in an area only 150 miles across the Adriatic Sea.

German air attacks across the Aegean from Greece were disclosed by an Allied communique from the Middle East which said heavy enemy bombers, escorted by fighters, raided the Dodecanese islands of Kos and Leros yesterday. Spitfires shot down one enemy bomber and a fighter.

Allied airmen also were active in the Aegean area the last two nights, the Cairo communique announced. R.A.F. Hudsons and Baltimores attacked the Kasteaeli-Pediada airdrome on the island of Crete last night, starting a number of fires.

Canadians Advance In Central Italy With Considerable Speed Nazis At Naples In Perilous Position

By WES GALLAGHER—Associated Press War Correspondent.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 28—(AP).—A strong British mobile armored column has raced 15 miles through Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring's defences and captured the great air base city of Foggia with its 12 satellite airfields.

Official reports disclosed the vanguard of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army entered the city at 3 p.m. yesterday, easily overcoming minor opposition.

At the same time Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark's men of the 5th Army registered gains of from two to five miles to the north in the Salerno area in the face of stubborn German resistance.

(Meanwhile the Canadian 1st Division units with Gen. Montgomery's 8th Army apparently were still driving up through the centre of the peninsula.

(L. S. B. Shapiro, war corespondent for the Montreal Gazette, who has been on the Salerno front since the orginal landing wrote in a delayed dispatch dated September 26 to his paper of a trip to the Canadians:

Menace Flanks.

("It is this correspondent's opinion, after learning the extent and speed of the Canadian advance, that Dominion troops have made a considerable contribution to the 5th Army's victory in the Salerno bridgehead battle. I can understand now the headlong thrust of the Canadians made the German positions surrounding the bridgehead strategically dangerous.")

The 5th Army captured the towns of Lioni and Castelnuovo on the eastern flank of this line, which was held by American troops.

The historic city of Melfi also was taken.

North of Salerno British troops headed toward Naples plunged their way forward two miles.

On the 8th Army front "considerable casualties" were inflicted upon the Germans in the drive on Foggia, headquarters announced, but there were indications that German resistance was slight on the swift advance against Kesselrings' rearguard forces which were left at the mercy of British columns.

No. 1 Objective

Foggia was the No. 1 objective of the Allied drive in Southern Italy. So swift was the Allied advance that the enemy was prevented from destroying the airfields.

"It is obvious the Allied drive in the east has made perilous the German position in the Naples area," an Allied headquarters spokesman said.

Foggia, in addition to being an air base, is a road centre with at least six main highways leading into it.

The Allied drive again made some headway east of Salerno toward the Adriatic where heavier opposition was met.

The drive into the hills toward Nocera, 10 miles northwest of Salerno, made steady progress in bitter hand-to-hand fighting. Capture of this road junction will take British troops to the edge of the plain leading to Naples, vital port which the Germans have been systematically destroying.

The capture of Melfi, 40 miles from the Adriatic, represented an advance of five miles beyond the previously-reported Allied position.

Wheat Market Closed To Curb Rise

OTTAWA, Sept. 28 (CP)—Safeguarding of the Canadian price ceiling which holds down the wartime cost of living was revealed today as the primary reason for discontinuing wheat trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Government spokesmen who declined to be quoted said the recent rapid rise in wheat prices on the Winnipeg market represented a grave threat to the price-control policy handled by the prices board.

Had wheat prices been allowed to rise without check, bread prices would have risen also or government subsidy payments would have had to be immensely increased, they said.

Protect Bread Costs

The method to be used by the Federal Government to maintain a ceiling price on wheat for human consumption, and thereby hold bread costs at present levels, was outlined in the statement issued early today by Trade Minister MacKinnon, announcing suspension of wheat trading.

The minister said the government plans to provide wheat to subsidized domestic purchasers from government-owned wheat, rather than from wheat in which the farmer has a participating interest.

"The government will thus be able to avoid the position of being both the farmers' agent and, in effect, the ultimate buyer of the wheat," Mr. MacKinnon said.

The pressure on price control caused by the rise of wheat prices on the grain exchange was understood to be one of the factors leading to the government decision to discontinue trading.

To maintain existing bread prices, the government more than a year ago established a ceiling price of 77¾ cents a bushel for wheat to be used by the baking industry for domestic purposes. Under this sys-

6,000 Women Urged Redouble Effort

By E. C. DANIEL
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 28 — (AP). — Prime Minister Churchill told 6,000 women at a government-sponsored conference today that Britain's job is to maintain its present war effort through the next two years.

Mr. Churchill said the country must continue the war effort at its current pace "through the fifth year of war or the sixth year if needed be." Britain began its fifth year of the present conflict September 3.

Women from industry, military units and voluntary services from all parts of Britain were brought here by the government, which paid their expenses and reimbursed those who lost time from work to enlist their aid in the victory drive.

Text of the speech was withheld for later release, but portions of it were released by censorship when excerpts were published in the London Evening News.

Assembled at Royal Albert Hall, the women heard speeches by other members of the war cabinet in addition to Mr. Churchill and were allowed to ask them questions.

Italy Example for Occupied Countries

Allies Must Be Tough, Yet Not Enslave Peoples Under Their Rule

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Premier Badoglio's seeming desire to bring his Italian government in on the side of the United Nations as an ally is causing some resentment among British and United States soldiers as well as on the part of officers of the AMG (Allied Military Government of Occupied Territories).

Well, it's easy to understand that feeling. Maybe, too, it's a good thing this has cropped up now, because we are going to have other defeated countries to deal with before long and it's important that we adjust our minds to the common-sense way of handling these situations. Take the case of Italy:

The Allied objectives have called for unconditional surrender, wiping out of Fascism, punishment of Mussolini and his gang, disarmament, depriving Italy of her ill-got empire and returning its component parts to rightful sovereignty, military occupation of Italy and administration until such time as the people had choose a legitimate government of their own. We swore to do all this with firmness, and there's no indication we've weakened.

War Not Over.

What we have to remember about Italy, however, before we get indignant over the trend of affairs, is that, while the government capitulated, this didn't end the war on the peninsula by a long shot. We still have to wrest the country from the Germans.

In these circumstances one would expect the occupied portions to continue under the military rule, thereby perhaps delaying the establishment of AMG. It isn't surprising either that the Allies are encouraging the Italians to fight the Germans. That doesn't mean the the Italians are being invited to become our allies; they're being invited to help themselves. They still must take their punishment.

The Allied leader have made it clear that there's no intention of crushing the Italian people but, on the contrary, of helping them get a fresh start. It strikes me as highly important that this be emphasized, and certainly that we don't allow ourselves to be sent off on some emotional tangent.

We've got to be tough, but we don't have to try to be tougher than we are by nature. Other Axis nations are watching Italy. No country will surrender if it believes it's going to be enslaved, as the being told by Hitler and Goebbels. being told by Hitler and Gosbbels. Anyway, all arguments notwithstanding, we'll probably be smart to let capable General Ike Eisenhower have a fling at running his own job.

Ralston Says War Not Won

Civilians Expected To Back Fighters

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.— (CP). — "Every advance made by Canadian forces means wounds and suffering for young Canadians and bereavement in Canadian homes," Defence Minister Ralston said in a speech at the Liberal Federation dinner last night. He spoke in response to a toast to the Armed Forces, proposed by Douglas Abbott, Member of Parliament for Montreal-St. Antoine-Westmount.

"Don't let any one delude himself with thinking that the war is won," said Col. Ralston. "It has only just begun."

Complaints were heard about restrictions and shortages but it should be remembered that no inconvenience, no hardship and no self-denial which Canadians at home could imagine would equal that which was endured by the fighting forces.

The Canadian Navy had kept open the road for men, munitions and supplies to reinforce the forces of Britain. Thanks to the Navy not a single man was lost in escorted convoys.

In Sicily the performance of Canadian soldiers gave the answer to those who said they would become stale through long training.

"Now our men in England are preparing for the striking of the hour which will mark an attack on western Europe," Col. Ralston said.

Chief Chemist Dies Suddenly

MARMORA, Sept. 28 — (ENS). —A shock was felt in Deloro and Marmora on Monday when it became known that William L. Rigg of Deloro had passed away that morning at the Private Patients' Pavilion, Toronto General Hospital, where he had been admitted about a week ago for a check-up.

A few years ago he was under medical care in Toronto for a heart condition, but he seemed to have recovered much of his former vigor. The late Mr. Rigg was born in Pollokshaws, Glasgow, Scotland, on April 14, 1878. For well over thirty years and up to the time of his death he was the chief chemist of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited. Prior to this he had followed his profession in South Africa and Burma, and also at the Temiskaming Testing Laboratory, Cobalt.

Among his various hobbies were music, reading, horticulture, and bowling. He sang and played the 'cello and will be remembered as a member of the Deloro String Quartette.

A great reader himself, he was able to express an opinion on current events which always commanded respect, and in addition he proved an interesting speaker. His courtesy and friendliness endeared him to the many who knew him. He was a Presbyterian in religion. Fraternally he was a Past Master of Marmora A.F. and A.M. 222. In addition, he was the vice-chairman of the Deloro Safety Committee, besides being chairman of the Inspection Committee in that same connection.

Surviving is a sister, Miss Anne Rigg, 161 Kenwood Avenue, Toronto.

The funeral will be held on Thursday, service in Bates & Maddock's Funeral Chapel, 124 Avenue Road, Toronto, at 2 p.m., followed by interment in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

How long Kesselring can continue his savage defence north of Salerno in the face of the Allied drives in other directions is a matter of opinion unless he decides to withdraw his forces in the Naples area in a "Stalingrad" defence.

A 15-year-old boy who had been an accomplice in the theft was sentenced to a term in a training school. The two, riding bicycles, stopped at the service station, and while the younger lad was making a pretence of repairing his bicycle, Stiles stole several dollars from the till. They were chased several miles by Keech before he finally caught them on the Cambray Road.

Warning against the inclusion of any inflammable materials such as matches or lighter fluid in Christmas packages intended for overseas, the Post Office pointed out to friends and relatives of servicemen to-day that many Christmas parcels were destroyed on ship-board last year because some thoughtless person had packed matches which were ignited by spontaneous combustion.

Glass and easily damaged containers should be excluded from parcels as well, along with the inflammable materials. Otherwise, "not only your own boy may suffer through your carelessness, but hundreds of other men may also lose out on their Christmas mail," Charles Lacheur, Postmaster, stated.

It was emphasized again that November 1 is the deadline date for mailing Christmas parcels to the armed forces overseas, and that gifts should be packed at once and mailed as soon as possible.

Claim Germans Stronger At Present Than In 1939

By WILLIAM FRYE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—(AP).—United States Army leaders declared Monday that, while the German High Command has abandoned expectation of victory, the Nazis' combat strength is greater than four years ago, and they will wage a desperate, bloody struggle to stave off outright defeat.

Maj.-Gen. George V. Strong, chief of military intelligence, told a conference of industrial and labor leaders and newspaper officials that the Germans now have three times as many combat divisions as they had at the time of the invasion of Poland. The Allies' main advantage, he said, lies chiefly in their ability to produce weapons.

At the same time, Strong discounted the possibility of an early collapse of Japan, and warned that the Japanese power will grow steadily as long as they retain virtual control of East Asia. Japanese resources are tremendous, and the morale, both at home and in the army, is excellent, he said.

Lt.-Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Deputy Chief of Staff, who declared the Germans have given up aspirations for victory, pictured the Allies as having the initiative, but warned that the heaviest fighting and the greatest losses lie ahead.

The two-day meeting was called to give the civilian leaders an insight into problems that have been overcome and those that lie ahead.

"Long Way to Go."

Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, said in summing up the first day's session that Strong's analysis, together with off-the-record statements by Gen. George C Marshall, Chief of Staff, and Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces, "left no doubt that our recent victories have faailed to affect in any vital degree the strength of the enemy" and "made it plain that

DEAR DOROTHY DIX — Although I am only a 13-year-old girl I can understand what a mother's love can mean to a child. My mother loves children and for the last two years she has taken care of several children whose parents are separated for the only reason that they are tired of each other, and who don't want to be bothered with their children. These youngsters range from 18 months to 13 years old, and I feel so sorry for the poor little things who have never known a mother's love.

What can be done to make these mothers realize what a great duty they have to their children?

A CONCERNED GIRL.

ANSWER—We take it for granted that every mother just naturally loves her children. Thank God, this is generally true, but there are exceptions to the rule. Not every woman has a mother's heart any more than every woman has a peaches-and-cream complexion. There are plenty of women who have not a single maternal instinct in their systems and who resent and hate the children they bear who interfere with their plan of life.

To them their children are nothing but brats who are always in the way. If they have money, they turn them over to servants to rear; if they are poor, they dump them on the street to grow up as best they can. Not one of us but who know forlorn little children who have never had any real mothering; who have never known how soft a mother's breast can be, nor how tender a mother's arms. Their mothers have been too busy going to parties or belonging to clubs, or running shops, or having careers to sing a baby to sleep at night, or kiss a hurt and make it well when a little toddler falls and gets a bump.

What every child craves more than anything else in the world is mother love. Fine clothes and expensive toys and a sumptous nursery and high-priced governesses and tutors mean nothing to him. He wants a mother to cuddle him and kiss him and play with him when he is a baby, and to follow him all along his growth to manhood with the intuitive sympathy and understanding that only mother love can give. If he misses that, he knows that he has been defrauded of the most precious thing that life has to give.

But whether a woman has love for her children or not does not change her duty towards them. When she brings a child into the world, she has assumed the greatest responsibility that a human being can undertake, or his destiny lies in her hands and she must answer to God Himself for what she makes of him. For it is the mother who forms the child's character, who sets his ideals, who breeds in him strength and high purpose, or makes of him a weakling, or a failure, or even a criminal.

No one will deny that rearing children is a hard job. It calls for endless work, endless patience, endless sacrifice, endless watching and praying, but no woman who is not willing to give herself in love and faithfulness to the task, has any right to have a baby.

DEAR MISS DIX—I am married for the second time to a widower with grown children. I also have grown children. Now the question has arisen: Where are we going to be buried when we pass to the Great Beyond? I have a burial place in one cemetery with members of my family there. He has a burial place in another cemetery with members of his family there.

My idea is to buy two graves entirely separate from the two families. His idea is for me to go with my family and he to his. In other words, I become after death a member of my family by name. If I do that, I shall surely have my first married name inscribed on the tomb. Am I right, or is he?

ANSWER—Do you think after you are a saint in glory that you are going to bother about where you are buried? Or are you expecting to use your angel wings to flop around cemeteries reading the names on the tombs? It seems to me a folish thing for you and your husband to spoil your nice happy married life together by fighting over what's to happen to your unknowing bodies after your souls have left them.

Jealeusy should not go beyond the grave, and if your husband wants to be buried by the side of his first wife and among his own kin, be broad-minded enough to gratify his wishes in the matter. Evidently he is willing to concede you the same rights as regards your first husband.

However, as you don't seem able to agree on the subject, your plan of starting a fresh graveyard for the two of you seems a good compromise. But, strictly speaking the Emily Post of the matter would certainly be that a wife goes where her husband goes, even in death.

In any case it would be taboo to have your first husband's name put on the tombstone, since it is no longer yours.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—We have two children, one a fine, upstanding boy in the service, the other a girl of 18 who has disgraced us and is not allowed to come home. Our boy is coming home on a furlough soon and will be expecting to see his sister. If we tell him about her, it will break his heart as she has broken ours. What shall we do?

BROKEN-HEARTED PARENTS.

Tell Boy of Sister's Waywardness

ANSWER—You cannot keep your bitter news from your son. He is bound to find out about his sister, and it seems to me that the shock will be less great for him if you write him about what has happened and let him be prepared, in a measure, for the sorrow that has darkened your home, instead of coming full of joyous anticipations, perhaps with little presents for the girl, and to find her gone under such tragic circumstances.

I do not minimize your grief. Nothing else, not even death itself, is such a blow to parents as a daughter's shame. But that is the agony that tens of thousands of fathers and mothers are going through now when so many foolish young girls have fallen the victims to war romances.

At 18 a girl is so young. Just a child, with the judgment of a child and the passions of a woman. She is so ignorant. So unsophisticated. So credulous. So eager for love. So easily led astray. So can't you find it in your heart to forgive her? To pick her up as you did when she was a baby and stumbled? To take her back into your home and throw the cloak of your respectability about her, and save her as much as you can from the cruel wounds the world will deal her. If you keep your doors shut against her, she has nowhere to go except farther down the wrong road on which she has started.

Perhaps the best treat you could give your boy will be to have his sister at home to welcome him.

tem, the wheat board each month has announced the average price of wheat prevailing during the four-week period. A drawback to bakers covering the amount between 77⅜ cents and the average price has been provided through the Prices Stability Corporation.

While the wheat price held at less than $1 a bushel, the strain on the federal treasury was no greater than had been anticipated; but when the price began to move toward $1.20 the drawback became high expensive, since the annual consumption of wheat for human use is about 50,000,000 bushels.

Honey Rations Now Doubled

OTTAWA, Sept. 28—(CP)—Molasses and honey rations will be doubled and coupon values of corn, maple, cane and blended syrups increased effective Thursday the Prices Board announced last night.

Under this revised ration, coupons D4 and D-5, which were scheduled to become valid Oct. 15, now become valid Sept. 30.

One "D" coupon will be good for 14 ounces of corn, cane or blended table syrup instead of the previous 12 ounces. The coupon value for maple syrup is being increased from 10 ounces to 12 ounces.

The board said in its announcement that because preserves rationing gives consumers a number of choices of both products and container sizes it was necessary to put the system into operation and then make adjustments on the basis of experience.

Premier To Avoid

been acting president of the Federation for the past year, presided and introduced the speakers.

Mr. King discussed the recent Ontario and Prince Edward Island elections, and the four Federal by-elections last month, when government candidates were defeated in each case and the seats were lost to the party.

The provincial elections, he said, were merely a reflection of the electors' reaction ot their provincial administrations, and had no relation to federal affairs.

The by-elections were lost, he said, because the political parties opposing the Government had been organizing and working for political purposes throughout the war, while the Liberal Party, pursuant to its mandate from the people obtained in the 1940 elections, was devoting all its energies to the single purpose of winning the war.

Scorns Small Party.

But he intimated that the time had come to change this, and the assumption was, in the absence of any elaboration of this point, that the Liberal Party would at once embark on extensive political organization.

Mr. King spoke scornfully of the "Bloc Populaire Canadien" formed last winter in Quebec by Maxime Raymond, member for Beauharnois-Laprairie, his former supporter, who took with him into Opposition two or three other Quebec Liberals.

That party, he said, "deliberately seeks to set Quebec against the rest of Canada," and was apparently indifferent to the harm it would do the people of Quebec "if it succeeds, by setting the rest of Canada, and, indeed, the rest of North America, agains Quebec."

Of its leaders, he said they "are a small group of malcontents indifferent to the good name of Canada and to the security of Canada.... They talk as though Britain and not Nazi Germany was the real enemy."

Success of the bloc populaire candidate in one of the Quebec by-elections might prove a good thing "in that the people of Quebec have been put on their guard thus early."

Warns Labor

Mr. King voiced a warning to labor, referring to the recent affiliation of the Canadian Congress of Labor with the C.C.F.

In all his long experience with labor problems, Mr. King said, "I have yet to see an alliance made by labor with any political party, or labor itself become a political party, seeking its own ends as against those of society generally, that the outcome has no, sooner or later, proven disastrous alike to labor and to the country."

His criticism of the Progressive Conservative party was that it had sought to raise conscription as an issue early in the war, and had carried on a vigorous political organization campaign while the government was seeking to win the war at the expense of its party considerations.

He quoted a reported statement by E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, warning his followers that the Federal Government would seek an immediate election in hope the people would not "change horses" in midstream.

Puts War First.

Mr. King said of Mr. Jolliffe that "were I, like him, thinking in terms of winning elections rather than, as I am, of winning the war," he would find ample grounds for an immediate dissolution of parliament and an appeal to the people.

"I should have no doubt whatever as to what the results of that appeal would be.

"At this, of all times, the Canadian people are not in a mood to countenance any change of administration that would weaken or impair the influence and might of the magnificent war effort of this country."

He dismissed the Social Credit (New Democracy) party with the declaration it was "shrinking rapidly."

The question of an election occupied one-third of the Prime Minister's hour-long address. He gave Prime Minister Churchill as his authority for saying that "the bloodiest fighting is still to come," and added:

"Until that terrible period is past, no one could wish for a general election in Canada if it is at all possible to avoid one.

May Be Inevitable.

"But a general election may, nonetheless, prove to be inevitable before the war in Europe is over." He said he hoped it could be avoided until the survivors of Canada's overseas forces have returned home.

Mr. King said that a number of circumstances might make an election necessary before the war is over.

as Marshal Goering has released great numbers to the army. The air force probably has no more than 10,000 to 12,000 first-line planes. Most are fighters, as aircraft production generally has been converted to fighters.

Since 1941, there have been 20,000 training accidents. Such accidents ruin equipment, and the aircraft reserve appears to consist of only about 3,000 planes, which is too small a margin.

The German Navy has not been improved except in submarines.

Since the rise of Nazism there has been a lot of talk in and outside of Germany that the army should try to liquidate Nazism. Years passed and only weak reactions were noted on the part of the German military.

Hitler knew what he did when he shot Gen. Kurt. Von Schleicher who was the last political general. German officers now are well known for loyalty and a sense of duty.

"Have own sub on our hands."

"Every one of the six submarines attacked remained on the surface and attempted to battle it out with the attackers," said the R.C.A.F. statement. It referred to a "fierce curtain of anti-aircraft fire" in telling of the damage to one plane.

Air Marshal A. E. Godfrey, on patrol in the course of an inspection tour, took part in two attacks. Acting as spare gunner on one plane he exchanged fire with Nazi anti-aircraft gunners in each encounter.

"What a picnic," was the comment of Flt.-Ltd. John Martin, of Winnipeg, one of the crew captains, after the two-day battle had ended.

The first attack registered in the squadron's fight was made by a bomber captained by WO. John Billings of Vancouver, with WO. Art Adamson of Vegreville, Alta., as co-pilot.

One Motor Conked.

"They ran into a hail of flak which knocked out one motor, but pressed their attack with depth charges despite the damage,' said the R.C.A.F. "WO. William C. Maxwell, navigator from Toronto, suffered a slight wound when a piece of flak came through his 'greenhouse perspex and lodged in his leg. He now is carrying it in his pocket as a souvenir of the renewed battle of the North Atlantic."

Other members of the Billings crew were W. Bruce (Hank) Henry, Bracebridge, Ont.; Flt. Sgt. Edward Daye, North Gower, Ont., and Cpl. Dick Hake, Toronto.

In the six attacks, theirs was the only aircraft damaged.

Flt.-Lt. Martin and his crew on the same day tangled with two submarines, blasting one with depth charges and engaging the second with machine-gun fire. It was Martin who, when Adamson radioed for help, replied "Have own sub on our hands."

During his second attack, Martin also found himself out of depth charges and appealed to convoy escort to come to the scene. He received the same reply he had given Adamson.

Martin brought his Liberator home without a scratch, but said: "I really had to take evasive action to miss that barrage."

Cobourg Flier.

In his crew were Flt.-Sgt. Lloyd Conlin, Drumheller, Alta.; FO. Doug Campbell, Cobourg, Ont.; WO. Arthur (Bill) Johns, Sudbury, Ont., and WO. Mackenzie Gilmour, Gravenhurst, Ont.

Still another clash occurred the same day when a crew captained by FO. A. (Gus) Cirko of Fort William sighted a U-boat as their plane was returning to base. It was too dark to carry out an attack, but when the submarine opened fire with tracer, the Liberator replied with machine guns.

The second day opened with a dawn attack by Sqdn. Ldr. Fred (Bunt) Green of St. Thomas, Ont., and his crew, who had taken off in the middle of the night. Like Martin on the previous day, Green and his crew met two U-boats, attacking one with depth charges and raking the other with machine-gun fire. On their way back to base they were advised of a third submarine in the vicinity but failed to sight it.

At Emden yesterday the Americans used their "Pathfinders" technique, which undoubtedly is one of the new tactics which Gen. H. H. Arnold, head of the United States Air Forces said recently were being set up to combat the hitherto big weather obstacle. By mounting high explosive bombs in a different manner the Americans were able to carry a greater load of incendiaries.

A small number of enemy planes were over Eastern Britain last night. Little damage was caused by bombs and there were few casualties.

Wire Merger Creates BigMonopoly

Western Union Ties In With Postal Telegraph

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—(AP)—The Federal Communications Commission today approved merger of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies in a move designed to give the United States one vast telegraph system that can operate efficiently and economically.

Both wire companies sought the merger.

The approval order, last step needed for the machinery to be merged contemplates a two-year integration period for the far flung holdings of each system to be shaken down to a money-making instead of losing basis.

The commission found that in this case a monopoly would be a good thing and would eliminate "useless paralleling" of facilities and operations. It also would avoid "wasteful expenditures of resources and manpower" and on the whole would protect "the interests of the public."

The financial conditions of the two wire networks indicate a merger, the Commission asserted. Postal now is losing $7,000,000 a year. Western Union showed a loss for 1938 and while its position has been improved since by abnormal wartime business, "the return of normal conditions may again result in operating losses with a duplicate system in the domestic telegraph industry," F.C.C. said.

Absorbs 10,000

Westrn Union has pledged to absorb Postal's 10,000 employees, retaining their seniority rights as if they always had worked for the merged company, and in addition applying Western Union's pension plan terms to them. Moreover, the order said, the wages of the absorbed workers are to be raised to the "generally higher" levels of Western Union.

F.C.C. said that under the plans agreed upon there will be no need to drop any of the combined 60,000 employees because of the merger.

Western Union was ordered to divest itself of its international operations, confiding itself to domestic trade, and distributing its international business to established carriers now in that field. Western Union now has cable links with Canada, the Caribbean area, South America, the West Indies, Newfoundland, the British Isles and the Azores.

Western Union's capital stock of 1,050,000 shares of common, par value $100, will be changed to 1,235,000 shares class A stock without par value and 308,124 shares of Class B stock, no par value. Class A stock has priority for the first $2 in dividends. After a year, class C holders may trade for class A stock, at a rate of five for three, respectively. Each class A share commands a stockholder's vote; class B, three-fifths of a vote.

Net book cost of all postal property to be acquired was estimated at $28,521,147. The principal liability to be assumed is a loan of $13,000,000 from the United States Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

COBOURG, Sept. 28 — (ENS)—Victory Loan Headquarters at Cobourg have announced that the Fifth Victory Loan objective for the County of Northurberland will be $1,700,000 This is the largest objective ever set for the county in previous campaigns. In the Fourth Victory Loan drive last spring, the people of the county subscribed to $1,680,450 bonds, or just $20,000 less than they will be asked to raise this time.

The campaign, which opens from October 18 to November 6, will be headed by A. L. Jex as honorary chairman and Fred J. Slade as the county chairman. Other members of the executive committee, who have guided the previous Victory Loans to successful conclusions, are as follows:

County vice-chairmen, W. E. Edwards, Mayor J. D. Burnet, and R. G. Parker.

Chairman Special Names, G. W. Taylor.

Chairman Payroll Savings, R. G. Parker.

Chairman Public Relations, Dr. A. R. Richards.

The only change in the executive committee from previous drives is that of public relations chairman, A. R. Willmott, Cobourg lawyer, who has handled the publicity aspects of the county drive during four campaigns, asked to be relieved of this post due to pressure of business. He is succeeded as the public relations chairman by Dr. A. R. Richards.

For the purpose of the campaign the county is divided into canvassing districts, each district being headed by a choirman, as follows:

Cobourg, A. D. Spragge.
Hamilton Township, F. W. Ball.
Colborne, A. D. Hall.
Warkworth, W. G. Allen.
Hastings, W. M. Fowlds.
Brighton, A. A. Martin.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

SCOUT APPLE DAY

We have only two weeks from this coming Saturday in which to prepare for the coming Apple Day. In case I have not got in touch with you I would like every Cub and Scout leader to let me know by the end of this week how many boys will be able to take part in the Apple Day. The division of district can be better made with this information. It might be mentioned that the date set is Saturday, October 16 and that the apples have already been ordered. This year it will cost about $220 to buy what a few short years ago could have been secured for $120. So let us get ready for the big push.

ST LUKE'S PACK

Jack Bertrand led in the opening grand howl at the last meeting The admission forms are coming in but we would like those who still have them to return them as soon as possible This week the registration fees should be started so let up keep that in mind We are very glad to welcome Billy Minnie to the pack as a new chum and trust that his stay will be both helpful and happy The pack is forging along the upward trail, getting boys in the place of those who have left for the troop and will soon be back to is full membership. On Saturday, 18 boys attended the jamboree where a good showing was made by them in attaining third place in the Cub events. All enjoyed the camp fire program that followed supper and were on the road for home about 8 o'clock. Thanks is extended to the fathers of the boys who so kindly helped out in the transportation to and from the Scouts grounds.

All Cubs are asked to be on hand Tuesday so that test work can be done.

ALL SAINTS' TROOP

Scouts and 30 Cubs held a joint meeting last week at which four members of the Pack bade farewell to their chums of the past wanderings through the jungle and started their hike along the Scout trail. The officers of both groups gave the boys great encouragement as they started on the new journey while the chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Filer, gave them Spiritual blessings. It was an event that Bud Albrook, Bob Pearce, Don Buckan and Douglas Graham will long remember. Group Committeeman Mr. A. Hope was also on hand for the ceremony. Two other lads, Terry Taylor and Craig Corner were unable to attend and will be accepted into the Troop at some future date. A new patrol has been formed in the troop and has chosen the name of "The Crows." No doubt their call of "caw caw" will be well heard in the troop activities from now on.

KNOX TROOP

With the attendance of new boys nearly every week the roll has now risen to 26 and three patrols are now complete. They are the Fox, the Lynx and the Loon. The troop is experiencing some real advancement and it is expected that in the near future one of the senior scouts will be promoted to troop leader. In the meantime every boy is requested to phone the Scouter at 3021 if he cannot possibly attend the meetings each Tuesday evening. This will give your leader every chance to plan his program to the best advantage.

MURRAY ST. PACK

During the past few weeks the Pack has been busy rebuilding its sixes and filling up many vacancies. A number of new Chums have been accepted into the Pack: Ted Reid, Norman Mitchell, Billy Nicholls, Ronald Peltz (Suggeena), Jimmy Peltz, Hugh Bertram, Kenneth Outwater, Morley Tuck, Ronald Wall, Lionel Hempstead and Kenneth Barrett are all new Chums in the Jungle.

During the last meeting jamboree events were practiced and the game of British Bulldog was played. We are also glad to welcome a new leader in Baloo Jennings. Nine members were absent from the last meeting from the roll of 31 Cubs.

On Saturday 21 Cubs attended the jamboree at the Scout grounds and took part in every event. In the standings the Pack was tied with All Saints' for fourth place. The totem pole was taken to the jamboree ready for presentation to the lucky winners.

ST. JOHN'S PACK

Thirty-one boys formed the parade circle on Friday evening as black plume led in the grand howl. Two more new Chums were accepted into the Pack life and had their first taste of jungle wisdom. Roderick Delaney and Clarence James will soon be on their way to Tenderpad life. On Saturday 26 Cubs and three leaders attended the jamboree and they brought the totem pole back home. We will always feel that St. John's is the rightful home of this memorial trophy made by Mr. A. Hope in memory of Bill Coleman, a former leader of his Pack. Next week the boys are requested to be on time as a full program is planned.

CAMPING OUT

We were glad to note that members of three troops were out at the Scout grounds over the week-end. Three members of St. John's and six members of the K. of C. troop under Mr. Rivard camped from Friday night to Sunday afternoon while Scouter E. McNabb and two of his troop stayed over Saturday night and are probably the first to have slept in the new hut.

SACRED HEART TROOP

On Sunday a meeting of the Scout parents was held at which Scouter Johnson and Scouter Peter Dominik gave an outline of the troop plans for the coming year. A good number of parents were present to hear of the projects in view. The troop has several of its old members back now and also a newcomer from the 1st Long Branch Troop whose parents are at present in this city. Dave Hatton is a second class Scout and will be a help to new fellows now with the troop.

CAMPBELLFORD

Stephens Church Has Anniversary Service

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 28 (ENS)—Rev. J. R. R. Cooper, B.A., B.D., of Warkworth, was guest speaker at Stephen's United Church on Sunday when that congregation held its annual anniversary services.

The church was decorated with autumn flowers, with marigolds and snapdragons predominating, amid a profusion of other cut flowers and potted plants. Rev. J. R. Bick, pastor of the Seymour charge, was especially gratified by the generous response made by the congregation to the special thankoffering which coincided with the service.

A feature of the anniversary was the music offered by the choir and the vocal selections contributed by a mixed quartette, comprising Mrs. James Thompson, Mr. Frank Heagle, Mrs. Frank Potts, and Mr. Edward Rannie, and vocal solos by Mrs. Rae Williams. Appreciation was expressed to Miss Mildred Heagle, whose contribution as pianist with the choir contributed much to the beauty of the services.

CAMPBELLFORD

Special Music Given By Army

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 28 (ENS)—Arriving here on Saturday afternoon the Fenelon Falls Salvation Army Band was featured in a special week-end of services here arranged by the local corps officer, Captain Alex. Turnbull.

The band comprised twenty-three members, and a unique feature of it was that only three of the twenty were not related, while the oldest member of the group, which comprised eleven women, was a woman, Mrs. J. Brokenshire who, though well past sixty, plays a tenor horn with genuine ability. Under Bandmaster Allan Brokenshire, the group has a fine record behind it. Accompanying them were Major William Millar, the commanding officer of the Fenelon Falls Corps; Adjutant Fred Banker, and Brigadier Geraldine Hollande, all of Fenelon Falls. Assisting the band and chorus during the week-end was Major Reginald Bamsey, officer in charge of Salvation Army Auxiliary work in Peterborough.

Feature Singing.

Following open air concerts on the west side of town and on Front Street the band gathered at the Citadel at 8.30, where before a large crowd they provided an hour of fellowship, music and singing. On Sunday open air concerts were again given, and in the morning this was under direction of Brigadier Hollande. In the afternoon the sacred concert which was to have been held on the Public School grounds was transferred to the S.A. Citadel, where a program under the chairmanship of Major William Millar was presented.

The evening began with another open air concert on Front Street, and from there marched to the Citadel, where Major Bamsey directed the meeting, and later delivered an inspirational message on the truths of the Gospel. The band's final appearance was made following this at a program of sacred music presented in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, where Brigadier G. Hollande was the chairman for an hour of musical and variety numbers by the group.

Winnipeg Grain Exchange Stops Trading

OTTAWA, Sept. 28 (CP)—Trade Minister MacKinnon early today announced suspension of wheat trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Simultaneously Mr. MacKinnon announced the payment to producers of an initial advance of $1.25 per bushel, basis No. 1 Northern, in store Fort William, with participation for the crop years 1943-44 and 1944-45, together with early distribution of payments on participation certificates outstanding in the hands of producer in connection with the 1940, 1941 and 1942 crops.

Mr. MacKinnon said the Canadian Wheat Board was taking over at Monday's closing prices and until the board had completed the necessary arrangements the closing out of future contracts would be at those prices.

The board's initial payment to producers on authorized deliveries beginning today and for the remainder of the crop year 1943-44 and for the full crop year of 1944-45 will be $1.25 per bushel, basis No. 1 Northern wheat, in store at Fort William or Port Arthur, or Vancouver.

Farmers Not Benefiting

The Minister said the change in wheat policy was necessary because of the unusual circumstances surrounding the marketing of Canadian wheat under present conditions.

"By placing control of the purchase and sale of Canadian wheat in the hands of the Wheat Board it will be possible to deal with the current and future marketing problems on a basis more suitable to war conditions," the announcement said.

Transportation difficulties had interfered with the normal function of the Winnipeg market, and farmers had not been able to benefit fully from the rising prices.

"Under this new arrangement the Government intends to meet requirements under the mutual aid plan and to provide wheat to subsidized domestic purchasers out of Government-owned wheat rather than out of wheat in which the farmer has a participating interest," the statement continued.

"The Government will thus be able to avoid the position of being both the farmers' agent and, in effect, the ultimate buyer of the wheat.

"Other export sales, including sales to the United States, will be made out of wheat delivered to the board during the 1943-44 and 1944-45 crop years in which producers have a participating interest."

The Canadian Wheat Board will be empowered to purchase for the Government account all unsold wheat stocks in commercial positions in Canada, including wheat held in the 1940-41, 1941-42 and 1942-43 Canadian Wheat Board crop accounts, at Monday's closing prices on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Internal Strife Flares In China

CHUNGKING, Sept. 28—(AP)—Strained relations between Chinese Communists and President Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalist Party flared openly today when China's embryonic parliament, the Peoples' Political council, accused the Communists of "a disobedient attitude and subversive activities."

Taking public notice of the Communists' first open attacks against Chiang the council, which closed its week-long session today, denounced them in resolutions.

Each party capital—Chungking, and Yennan in Shensi Province—has frequently accused the other of disrupting the national unity and hindering the prosecution of the war against Japan.

The Communist party in China has maintained its own independent army throughout the Japanese war.

COBOURG

Two Boys Admit Robbing Farmer

COBOURG, Sept. 28.—(ENS). — Arrested over the week-end after they had rewarded a farmer's generosity of food and shelter by stealing from him, Emile Darveau and Maurice Beaudoin of Montreal, pleaded guilty to theft in police court yesterday and also to vagrancy. Their companions, Lionel Langlois and Roger Vaillancourt, also of Montreal, pleaded guilty to vagrancy. They were remanded for a week in order that their records, if any, can be looked up.

Provincial Constable Douglas Wilson told the court that the four youths had called at the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Denyes on Saturday night, asking for work. As Mr. Denyes was silo filling he told them he could use them. Mrs. Denyes gave them a big supper and then Denyes bedded them down in the barn for the night.

On the following day Darveau and Beaudoin did a small portion of work and disappeared. The other two boys left without doing any work. Later Mr. Denyes found two leather windbreakers and two sweaters gone. The boys were later arrested and the stolen goods recovered.

Examiner Carriers Have Sold $35,000 Worth Of Stamps

That the Peterborough Examiner carriers had in the past year and one half sold almost $35,000 worth of war savings stamps was the statement made before the Peterborough Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon Monday by Bill Edgar, one of the leading carrier stamp salesmen.

The youthful speaker told his hearers that this week was the week in which newspaper carrier salesmen all over North America were making reports on their accomplishments to their own communities and to the nation, and that next Saturday would be the 4th celebration of National Newspaper Boy Day.

"I understand," he said "the day was planned as a tribute to us youthful business men who deliver, rain or shine, hot or cold, the daily newspapers of North America and who among many other services, are now selling war savings stamps to help preserve the way of life our fathers and older brothers are fighting for."

"A short time ago one of my fellow carriers addressed this club on the purchase of war savings stamps. You responded splendidly. For that reason you will be interested in knowing that the Peterborough Examiner carriers have sold to date, in a little more than a year and one half, almost $35,000 worth of war savings stamps on the newspaper routes. The Government at Ottawa thought so highly of our efforts here in Peterborough that the Prime Minister of this great country of ours asked that he might congratulate us. I am very proud that I was one of the five representatives of the Examiner's carrier organization taken to Ottawa and personally congratulated by the Prime Minister. We are selling stamps, not for any glory but only to speed Canada on her road to victory."

You may be interested in knowing that our local group is only one of over a thousand such organizations in North America selling war savings stamps. In a 20-month period approximately 150,000 newspaper carrier boys and girls have sold in Canada and the United States over $91,000,000 in war savings stamps. We expect to reach a total of over $100,000,000 by the end of this week."

90 Carriers

"The Peterborough Examiner carriers in the city of Peterborough number only 90. We are independent merchants. We purchase our papers at wholesale and sell them at retail to secure our profit which this year will amount to $16,000.

"I would like to assure you that having really earned that money we know what to do with it. To the last Victory Loan we Examiner carriers subscribed for $2,000 in Victory Bonds. We also hold well over that amount in war savings stamps."

"We carriers in Peterborough had another activity of which we are proud. This last spring when there was a call for blood donors for the Red Cross we decided to help. We canvassed every home in Peterborough and secured over 250 new blood donors. The Red Cross has advised us it was a big help."

"We are continuing to sell war savings stamps and ask for your continued help and co-operation. This week we are also going to make another city-wide canvass for new blood donors. They are urgently needed. We ask your cooperation in this effort, too."

"When National Newspaper Boy Day comes next Saturday, October 2, we carriers of the Peterborough Examiner sincerely trust you will feel we merit the tribute."

President M. H. Riddle assured the young speaker that he could be assured of Rotary co-operation in the efforts of the carriers. "We are right behind you, ready to help you in every way we can. These newspaper boys and girls have been doing a fine job and I sometimes think we do not give them all the credit we should. There is also credit coming to the Examiner newspaper for the work it has been doing for these boys and girls."

Wife Fails To Write Airman Disgusted

COBOURG, Sept. 28.—LAC Fred V. Jones, R.A.F., stationed at Kingston, pleaded guilty to bigamy in police court yesterday and was remanded for sentence to Sept. 30.

Chief W. J. Carey testified that he arrested Jones at the home of a Cobourg woman with whom he had gone through a form of marriage on Sept. 11 of this year. The arrest was made on Sept. 18. Jones admitted to Chief Carey that he had a wife living in England.

Jones had an excellent record of efficiency in the air force, it was revealed.

Asked why he contracted marriage for the second titme, the accused said that he had not been hearing regularly from his wife in England and got "fed up."

A Kept Press For Canada?

Mr. Elmore Philpott, the commentator on political affairs, has drawn attention to the fact that in the recent Ontario election not a single daily or weekly newspaper supported the C.C.F., and that in spite of this coldness that party polled a large vote; indeed, Mr. Philpott says, the C.C.F. made its best showing in precisely those districts where press opposition was most violent.

What he says is true, and it is a fact in which the C.C.F. may legitimately take pride. The day has passed when people accepted the views of a party newspaper as their political gospel; the newspaper of today takes a quieter tone, suggesting and explaining, and its influence may be great or little; in the 1936 election in the U.S. Mr. Roosevelt was returned to power in spite of the opposition of a majority of powerful newspapers in his country.

But in this connection Mr. Philpott makes a strange statement. He says: "Many of the progressives, who have had most experience in the political fight in Canada, believe that one of the first necessities will be to expropriate, or otherwise socialize, at least one important newspaper in each large centre".

Now if the people of Canada cannot be invariably influenced by a free press, why do Mr. Philpott and his politically experienced friends think that they will respond any better to a kept press? If, let us say, the Winnipeg Free Press were expropriated by the C.C.F. and turned into a sort of Voelkischer Beobachter would anybody read it or believe what it said? We think not.

The establishment of a government-controlled press is an impossibility if we are to retain any vestige of democracy. Let us suppose again that the Free Press were expropriated by a C.C.F. government: Dr. Dafoe and Mr. Ferguson would at once be dismissed from that paper and a C.C.F. propagandist installed as editor. But then, at a subsequent election, let us suppose that a Progressive Conservative government were elected: would it not dismiss the C.C.F. editor at once, and put a P.C. man in his place? And if the Liberals, or the Communists, or the Social Crediters were to gain power, would they not do the same? What earthly use would such a paper be to the public? It would be a laughing-stock.

Mr. Philpott overlooks the fact that every newspaper reports the activities of all parties without bias, and expresses its political opinions only in its editorial columns. People are free to read the latter, or pass them by. Could a government-controlled newspaper be trusted to report all news impartially, even when it was discreditable to the government in power? No, it most certainly could not. Government newspapers are propaganda sheets, and the public would treat them as such. (At this point we think it fair to explain that the Examiner, after the recent election, received a letter from the provincial headquarters of the C.C.F., thanking us for our unbiassed handling of campaign news.)

The day that a government seeks to control the press in this country will be the day that an emigration of thousands of our best citizens will begin; they will go either to Britain or the U.S., in search of political freedom.

A Canadian Newsreel

We are glad to learn that Paramount Pictures means to prepare a special Canadian newsreel for release in this country. It will, we are sure, be welcomed by hundreds of thousands of filmgoers here.

Although we have the stronge[st] feelings of sympathy and comradeship with the United States, Canadians cannot always be expected to enjoy and absorb newsreels which are prepared primarily for American consumption. The effusive patriotism of our allies is splendid to see, but it cannot be expected to affect us as it affects them. After too many newsreel shots of American troops training, or testing weapons, or enjoying themselves, a Canadian audience lapses into a state of glumness. It is not good for our morale to see too many pictures of U.S. troops and very few of our own; Canada's feeling of inferiority will never be cured that way.

Apart from newsreel shots connected with the war, the general effect of such a Canadian feature will be good. We want to see films of the interesting things which are happening elsewhere in the world, of course, but we want to see the interesting things which are happening in Canada, as well. We are glad to welcome the Canadian newsreel, and we foresee a great success for it.

Red Patch In Sicily

The Canadian Press has, we feel, done a fine thing in producing its booklet, Red Patch In Sicily. It is intended to serve as a temporary record of the part which Canadians played in the Sicilian campaign until a more permanent history is available. It is being sent to Government and Army officials, provincial Ministers of Education, military training centres and universities, and will be distributed in a number of schools.

The body of the book is made up of the dispatches of Ross Munro, the Canadian Press man who covered the Sicilian campaign for that news service. Winston Churchill has paid high tribute to the work of war correspondents in all the theatres of this conflict; his words are richly deserved by men like Munro, who accept every danger of battle in order to find out the truth about the fighting, and make it known to the world.

The "red patch", as most people know, is the battle patch worn by the Canadian 1st Division on the sleeves of their uniforms; Italian troops called the Canadians "the Red Patch devils', because they could not be intimidated by mortar fire. What prouder name could soldiers want?

The full history of the First Great War has still to be written; it takes decades to sort all the causes, incidents and effects of a world war into their proper places of importance. But future historians will at least have ample information about the fighting in this war contained in newspaper files, where the dispatches of correspondents are contained. Red Patch In Sicily may be regarded as the first draft of a history of the Sicilian campaign.

Summing Up Musso

In Canada we do not go in very heavily for intellectual games; we still have the pioneer idea that a man who uses his brains for any purpose other than "getting ahead" is either a fool or a knave, and had better be watched. Because of this prejudice we miss a lot of fun.

The British weekly, New Statesman and Nation, for instance, holds a weekly contest for the best piece of writing on a set topic, and some of the entries are excellent. Recently the subject was, "Write an epigram in verse on the fall of Mussolini". The winning entry was this—

Stranger, stay; and understand
An Empire is not built of sand
By men of muslin, feet of clay;
I came, I shouted and I passed away

A very neat summing-up, is it not? Even more brief and pointed is this one—

He dosed his country once, with humour grim:
And now she has evacuated him!

A more serious tone is taken by another of the competitors, who writes thus—

For twenty hellish years
He dug a pit;
Filled it with poison, blood and tears—
And then fell into it.

And in another a delicate compliment is paid to Mr. Churchill, who has called Mussolini everything from "jackal" to "utensil"—

If there's a Tacitus to tell your story,
Time won't efface a certain Tory.

There is a special sort of satisfaction to be derived from the attempt to sum up a notable event in an epigram. It is good fun and good for the wits. And of course it makes for brevity. What a pity there are no weekly prizes in our Parliament for the most epigrammatic speeches!

NOTE AND COMMENT

Yesterday afternoon, in a bitter cold wind, we saw a single swallow. Need we stress the fact that it was not making a summer?

The town of Stratford-on-Avon awoke one day last week to find that someone had daubed red paint on the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre, on the statues of Hamlet and Lady Macbeth, and had run up a woman's drawers on the flag-staff of the Town Hall. The Hamlet statue doubtless remarked to Lady Macbeth, "Though this be madness, yet there is method in't", and that ferocious matron probably replied:

Were such things here as we do speak about?
Or have we eaten on the insane root
That takes the reason prisoner?

The US Fulbright Resolution

From the
WINNIPEG FREE PRESS

THE Fulbright resolution, calling for participation by the United States in a post-war organization for the safeguarding of world peace, has passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 360 to 29. The resolution simply states that Congress "hereby expresses itself as favouring the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace, among the nations of the world, and as favouring participation of the United States therein, through constitutional processes."

This resolution was a synthesis of nearly a score of foreign-policy declarations introduced in the House before Congress recessed in midsummer. It was reported unanimously by the Foreign Affairs Committee, with the adoption of an amendment submitted by the Republicans which added the three words concluding the resolution. It was called up for consideration under a rule which precluded further amendment by Congress and also necessitated a two-thirds majority.

THE amendment made by the committee whereby unanimity in the committee and an overwhelming majority in the House were secured may have been regarded by some of the former Republican isolationists, who supported it, as maintaining the sovereignty of Congress over all international provisions for the maintenance and enforcement of peace. In that case the Fulbright resolution, despite all its brave words, would be nothing but an empty gesture. But upon a reasonable interpretation the phrase means nothing more than that American adhesion to the plan by which a just and lasting peace is to be secured will require the approval of Congress in keeping with the constitution. The amendment thus appears to be mere surplusage added for the purpose of making it easier for Congressmen with isolationist records to vote for it. The hostile votes of the die-hard isolationists—three Democrats and twenty-six Republicans—are a certificate of character for the resolution as a bona fide declaration by the House of Representatives in support of the creation of international machinery with power to maintain peace.

THE resolution is important but it is not conclusive as to American intentions unless the Senate adopts it or makes a statement of its own which will be equally explicit. Consideration of amour propre may lead to the latter course; the Senate, which is given special responsibility in the international matters by the constitution, does not relish playing second fiddle to the House of Representatives in this important matter. Senator Connally, the head of the Senate Foreign Committee, is reported as regarding it as particularly fitting that the Senate come forward now with a straight, simple and strong declaration in favour of post-war international action to preserve the peace, thus wiping out as far as possible its record on the Versailles Treaty and the League of Nations Covenant following the first World War. A resolution by the Senate to have desirable moral effect would require a two-thirds vote in its favour, since this is the majority that is necessary for the ratification of international agreement.

IT is hardly necessary to stress the extreme importance of these developments. Mr. Churchill has said, in effect, that nothing is impossible in world reorganization with the co-operation of the United States; and without it little is possible. Senator Connally has supplemented this observation with the remark: "Without the United States any peace-keeping organization is doomed to failure, just as it was before." The United States cannot contract itself out of responsibility for the future course of the world. By a refusal to co-operate it prejudices that future to the same degree that it ensures it by offering leadership and co-operation. The pitiful minority opposition to the Fulbright resolution in the House of Representatives cannot unfortunately be accepted as the final proof that it is no longer necessary to reckon with isolationist sentiment. It still has powerful support, particularly in the Republican press; and will be a factor next year in the Congressional elections and possibly in the presidential election as well. But it can be said that the prospects for American participation in post-war world government were never so bright as they are at this moment; and that in this fact there is as much reason for cheerfulness as in the news from the battlefield. This war will be won; and its fruits will not be thrown away by an inadequate peace.

A Bible Message

Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him....I am the Lord, and there is none else, there is no God beside me: I girded thee, though thou hast not known me: that they may know from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that there is none beside me. I am the Lord, and there is none else. (Isa. 45: 1, 5, 6.)

O Lord, my strength, and my fortress, and my refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit. Shall a man make gods unto himself, and they are no gods?

Therefore, behold, I will this once cause them to know, I will cause them to know mine hand and my might; and they shall know that my name is The Lord. (Jer. 16: 19-21.)

The Lord hath brought forth our righteousness: come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the Lord our God. . . He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding....

Every man is brutish by his knowledge; every founder is confounded by the graven image: for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them. They are vanity, the work of errors. (Jer. 51: 10, 15, 17, 18.)

"Allied" Is Right Word

The 5th Army of Salerno fame is, in a true sense, an Allied army, and is so referred to in dispatches. More of the emphasis on "Allied" and less on "British," "Canadian," "American," and so forth, will be all to the good where forces of these countries are co-operating.—Brantford Expositor.

Praise for the British Climate

(ST. THOMAS TIMES-JOURNAL)

LEAVING out of account the purely tropical and polar areas, there is probably no country in the world which has a climate so maligned as that of the British Isles. Canadian soldiers, accustomed to a dry climate—did anybody mention summer humidity?—write home about the rawness of winter and the lack of central heating in the homes, and they and their American friends will probably talk about it as long as they live.

But here comes Brig.-Gen. James S. Simmons, director of the preventive medicine division of the United States Army, now in England, where he toured the American hospitals and camps, who says that the health record of the American troops is better there than in any other country overseas, and he attributes it to the British climate. The disease rate, he states, is the lowest in the history of any United States expeditionary force.

The truth is that the British climate is moderate and healthful. There are seldom extremes of heat or cold. Not often does the thermometer register above 75 in summer. Zero temperatures are unknown; even a few degrees of frost are comparatively rare, but the dampness of the atmosphere makes them feel colder than 20 or 30 degrees of frost here, especially to people from Canada or the United States. The lowest temperature recorded in the British Isles in 1941, according to Whitaker's Almanac for last year, was 10 degrees Farenheit, or 22 above zero, at Rhyader, Wales, in January.

Much rain, not heavy showers, but frequent drizzles, is the main cause of the dampness, and a contributing factor is probably the fact that Britain is an island and no part of the country is more than 80 miles from the sea. It is this proximity to the sea that makes the British climate so healthy. Where do doctors send convalescents? To the lakeside, or better still, to the seaside. All their lives, most Britishers breathe in ozone from the sea, for the larger part of the population lives in the great seaport cities, or only a few miles inland.

It is the sea air—damp if you must have it so—plus scientific feeding that has enabled the British to endure their wartime ordeals. And there is no better breed of fighting men than those who grow up in the British climate.

The Future of Eastern Ontario

(KINGSTON WHIG-STANDARD)

POSSIBILITIES of future industrial development in this section of the province have often formed the basis for speculation and discussion in this and other newspapers of the area. It is very heartening, therefore, to read in the speech prepared for delivery to the luncheon meeting of the Eastern Ontario Municipal Electrical Association by Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, chairman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, that Dr. Hogg sees a bright future for Eastern Ontario. He credited this part of Ontario with possessing an ideal foundation for industrial expansion, and pointed to the necessity of adequate low-cost power to facilitate this growth.

In so saying, Dr. Hogg touched upon a matter which has been in the past a controversial point in more than one discussion. There are two firmly held opinions, one group consistently claiming Eastern Ontario has been poorly treated by the diversion to Western Ontario of power produced within this area. Opposing this claim is an equally sincere group holding that Eastern Ontario has sufficient for its needs, and that markedly increased demand for power will find that power forthcoming. We are inclined to think that somewhere between the two schools the truth will be found; that a moderately increased supply would encourage enterprises which in their turn would add to demand, bringing in its wake the steady advancement of industrial progress in this section.

Dr. Hogg's prophecy, making recognition of the need for low-cost power, and coming as it does from a source so intimately and authoritatively concerned with hydro electric matters, contains a good measure of hope for the future. Almost certainly a day will come when part of the immense line loadings now fed to the heavily-industrialized centres devoted to war production will be released. When that time arrives, Eastern Ontario should, we think, have first call upon the power thus released, at least to an equitable sharing of that portion produced in this area. With that share of power, the full realization of the industrial foundation recognized by Dr. Hogg could be achieved. We sincerely hope we are not reading into his address a meaning not there, and that his reference to low-cost power indicates the intention of the Hydro Commission to make that commodity available to Eastern Ontario when normality returns.

Halting German Tanks

(CAPTAIN M. LILOIAN in U.S.S.R. Washington Embassy Bulletin)

A GERMAN tank attack was expected and a group of Soviet armoured vehicles prepared to meet it. The orders were: "Prevent deployment of the enemy tank column." Self-propelled guns, moving at 200 to 300 meters' distance from the tanks, were assigned to deal with the enemy bunkers, pillboxes and heavy tanks.

Soon the 60-ton German Tigers appeared and opened up at long range. Soviet tanks took advantage of the terrain and holding back their fire began to creep up. The self-propelled gun commanded by Lieutenant Tovlenko moved forward to engage the Tigers, which were firing vigourously. The first three shots of the self-propelled gun were ineffective, but the fourth hit the bull's eye. Encouraged by success, Lieutenant Tovlenko transferred his fire to the next enemy machine, which was smashed with the eighth round.

The heavy vehicles retreated, but the engagement between the medium and light tanks continued. The Germans were closely supported by artillery fire, and the self-propelled guns of Lieutenant Tovlenko and Lieutenant Tretyakov made for the enemy battery. They soon neutralized it and again turned their fire against the tanks.

A few days ago a self-propelled gun commanded by Senior Lieutenant Rtishchev of the Guards was the first to break into a village which had been turned into a strong point by the Germans. Rtishchev circled around the village and drove full speed at the German positions. Three machine-gun nests, two anti-tank guns and about 40 enemy soldiers were destroyed by fire or crushed under the gun treads. When several Germans leaped onto the guns, Rtishchev turned it to the right and left and drove in and out of shell-holes. The Nazis lost their grip and fell, several being crushed under the treads. Due to the effective action of Soviet self-propelled guns, the support point was captured.

Artillery men manning Soviet self-propelled guns have a high opinion of their weapons and consider them superior to the German Ferdinands.

PRINCE OF WALES SCHOOL

The graduating class of 1943 received their diplomas at the regular meeting of the Prince of Wales Home and School Monday evening.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, from the Board of Education, spoke convincingly to the students, stressing the necessity for young people having to accept responsibilities earlier because of the very difficult days ahead. "Keep your eyes open and watch your own deficiencies," she said. "Learning is not limited to a few subjects, and there are many opportunities for learning."

"Let your school and your parents be proud of you, not only with good marks but in everything you do. Keep faith with yourself. No one but you can give you an education."

The president, Mrs. G. Hutchinson opened the meeting and announced that the association is planning to hold a rummage sale in Knox Church Lecture Hall on Friday evening October 22.

Mr. Mattice, who acted as chairman, was in charge of the program which consisted of a piano solo by Gordon Parks, a very fine paper on "Youth and the World's Future" by Hugh McFadden, and a sextette, Louise Jarvis, Betty Jackson, Muriel Gash, Betty Starsmeare, Lillian Fitzgerald and Dorothy Johnston, who sang two numbers very beautifully.

Very fine Valedictory addresses were given by Joan Foster and Kenneth Heard.

At the close of the meeting Mr. N. McFadden thanked all those taking part in the program on behalf of the parents.

The graduating class then retired to their old classroom where social conveners Mrs. K. Shagdett and Mrs. G. White served refreshments and a very pleasant half hour was spent.

Events of a sudden and quite unpredictable or unprecedented nature may be anticipated on this day, which may be filled with breathtaking surprise, dramatic development and eventually some unforeseen benefits and enjoyments. There may be much to overcome before attaining ultimate satisfaction. Principle, integrity and fine ideals should open excellent opportunities for attaining worthy ambitions. Seek friendly advice.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may hope for a sudden and unlooked for spurt to the affairs, with prospect of dramatic and thrilling experiences or surprising adventures on the way to ultimate progress and personal achievement possibly with romance and renown thrown in for good measure. However, there may be treachery, schemes and illicit intrigues menacing the way, and calling for a determined adherence to high principle, integrity and good common sense, lest delusion and snares inveigle into dangerous and disintegrating alliances or sudden downfall. Seek proper associates, adhere to codes and thrillingly gratifying results may develop.

A child born on this day may have much creative ability, originality and inventive genius, with aspirations and fine ideals, but may be subject to erratic urges or swayed by illusion, suspicion and strange aberations.

PRINCE OF WALES TEAM LEADS PUBLIC SCHOOL SOCCER LEAGUE

People's Choice Beaten In Two Matches

Only Gentleman Jack Clayborne with considerable help from Referee Bert Maxwell, saved last night's Frank Tunney wrestling show at Brock Street Arena from being a complete triumph for skulduggery. The Ebony Flash was the only favorite to win, cleaning up Rowdy Dick Hogan in two straight falls. In the other two bouts the people's choice was given the works by the villain of the piece. Doc Felice toppling Joe Malch in the preliminary while Bunny Dunlop was too much for long Joe Christie in the semi-final affair.

Any resentment Clayborne may have been holding for Referee Maxwell's part in the Katan brawl must have been wiped out last night for the portly referee played a major role in the beating of Housepainter Hogan. In fact the official draws an assist on the second fall. In breaking up a mixup on the ropes Maxwell clapped a stranglehold on the back-alley battler from the coast and while he held Hogan in chancery Gentleman Jack launched a piledriver from the ropes that knocked both Maxwell and Hogan to the mat. The referee went spinning across the ring but got up in time to count out the helpless Housepainter after Clayborne had pounced on his prostrate rival and pinned his shoulders to the canvas.

Black Dynamite took the first fall after 16 minutes of battling, using Hogan's favorite tactics to win the argument. The Housepainter had been punishing the negro grappler for some time with a scissors hold, aggravated by punches to the stomach every time the referee was looking the other way, which was often. Finally Clayborne got an opportunity to apply the same hold on Hogan and then swung rights and lefts into Rowdy Dick's stomach until he had punched him into subjection, winding up by pinning him for the fall.

When the pair came back after the rest Clayborne delighted the crowd by sailing into Hogan with rabbit punches and elbow slams giving his opponent a rough ride for sometime. Hogan got even with couple of kicks that shook up the coloured flash, finally booting the Black Dynamite out of the ring.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

With a view to developing future hockey material Stratford is launching a juvenile league in the Classic City with seven teams already lining up, and in endorsing the plan Chick Appel, Stratford sports scribe, points to the splendid results that have been obtained from such minor loops in Kitchener. "You never heard of Kitchener importing many junior hockey players," says Chick, "and the number can be counted on the fingers of one hand" All of which brings us to the situation that unless something is done along similar lines in Peterborough this winter hockey is going to be as dead in this former hotbed of Canada's national winter pastime as baseball is right now. There will be no O.H.A. hockey and no covered ice available and that brings this city bang up against a real challenge. Are we going to curl up and die or is there going to be an effort to keep the game alive by promoting a juvenile loop to operate on open-air rinks? The youngsters are keen and ready to play; there should be plenty of older players to lend a hand by coaching the kids in the finer points of the game. All that is needed is sponsorship and leadership and right there is a fine opportunity for community service on the part of the Rotarians, Lions, Kiwanis, Kinsmen, Y's Men and other organizations.

* * * * * *

This column believes that hockey is too good a game to let die for lack of a sincere effort to save it. We have faith enough in the enterprise of this community to believe that in the post-war program one of the "Musts" on the list will be the erection of a modern ice arena. But there will be little profit in having hockey accommodation available if in the meantime we have let the game perish here. There is only one way to keep hockey alive and that is to encourage youngsters to make use of what ice cushions are available by making organized hockey possible. The formation of strong minor series, encouraged and supported by hockey lovers generally seems to offer the only solution. It could, of course, be supplemented by entering teams from the various loops in the Ontario minor series, using Lakefield or Omemee rinks as home ice. There must be some such program here or hockey can be written off as an extinct pastime so far as Peterborough is concerned.

Would Be A Natural

It is expected that Gentleman Jack Clayborne's victory in straight falls over Dick Hogan last night will give the Colored Comet another crack at Palermo John Katan. Clayborne is to appear before the Ontario Athletic Commission in Toronto today asking that body to order Katan to meet him here next Tuesday night and it is believed that his request will be successful. Katan is the only grappler who has beaten the Ebony Flash here and the windup of that bout aroused the ire of the fans who along with Clayborne believe that Referee Maxwell slipped badly in awarding the final fall to Katan. The decision caused a riot and Clayborne was appeased only by the intimation that he would be given a return bout the following week. However the Killer flatly refused to wrestle here again, declaring that Peterborough fans were prejudiced against him to such an extent that the referee was intimidated by the crowd. Katan has stuck to that decision, refusing all offers for another bout with Clayborne here. However, if the Ontario Commission orders the Palermo Panther to meet the Colored Comet in Peterborough Katan will have to fill the engagement or find himself barred from further wrestling in Ontario. The bout would be a natural. With feeling between the two men running so high and the fans all worked up about it the clash looms up as the battle of the season and local enthusiasts will hope that the Commission gives the affair the green light.

* * * * * *

Says the Lindsay Post: "Rumor has been going around town that Ed. Wildey's Young Rangers, are to make Lindsay their home town in all junior A games, for the coming winter. The Post's sports reporter in an interview with Mr. Don Osborne, manager of the local arena, learned that negotiations are to get underway as soon as possible and it is hoped that the Rangers will come. "I am not positive," said Mr. Osborne, "but I am certainly going to try to bring Junior A hockey to Lindsay." If he succeeds it is certainly going to bring back the old hockey tradition of Lindsay. This town at one time had one of the greatest names in hockey and baseball and it has been placed in mothballs for too long. It is about time that someone went ahead and tried to bring back the respected reputation and tradition of Lindsay as a sporting town. Time was when the old home town could play with the best of them and that included Toronto. That was quite a few years ago but it can happen again and with any luck at all it will. This to some people may sound like a sports editorial and maybe it is. However all this reporter can say is, "If Don Osborne can bring back big time amateur hockey to Lindsay, more power to him."

Borowy A Threat

The two big leagues, with the pennants decided, are just playing out the string now and while this is the period for trying out rookies, the appearance of new names in the lineups does not carry the customary thrill. The chances are that many of the youngsters who are having their brief hour of baseball glory now will be in the army before next spring. But there are some features of interest in the daily big league fare at that. Yesterday for instance Hank Borowy won his 15th victory for the Yanks, his eleventh triumph in his last 12 starts, as he held Cleveland to five hits while the Yanks were winning 5 to 2. St. Louis Cards fans have doubtless been watching Mister Borowy's performances with some anxiety for right now Borowy looks like a distinct world series menace. So too does the Yanks left-hander Marius Russo who has been going great guns. It may be that one or other of those two hurlers who were finding the going tough early this season will outshine Spud Chandler when Yanks and Cards tangle for Spurgeon, be it remembered, has yet to win his first world series game. Another feature of yesterday's card was the winning by Virgil Trucks of his 16th triumph as a Tiger pitcher this season. Boston were the victims and Trucks had help with homers from Wakefield and Richards in beating the Red Sox 6 to 3. And Shoun who has been used largely as a relief pitcher went the route for Cincinnati Reds yesterday in beating the Phillies 3 to 2. It was his 14th win as against only five defeats, a nice showing for a hurler who has not hit the head-lines very often.

Toronto Leafs find themselves tucked away behind the eight-ball today with Syracuse Chiefs leading the best-of-seven series three games to two. The sixth game will be staged in Toronto tonight and a loss for the Leafs means the end of the trail. The veteran Luke Hamlin did his best last night to put his club in front in the series. He allowed the Chiefs only three hits but two of them were triples by Toronto's own Goody Rosen and Catcher Dick West and in both cases a following batter managed to hammer a fly to the outfield to let the man on third score. The Cuban ace Tomas De La Cruz, helped mightily by four fast double-plays by the Chiefs' infield held the Leafs for five hits but when the ducks were on the pond the Toronto bats were very impotent. And now the Leafs have to win tonight or pack up the equipment. Nick Strincevich who blanked the Chiefs in the second game of the series will be the pitcher upon whom the Leafs will pin their hopes while the Chiefs will gamble with Jim Constanty, reserving Millard Howell who has already beaten Toronto twice in the series for the seventh game if there should happen to be one.

Cups Presented To Golfers At P'boro Club

The annual closing dinner of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club brought together nearly fifty members and their friends to join in the closing sweepstakes and sit down to an excellent dinner after which cups and prizes were presented for the various championships held throughout the past season.

H. T. Cranford presided and called upon Hugh Waddell of the Match and Handicap Committee for the name of the winner of each trophy. Mr. Waddell expressed thanks for the assistance he had received during the past season from the members of the Match and Handicap Committee, who, as most of the players knew, had experienced a difficult time trying to bring all tournanents to a conclusion before the annual closing dinner. A serious delay had occurred at the beginning of the season owing to wet weather. However all matches had been completed on time with the exception of the club championship, and arrangements had been made to play it at once.

Mr. Waddell then asked Mr. C. B. Westbrook to present the Stratton Trophy to this year's winner, Mr. Stan Northrop. In accepting the trophy Mr. Northrop remarked how much he had enjoyed playing in the tournaments this year, and considering that Stan is more or less a beginner at the game he did very well in getting down to the final round of three tournaments, winning the President's prize as well as the Stratton. Mr. J. G. Wharry presented the George A. MacDonald Trophy on behalf of Mr. Macdonald to this year's winner, Mr. Charlie B. Westbrook, who replied in his usual inimitable manner. J. H. Vernor was next called upon to present the Westclox Trophy, another annual tournament cup, to this year's victor, Hugh Waddell, who pointed out that he had spent 12 long seasons playing to win that trophy. Andy Rutter was then asked to announce the winners of the sweepstakes in which most golfers had participated.

The low gross in the sweepstakes for the day was posted by Bob Abbott whose 79 was good enough to earn him a Morroco leather wallet. In the second flight based on handicaps from ten to twenty Hugh Waddell scored a gross 83 to take first prize. Low gross in the third flight for handicaps of 21 or over was won by Mr. J. McKerchar of Lakefield.

Low net for the day was scored by Major Jack Green home on leave for a few days from Newfoundland. Although the ex-champion has not had very much opportunity to play during the past two or three years he managed to put together a very near 80 with a handicap of 10 strokes was good enough to win a very handsome prize. In the second flight Joe Watson managed an 83-13-70 and the low net in the third flight went to C. P. Brown with 93-22-71.

Wins Tombstone Trophy

The Tombstone trophy was carried away this year by the Rev. George Kelly of Lakefield with a 95 and 26 handicap netted a 69 the lowest of the day all flights included.

For using only 14 points during the first 9 holes C. B. Westbrook took home another prize.

During the past season a ball sweep has been held nearly every Saturday, weather permitting, and some die-hards try again and again without winning even a rebuilt duration ball. A novelty in Saturday's sweep was the presentation of three prizes to the golfers who had posted the highest scores of the day. J. H. Vernor headed the list with 120 followed by Joe Jebson with 109 and Jack Jobe with 104. The list of prizes by this time began to read like bingo night.

Following is a list of other scores handed in during the day.

Many Helped

H. T. Cranford as president thanked the members of the various committees for their assistance during the past season also the members who had found time from their own jobs to spend some time each week about the course helping to keep it in shape by pulling the weeds, cutting the greens or raking bunkers. T. A. MacKay and O. M. Steer were two members in particular who have spent a great deal of time this summer helping to keep the course in shape. As the dinner drew to a close many members felt it their duty to move a vote of thanks to all and sundry who had helped in any way to keep the club in such excellent shape considering the fact that help to do this type of work is so hard to secure.

4 Teams In Loop

OTTAWA —(CP)— Four teams R.C.A.F., Hull, Canadiens and Montagnards, have been signed to compete in the Ottawa Senior City League which will open the season Oct. 7. Last year there were six clubs in the loop.

King Edward Loses To Westenders 4-2

A big surprise took place in the Public School Soccer League scheduled game on Monday afternoon, when the Prince of Wales eleven defeated the King Edward boys 4-2 in a hard-fought tussle. D. Dyer being outstanding with his three goals. J. Storey, Prince of Wales, smallest player in the league, was conspicuous with his smart soccer tactics. Byers was the best man for the losers.

League Standing:

	P	W	L	F	A	Pts.
Prince of Wales	2	2	0	6	3	4
Queen Alexandra	1	1	0	2	1	2
King Edward	1	0	1	2	4	0
Queen Mary	1	0	1	1	2	0

Two points for a win and one for a draw.

All the teams swing into action this week with Central playing two games.

Goal scorers: Dyer, Prince of Wales, 4; G. Foster, Prince of Wales, 2; G. Simonds, Queen Alexandra, 2; J. Byers, King Edward, 1; G. Bradley, Queen Mary, 1; J. Miller, King George, 1; W. Dolan, King Edward, 1. Twelve goals.

First Half

Lawson King Edward, set the ball arolling and Dyer punted right into Prince of Wales goal where Kay, in goal, transferred the play to midfield. Miller carried the sphere up the centre to find Byers, time and again endeavoring to get his teammates settled against the fast moving Prince of Wales forwards. J. Storey, left winger for the Westenders was very conspicuous with his initiative style while in possession of the ball; also his dribbling baffling the opponents time and again as he kept crossing the ball in front of goal. Exchanges continued even for a while until Foster, Prince of Wales, accepted a nice pass on the wing from Dyer. He rattled a fast drive into goal. King Edward defence split wide open as Dyer harrassed them to permit J. Storey to slip the ball back to his centre-man who opened the scoring. King Edward went right back through clever combination set up by Lawson. But Miller, Prince of Wales, battled hard to hold the South-end boys in check. Dolan and Lawson worked past the full backs nicely to witness Kay, in goal, pick up a smart effort slated for the corner of the upright. They kept up the pressure until half-time. Prince of Wales 1, King Edward 0.

Second Half

In resuming, King Edward re-arranged their team but it failed to provide the much needed stability on the attack while their half-back division held the Prince of Wales front rank in check. After five minutes of play, Miller relieved the pressure on his goal to send Foster away on the right wing. King Edward halves tried hard to intercept his progress as he left Dyer in possession right in front of goal. The full backs pounced upon him but too late as the lifted the ball right in below the cross-bar. At the other end, Byers converted from the penalty spot. Then Dyer went right back on an individual effort for third counter. Two minutes to go, Foster beat three men in a row to register the fourth tally. King Edward reduced the count through Dolan as the whistle sounded. Prince of Wales 4, King Edward 2.

Goal scorers—Prince of Wales: Dyer (3), Foster. King Edward: Byers, Dolan.

King Edward: D. Downer, goal; A. Riches and A. Crocker, full backs; R. Clarke, J. Byers and J. Murray, half-backs; M Lane, L. Eakins, K. Lawson, W. Dolan and H. Dobben, forwards; subs, J. Robertson and M. Chambers.

Prince of Wales: T. Kay, goal; S. Brown and N. Nisbett, full backs; N. Cullen, D. Miller and R. Kidd, halves; G. Foster, B. Storey, D. Dyer, G. Kimberley, J. Storey, forwards; subs, D. Burrows, F. McMullen.

NEW YORK, Sept 28—(AP).—Stanley Stevens, New York representative of the British Broadcasting Corporation, reports that there's unprecedented interest in the World Series in Britain since Britons have begun to learn what baseball is all about by watching American soldiers play in their parks....The mutuel handle at the recent 32-day harness racing meeting at Empire City was $2,767,610—a little more than the running tracks get on a big day.

Snappy job:

When the Fort Benning infantrymen reached Jacksonville, Fla., to play the Naval Air Technical Centre football team last Saturday they found the regular gridiron was too soggy for a good game....The Soldiers suggested that results might be better if the action could be shifted to a dry field....Always obliging, the Air Raiders' Athletic oficers summoned 2,000 Marines and put them to work moving the bleachers, goal posts, markers, etc. ....The job was finished in 22 minutes flat.

You pick 'em:

(Looking at strike three — the third set of World Series flingers).

Hank Borowy, Yankees — Whether Hank will pitch the third game is known only to Manager Joe McCarthy and maybe he won't know until after the first two games....The "Bloomfield Bloomer" of 1942 has had whatever benefit comes from getting his ears pinned back in his first World Series start....His late season performances have earned him another chance. He has a 14-9 record so far, winning his last seven in a row.

Harry Brecheen, Cardinals — A southpaw from Broken Bow, Okla., he led the American Association pitchers last year in almost any department you could name and has done all right for the Cards as a rookie with nine victories and five losses......Nicknamed "The Cat" for his spryness in fielding.

SYRACUSE BEATS TORONTO 2 TO 0 TO TAKE GAME LEAD IN FINALS

4 Double Plays By Chiefs Feature Game

TORONTO, Sept. 28—(CP)—Syracuse Chiefs and Toronto Maple Leafs arrive back in Toronto to-day for the sixth game of the International League Governor's Cup series, following the 2-0 victory for the Chiefs in Syracuse last night.

Nick Strincevich will be sent to the mound in to-night's game by Toronto Manager Burleigh Grimes, in an attempt to even the best-of-seven series. The Chiefs have won three games and the Leafs two.

Opposing Stricevich on the mound will be either Arnold (Lefty) Carter or Jim Konstanty.

Luke Hamlin, who had shut out Syracuse five times in a row to set an all-time league record during the regular season, allowed only three hits in the seven innings he worked in Syracuse last night, but two of them were triples, both being converted into runs. Harry Shuman finished the game for Toronto after Hamlin was relieved by a pinch hitter.

Tom De La Cruz won the game before 9,239 fans.

Sparkling work afield aided the Chiefs to go one up on the 1943 pennant winners. Four Syracuse double plays helped kill off all Toronto threats. Not a Maple Leaf player reached third base, only two got as far as second.

Shortstop Damon Phillips was a thorn in the side of the Leafs throughout the game. He handled 16 chances without an error, and made an unassisted double play.

Tom De La Cruz, beaten once in the series, made up for it last night. He struck out three Toronto batters and walked only three, allowing five hits.

TORONTO, Sept. 28 — (CP). — It's a lie. There is no truth in the rumor National Hockey League talent scouts are offering teething rings and teddy bears as bonuses when rookies sign contracts....But even so the number of mature men available as players is even less than some anticipated. Elmer Ferguson of the Montreal Herald estimates about 75 per cent of N.H.L. players this winter will be newcomers....Fergie anticipates none of the 1942-43 goalies will be back. Canadiens' goalie, Paul Bibeault, is doubtful. Canadiens suffered a blow when Tommy Gorman received a letter from Joe Benoit saying the great right-winger will remain on his war job in Trail, B.C., this year. The Montrealers have lost Jack Portland, Charlie Phillips, Marcel Dheere, and Gordon Drillon to the Services, and Ray Getliffe and Charlie Sands have announced intentions to retire. Sands may take a coaching job in Santiago, California....Dink Carroll of the Montreal Gazette says the Habitants may fill gaps by calling up an entire forward line from last season's Canadien Juniors — Andy Perron, Tod Compeau, and Bernie Lauzon.

It ain't fair:

While plenty of Canadian cities have good rinks but no hockey team, Peterborough has a good team and no rink. Last winter the Petes played their home games in Lindsay, 25 miles west, but officials and players don't favor the same arrangement this year. The Petes had 26 trips out of town last winter and were worn to a frazzle at the season's end. So were the fans who tried to keep up with them. Travel restrictions will keep the fans even closer to home this year. Ironically, the Petes have practically their complete team from last season.

Incidentally:

Ed Armstrong of the Winnipeg Free Press reports Herb Peschel, former Winnipeg Blue Bombers football lineman, has recovered after five months in hospital with a broken neck suffered in a ski accident. Peschel is a lieutenant in the United States Army, stationed at Camp Dodge, Iowa......Bus Haugh, whose softball strolls have taken him to Toronto, Regina, Calgary and Vancouver, says no pitcher ever lost a tougher game than Haugh did in Toronto in 1925. With two down in the ninth and the teams scoreless, Haugh shot across a third strike. The catcher missed the ball, injured a finger, overthrew first and the ball rolled all the way to the outfield while the batter rounded the bags for the game's only score.

Interest Wanes As Fans Await World Series

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Major league baseball, fagged from a long, rough run, is wobbling toward the finish line and will just about make it before wilting completely.

The season this year, extending a week later than in the past because spring training was done in the north, has reached an anti-climax. With both pennants decided the fans apparently are thinking about the world series, the players about their draft status and the managers about teams made up of 17-year-olds for next year.

The War Manpower Commission's ruling yesterday that baseball is not essential scarcely was a surprise. It had been said before in various various versions, but this latest pronouncement on the specific case of Al Zarilla of St. Louis Browns, a father before the United States entered the war, who had been classified 1A by his draft board, pointed up the problem anew.

Try New Recruits.

Baseball's present player supply would dissolve soon, even if the season didn't. To meet this situation the managers of almost all clubs except New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals, who are tuning up for the world series next week, have turned the last week of the season into a wholesale tryout camp for new recruits.

Everybody expects baseball to continue next year, but the fans don't seem to care whether it continues this week or not.

At Cincinnati, where the Reds are striving to sew up second place in the National League, 767 customers paid to see Clyde Shoun pitch a five-hit 3-2 victory over the Phillies yesterday.

At Boston 714 fans, the smallest turnout since Tom Yawkey bought the club 11 years ago, was as hand as Detroit Tigers routed the Red Sox 6-3 with a 14-hit attack.

St. Louis Wins

Only 906 were present at St. Louis to see Lefty Ernie White test his lame pitching arm against Boston Braves. He gave up 10 hits while winning 6-3.

The Yankees beat Cleveland Indians 5-2 with Nick Etten deciding a hurling duel between Hank Borowy and Allie Reynolds. The Yanks made six hits of which Etten accounted for a single, a double with the bases loaded and a home run.

Chicago White Sox were outhit in both games of a twilight-night doubleheader but whipped Washington Senators twice by identical scores of 2-1 with Ralph Hodgin driving in the winning run in each case

Philadelphia Athletics lost their 100th game of the year while dividing a doubleheader with St. Louis Browns, winning the first game 9-4 and then dropping the second 7-6.

Ace Adams broke the 1908 record of Ed Walsh by appearing in his 67th game of the season for New York Giants, but Chicago Cubs won 10-9.

Here and There in Sport

By The Canadian Press

By The Canadian Press.

Florida wants the baseball clubs back. And it's not for the advertising that attracts tourists, according to Al Lang, former Mayor of St. Petersburg and self-appointed ambassador for the orange peninsula who prevailed upon the major clubs to set up early-spring training quarters amid the groves.

The reason this time, Lang swears, is that many thousands of young soldiers, who have replaced the winter visitors, are pining for the sight of big leaguers. In fact, he declared last night during a missionary check-up in New York City, the boys in the armed forces had been tickled when they were sent to Florida because of the expectation that they would see the diamond squads in training. But now they just sit on the park benches with nothing to do—although the hospitable Florida people "have done everything we can to entertain them."

In California, they have lots of movie stars to make the soldiers happy, he explained, "but in Florida we haven't any movie stars." The thing to do "is to get the baseball clubs back." Lang is calling on all the big league moguls to tell his story.

Signs 7 Juniors.

Seven of the players who have signed contracts to play Junior O.H.A. hockey for Galt this season are from Northern Ontario, two are from Montreal, four from Toronto, one from Saskatoon and four from other parts of Ontario. Four Galt boys are to be given trials. The candidates met each other at a dinner in Galt yesterday.

The Nova Scotia senior baseball issue was settled yesterday at Halifax when Royal Canadian Navy won the Provincial championship four games to two from Springhill Fence Busters. The tars captured the sixth and deciding game 5-4.

A pro wrestling exhibition at Ottawa Saturday night had a sequel in court yesterday when Leonard J. Robichard, 33, of Ottawa, was fined $25 and costs on a disorderly conduct charge. It was alleged he threw a bottle in the general direction of the ring and the missive bounced off a lady's head.

The Toronto N.H.L. Leafs have instructed Gus Bodnar of Fort William to report to Coach Happy Day October 3 to try for a place on the team. Bodnar starred as centre for the Hurricane-Rangers in the Thunder Bay Junior Hockey League last winter.

Pitcher Dies.

The death occurred yesterday at Dover, N.J., of Police Judge Thomas Harris, former baseball pitcher and father of Stanley R. (Bucky) Harris, manager of the Philadelphia Phillies until recently. In his youth he was a clubmate of the late Christy Mathewson.

General Manager Bill Dewitt of the St. Louis Browns yesterday announced the purchase of Infielder Jimmy Pofahl, on option to Minneapolis from Washington Senators, and Outfielder Harold Epps from Toledo. Epps reported from the farm club at once.

Rockingham Park, oldest and smallest of New England's tracks, opened yesterday for 54 days of racing and crowd of 80,000 wagered a total of $337,101, an opening-day record. The three-year-old Flange captured the featured $4,000 Pelham claiming event, paying $12.40.

Seals Come Through.

San Francisco Seals edged out a 5-4 victory over Seattle yesterday to capture the play-off title of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, the series running to six games of which the Seals took four. The losers staged a three-run rally in the ninth inning of the concluding battle but were stopped a run short of the tieing tally.

The New York Yankees yesterday voted $500 shares of their World Series money to former players now with the armed forces, including Joe DiMaggio, Charlie Ruffing, Phil Rizzuto, Buddy Hassett, Tom Henrich, Charlie Selkirk and Norman Branch. Thirty-two active players will get full awards.

Bracken Says Whitton Report Made Available

OTTAWA, Sept. 28 (CP) —John Bracken, leader of the Progressive Conservative party, announced last night that a report on the Marsh and Beveridge reports, prepared on his instructions by Dr. Charlottte Whitton, will be released for publication under the title, 'The Dawn of Ampler Life."

In a statement, Mr. Bracken said: "When the Marsh report on social security and the Heagerty report of health insurance followed so closely upon the Beveridge report, it seemed to some of us that because of the substantial changes involved in some of our social institutions and constitutional relationships, we should be sure that the proposals were found as a basis for Canadian policy before becoming a party to committing the nation to their adoption in all their details.

"Because of her broad practical knowledge of the atcual working out of comparable schemes on this continent, in the United Kingdom and some European countries, Dr. Charlotte Whitton was commissioned to undertake a comparative analysis of these reports.

"In the thought that the observations and proposals made by Dr. Whitton will offer helpful suggestions to all interested Canadians, the report is being made available to the general public."

BLENDED AND PACKED IN CANADA

Sabotage?

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 28 — (AP).—The best available sources of information provided no confirmation today for reports that rebellious German crews sabotaged three capital ships of the Nazi fleet off northern Norway after they received news of the Italian fleet's surrender. The reports, mentioning by name the ships Tirpitz, Scharnhorst and Luetzow, were published in Britain today under a Stockholm dateline.

Britain Clamps Down On Argentina

By CHARLES H. GUPTILL
Associated Press Staff Writer.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 28 (AP). —A British Foreign Office statement expressing strong disapproval of Argentina's neutrality policy struck a sharp blow today at Axis propogandists here.

Nazi sympathizers long have conducted a whispering campaign that Britain regarded Argentina's failure to break relations with the Axis with complacency if not approval.

The statement from London, however, left no doubt about Britain's true position.

"His Majesty's Government...hope that in the international sphere the Argentine Government will at an early date range herself wholeheartedly on the side of the freedom-loving nations," said the statement, the text of which was published here.

The note pointed out Britain wished to continue her friendship and commerce with Argentine, but added that British leaders never understood why Argentina, alone of the western republics, failed to follow the recommendations of the Rio de Janeiro conference of American Foreign Ministers regarding the severance of relations with Axis powers.

Thus, the British Government followed the United States State Department in openly criticizing Argentine foreign policy. State Secretary Cordell Hull's recent letter led to a government crisis and resignation of Foreign Minister Segundi Storni.

The London note was made public in conjunction with an announcement by the British Food Ministry of an agreement to purchase Argentina's exportable surplus eggs for the 1943-44 and 1944-45 seasons. A meat purchase agreement was concluded earlier in the year.

Plan To Build Orillia Highway

TORONTO, Sept. 28 (CP). Highways Minister Doucett said today that while on an extended inspection trip of highways between here and Kenora he had been prevented by a guard from inspecting the new home of the Dionne quintuplets at Callander.

Mr. Doucett's department is doing some supervisory work on the residence.

"There probably was a slipup," the highways minister commented.

Concerning the various highways he inspected, Mr. Doucett intimated the main highways between Toronto and Barrie, 50 miles north of Toronto, probably would be rerouted and rebuilt after the war. He also said plans for a route around the south end of Lake Simcoe, via Beaverton, to link Toronto directly with Orillia, 25 miles north of Barrie, would be included in any plan.

MATERNITY CASES

In Emergency Health Maternity Hostels built during this war in Britain more than 77,466 children were born up to December 31, 1942.

Fred Comerford Observes 80th Birthday

A resident of Madoc celebrated the 80th aniversary of his birth on Monday after a long and interesting career. Born during the American War in a log house roofed with split hollow logs, chinked with moss and plaster, on Lot 17, Concession 5, in Madoc Township, Hastings County, Fred A. Comerford attended S.S. No. 7, Eldorado, for six years, then worked on his father's farm until the age of 20.

"I learned telegraphy and station work," said Mr. Comerford, reminiscing back to the year 1883. at which time he started this type of work. "I sat in a station agent's chair on the Schrieber and North Bay divisions of the C.P.R. for ten years." This makes this old-time resident of the district one of the few remaining oldest railroad employees, and many of his memories of the days when the railroad was still making its hazardous way through and over the great Western Prairie would read like a book.

Not Finished.

At the time Mr. Comerford joined the staff of the C.P.R., two years were to pass before the last spike of the railway, linking east and west, was driven by the Hon. Donald Smith, later Lord Strathcona, at Craigellachie, on the Eagle Pass in the Gold Range. On June 28 of the following year, the first transcontinental train over the Canadian Pacific Railway left Montreal for the Pacific Coast, passing through the place where Mr. Comerford was working as telegrapher.

"When my father, Thomas Comerford died, I came home at the request of my mother to run the farm, being the eldest of eleven children, one girl and ten boys," Mr. Comerford said. "Shortly after residing on the farm I was elected councillor of Madoc Township council, were I served for four years. Later I was appointed secretary-treasurre of the Patrons of Industry for North Hastings which I served during its existence. I then became secretary-treasurer of the Farmers' Institute and conveyed the Government delegates each year for fifteen years, to a series of about twenty meetings over the county.

Crop Judge.

"J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of the Agricultural Association employed me as field crop judge, where I judged in most of the counties from Glengarry to Hamilton. I also judged stock, farm and garden products at many of the local fairs in Hastings County," Mr. Comerford remarked.

"I acted as drover in conjunction with Herbert Hoover of Rawdon Townsip until his death," he continued, his memory encompassing the years with a clearness enviable to most men of fewer years. "I have acted as secretary-treasurer for over forty years in our local School Section No. 7, Madoc Township, and for twenty-five years was school attendance officer for the sixteen schools in the Township of Madoc."

we have a long way to go before this war is won." Patterson added:

"They pointed out that we are far from the heart of Germany or the heart of Japan and that both Axis nations have bigger armies to-day than they had at the start of the war. There is no reason to believe that either is in imminent danger of collapse because of slack morale or economic stringency. On the contrary, there is every reason to believe taht exactly the opposite is true.

No Time to Relax.

'To be sure of victory we must throw everything we have into this fight and we must not relax our efforts until the last enemy has thrown down his arms."

From the reports of intelligence officers, Strong sized up German and Japanese strength this way:

The Luftwaffe is bigger than it was at the outset of the war, despite recent heavy losses; the Nazis now have 300 army divisions, including 60 reorganized or established this year; and the labor force in war industries in Nazi-conquered territory has grown from 23,000,000 to 35,000,000.

The Japanese Air Force is getting larger and better, and the Nipponese have a reservoir of about 4,000,000 men who can be called up when needed.

Italian Admiral At Malta

A guard of honor of British sailors stands smartly at attention at Malta as Admiral Di Zara, acting commander-in-chief of the Italian fleet, passes through their ranks and salutes them. The Italian admiral inspected the British fighting men during a visit to Malta on September 11, after the Italian fleet had surrendered.

Pull Down Production Costs Post-War Farm Objective

Pulling down the cost of production was recommended as the chief foundation for sound post-war agriculture in an address before the Peterborough Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon at the Empress Hotel Monday by Roy Blair, sales manager and vice-president of Ralston-Farina, Limited.

Agricultural prosperity Mr. Blair stated, depended upon the spread between the selling price and the cost of production. Nothing could be done to control the former which depended entirely upon supply and demand. Not even governments could accomplish much in that direction. Subsidies and bonuses, perhaps justifned in wartitme, did not control the real price for those subsidies had to be paid by the farmers either directly through taxes or indirectly through increased costs of the goods and services he had to buy.

The solution of the problem, the speaker maintained. was to increase the spread by lowering production costs and he submitted a program of six fundamentals that he said would result in decreased costs.

The first was better soil fertility. for soil was the source from which all production came. The second was the use of better seeds, the third better livestock and poultry, the fourth, better feeding, the fifth greater specialization for individual farmers and the sixth better and more flexible farm management. Mr. Blair gave the results of experiments that showed how production had been increased and farm costs lowered by paying attention to these six fundamentals.

Mr. Blair prefaced his enumeration of his program by stressing the importance of agriculture, stressing the fact that Canada was basically an agricultural country and that Peterborough although a manufacturing centre was also an agricultural centre and the prosperity of all depended upon the prosperity of the farmer. He would single out Rotarian F. C. Paterson as a most important member of the club because he represented agriculture.

In regard to his program he said that agriculture would need help and co-operation in carrying it out. "We cannot expect the farmers to do it all themselves," he said, urging Rotarians to give the farming community leadership and inspiration and stressing the fact that more prosperous agriculture would mean a better community. better schools, better churches and a more abundant, richer life.

The speaker was introduced by James Wharry and the vote of thanks was moved by Rotarian Gordon S. Matthews.

turing individual German groupings on the left bank," the communique declared.

Nearly 7,000 Nazi troops were reported killed on all sectors of the front, 2,000 falling in fierce fighting on the approaches to Mogilev, north of Gomel. Entire battalions were said to have been slain in bitter fighting around the Kremenchug bridgehead, where air battles enlivened the struggle.

Cross Near Kiev.

Moscow said that German troops, reeling under the impact of the Soviet steamroller tactics, were surrendering by the hundreds. The Red Air Force, blasting concentrations of enemy forces at the river crossings, also ranged far ahead to blow up enemy troop trains and rail junctions west of the river.

The battle for Kiev, the great central bastion high on the west bank of the Dnieper, was developing, and a Berlin broadcast said that Soviet troops, striking by night, had crossed the river 50 miles to the north and were battling the Germans on the west bank. There were indications the Germans were evacuating some personnel at Kiev.

On the Gomel-Vitebsk sector, Red Army spearheads captured Terekhovka, 22 miles southwest of Gomel, southern junction of the Mogilev-Orsha-Vitebsk railway, and were advancing despite stiff resistance, Russian front dispatches indicated.

Five railway lines radiate from Gomel, one linking westward with Warsaw, another with Leningrad. Its capture by the Russians would imperil the whole German defence system in White Russia as far north as the Baltic States. Yesterday, the Russians said, they overran 870 villages in a nine-mile advance beyond Smolensk, posing a direct threat to Vitebsk.

Engineers Hack Road Through Jungle

ON THE INDIA-BURMA FRONTIER, Sept. 25 — (Delayed) — (AP) — Despite hills and high water, American Army Engineers—assisted by Indians and Chinese—have hacked a roadway through the jungle from India into Burma along which, if God and the strategists are willing, an attack upon the aJpanese may be launched.

Headquarters calls the highway the Ledo Road, but Engineers on the job call it the "Tokyo Road" because, said Major John Moyer of Tuskegee, Alabama, "the stuff transported over it eventually will wind up in Japan"—now some 3,000 miles away.

The road has penetrated into enemy territory and Chinese soldiers, led and trained by American officers, are fighting the Japanese back further and further as construction progresses.

ON MEDITERRANEAN SHORE.

Venice, Italy, is farther north than Vladivostock, Siberia.

Nazis Describe Retreats As Victories

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 — (CP). —Not only have the Nazis developed into a fine art the military manoeuvre of advancing to the rear—they have built up a veritable arsenal of circumlocutions with which they explain to the world this process of going forward backwards.

The United States Office of Wartime Information dipped into this arsenal and dredged up for the public some of the twists and alibis used in German High Command communiques since the first of this year to cover admissions of Nazi retreats from specified military localities.

The list reflected the development of a German lexicon of retreat which has tried to make a virtue of military necessity, dismiss the importance of lost territory and twist defeat into a propaganda pattern seeking to give the impression of "planned withdrawal" and "qualitative superiority" over Allied "quantitatively superior" troops.

German retreat propaganda, as contained in official communiques, now includes such cliches as "defensive success," "successful disengagement," "elastic defence," "mobile defence," "fliud defence" "motrocessive manoeuvre," "according to plan," "shortening of the front" and (this is a honey) "withdrawal to the enemy's surprise."

However, all those failed the other day when describing the situation in the Bryansk sector of the Russian front, so D.N.B., the German News Agency, broadcast the report that the "bulk of the German troops reached a new line without fighting."

Nazi Morale Still Topnotch

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 21—(Delayed)—(CP)—Just back from Sicily on his way to England, Capt. Alan Chambers of Saanich, B.C., exploded an increasingly-popular belief that morale of German troops is slipping because of reverses they have suffered.

Liberal member of parliament for Nanaimo and a veteran of three years' active service—two of them overseas, the bronzed Canadian Scottish officer is in a position to know about German morale.

"In spite of the general retreat the morale of the Germans remained good," he said. "In my opinion there was no evidence of a lowering of morale. Some, of course, had better morale than others, depending on age and length of service. German officers and N.C.O.'s are still dandy, still good."

Capt. Allan Johnston, Liberal M.P. for London, Ont., and former mayor of the city, arrived just as Capt. Chambers was leaving.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Tucker visited relatives in Peterborough on Sunday.

Week-end visitors here were W. Reynolds of North Bay at his home; Edwin Smith of Peterborough visited his parents; Mrs. Dafoe, Oshawa, is with relatives; T. Reynolds of Clanricarde was with Mr. and Mrs. H. Edwards.

Mrs. W. Earnshaw is a patient in the Red Cross Hospital here.

Windsor Group Protests 5-Day Week

WINDSOR, Sept. 28 —(CP). — Windsor Labor Council has made plans for a parade next Saturday to protest the five-day week which, labor leaders said, has been inaugurated in many war plants here. The plants affected formerly operated on a six-day work week basis.

The Labor Council last night approved action taken by a planning committee of the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.) which tentatively had planned a mass demonstration. The parade will finish in City Hall Park where speakers will discuss the curtailment in working hours.

The meeting also sent a written protest to Munitions Minister Howe.

"Windsor Labor Council strenuously protests the curtailment of war production at the time," the protest read. "We demand to know the reason as the war is still in a critical stage."

Thomas Maclean, assistant regional director of the U.A.W.A., said today Ford workers have been on short time for some weeks.

Meanwhile, the Windsor Branch of the priorities division of the Federal Department of Munitions and Supply said that supply of vital materials constitutes a national problem and does not affect Windsor alone.

IF YOUR CHILD IS THIN and NERVOUS

Try New, Improved Ovaltine

Children who are thin, nervous and under par, science has discovered, are often found to be eating foods which do not give them enough of the essential food elements everyone needs for health.

As a "protecting" food-drink, New, Improved Ovaltine adds to a child's meals the essential food elements most likely to be deficient in his diet.

Three servings of New, Improved Ovaltine furnish a child with a significant portion of his daily requirement of Vitamins A, B_1, and D, and the minerals Calcium, Phosphorus and Iron—also quick food-energy elements and high quality proteins — all for building sturdy bodies.

So—if your child is thin, nervous, under par, or eats poorly, why not start giving him New, Improved Ovaltine regularly? Get Ovaltine at your drug or food store.

THE CHARTERED BANKS of Canada keep abreast of the Dominion's expanding needs.

Six times since 1870 the Bank Act under which the Chartered Banks operate has been revised by parliament—six times in that period the activities of the banks have been carefully scrutinized by the people's representatives.

Every ten years the Bank Act has been thus revised. Each one of the six decennial revisions has contributed much to the evolution of the banking system to meet the expanding needs of a developing Dominion.

In 1934 the sixth revision of the Bank Act was made. Fifty members of the House of Commons made up the committee, which examined witnesses—among them bank officers, government officials and reformers — and studied exhibits filed by various individuals and organizations. Findings were submitted to the House, and later that year the Bank Act was revised in many important particulars.

Through democratic enquiry and decision, the Canadian banking system has grown and been adjusted to meet the needs of the people, providing a depository for savings and a sound basis for Canada's free economic development.

We MUST save Coal

Canada's coal industry under very considerable wartime difficulties is doing a wonderful job. Nonetheless the huge increase in the use of coal due to the war makes it necessary for us, on the home front, to cut down consumption 20%. If we all follow the Government's suggestions, that will not be difficult, nor will it involve any real hardship.

British Women Are Playing Leading Part In War Effort

By JAMES A. ROY

(This is the fifth in the series of articles, being written for The Examiner, by Prof. James A. Roy, of Queen's University, Kingston, on wartime conditions in Great Britain.)

Britain is the only country in the world that conscripts women for its uniformed services. Some British factories making big guns are staffed over 70 per cent by women. A large proportion of these women had never been in a factory two years ago. Now they are working 56 hours a week at the machines. One works' manager, who had travelled widely in Russia studying conditions in factories there, told me: "Our women have nothing to learn from the Russian women. It's quite the other way about. What these women here can't do just isn't worth doing."

British railways now employ 85,000 women on work formerly done by men. One British shipyard is manned entirely by women.

This mobilization of man power has meant many sacrifices and changes in home life. By the end of 1941 approximately 5,000,000 civilian adults—quite apart from the millions in the armed forces—were living in districts other than those in which they were resident in 1939. I have already spoken of the transference of Scottish women workers to England. Up to the end of June, 1942, there had been nearly 20 million removals of workers of both sexes between different local administrative areas in Britain.

I have already spoken about Scottish agriculture. Here are a few facts about English agriculture which supplement what I have already written.

English farmers, like the Scottish agriculturalists, are doing a vital war job in cutting down the import of food and relieving the strain on shipping to the utmost by bringing back land to cultivation and improving the fertility and output of the land by the best possible methods of draining and mechanized farming.

The ploughing-up campaign in 1942 brought six million more acres under the plough than before the war. As a result of this work of Scottish and English and Welsh farmers Britain is now 70 per cent self-sufficent in food. Before the war she was only 40 per cent self-sufficent. This is an achievement unsurpassed in agriculture.

There are now nearly two million allotments in the country, practically double the pre-war figure. The famous Meadows in Edinburgh, for example, once the cricket ground for many cricket elevens, has been largely turned into allotments. The lovely old green of the house in Hampstead where I am stopping, has vanished and in its place are cabbage patches. The same with much of Hyde Park. There are now waiting lists for allotments—the queue habit again! Millions of private garden owners contribute to the war effort producing millions of pounds worth of vegetables, thus releasing land for crops which private individuals cannot grow. One interesting fact is that Britain now grows her own domestic sugar ration.

England and Scotland are today the most highly mechanized farming countries in the world and in the autumn of 1942 Britain was already able to maintain a 24-hour a day effort, thanks to the introduction of night ploughing. The ploughmen toiled day and night, the unskilled workers being trained for daytime ploughing, and the skilled ones working through the night.

I was able to travel down to London the other night in the greatest comfort. But that was because I had priority and arrangements had been made for me. But for the average person travelling by rail either by night or day is no picnic. The trains are incredibly crowded, and travel by rail is considerably more expensive and more restricted than in normal times. But the British railways have done a magnificent job since the war started and have worked under great difficulties. Blackout has reduced rail capacity by 25 to 30 per cent; 100,000 railwaymen have been called up. Fifty passenger trains have been lost in air raids. Now there are no excursions. Instead there are 1,000 extra trains every day to carry workers to and from war factories. The reduced number of trains carry now on the average twice as many passengers per journey as before the war. Amenities of travel have gone. War transport has everywhere priority. Rail and road transport have been co-ordinated. Chocolates, cigarettes, fish groceries and provisions of all kinds which used to travel across the country do so no longer. Rail delivery has been rationalized and canals have been brought under Government control. Boats and barges help to reduce pressure on the railways. The coordination of industry is one of the most remarkable things about the British war effort.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

After the evidence of one Crown witness had been heard Earl Barrie was committed for trial by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning on a charge of indecently assaulting a 12 year old boy. Barrie, who was defended by John A. Bradshaw, pleaded not guilty and elected trial by a higher court.

ON JUDGING TRIP.

Senator J. J. Duffus left Ottawa this morning for a series of plowing engagements in Northern Ontario, beginning in the district around Sault Ste. Marie and continuing easterly through the Sudbury area, following a schedule that will keep him away from Peterborough for the next three weeks. It is understood that he accepted this work at the request of John A. Carrol, secretary of the Provincial Plowmen's Association.

MUST HAVE NAMES

By October 1st the committee of the Peterborough Women's Active Army Auxiliary and the I.O.D.E. Chapters must have the names and most recent addresses of all members of the army serving outside Canada if they are to receive a Christmas box from their home town. This will be impossible without the cooperation of the soldiers' relatives. Please phone the required information at once to 3455 or 4365 or 4416.

MILKWEED PICKERS

With J. A. Magee, principal, several of the children of Hanover Public School picked nearly 500 pounds of milkweed leaves one afternoon last week. It has been suggested that between now and Thanksgiving Day or later Peterborough county school children and Boy Scouts and Cubs from the city might help in this effort to obtain material to be used in making synthetic rubber. It is understood the government pays the children three cents a pound for the leaves, although the price for this weed is not entirely mentioned against the country's need until the Japs are ousted from the East Indian rubber plantations.

Honor For Peterboro

That for the first time in the history of the organziation two of the highest offices of the Canadian Feed Manufacturers' Association were held by residents of the same city was the information given by Roy Blair, past president of C.F.M.A., in addressing the Rotary Club Monday. James Wharry, vice-president of the Quaker Oats Company is dominion president of the Association and Robert M. Peirson, manager of the United Farmers' Co-Op is president of the Ontario section, Mr. Blair stated. Thus Peterborough had a distinction never before held by any Canadian city, not even Toronto. It was the first time that the holders of those two important posts lived in the one community.

DOCTORS ON CALL

Drunken Driver Gets 7 Days

Pleading guilty to a charge of having been drunk in charge of an automobile on Hunter Street last night, William Davis, Nassau, was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court today to seven days in the county jail.

Davis had been arrested on Hunter Street last night by Constable Andre Dalton, who noticed the man's condition as he tried to make a turn after cranking his car.

There was no order for the impoundment of automobile because although Davis declared that it was his property, the license had not been transferred from the former owner.

Davis asked for an adjournment at first, saying that he had a horse to look after, but when Crown Attorney McElderry stated that he wanted the accused remanded in custody, Davis decided to enter a plea of guilty.

Suburban People Get Fuel On City Basis

Fuel dealers of Peterborough are not discriminating against residents of North Monaghan they assured Reeve M. H. Johnston and Bruce Johnston, township clerk, at a meeting in the city hall this morning.

Suburban customers are receiving the same consideration as those who live in the city, it was said, and this unchanged policy will continue. It applies at present only to coal for the reason that the dealers have been unable to obtain wood under the ceiling prices except at a loss which they could not be expected to assume and remain in business.

It transpired that some of the township residents applied to the city fuel office for some of the hemlock slabs the council bought to meet the emergency of need, and were informed that orders were not accepted from beyond the city's boundaries. Presumably the notion of discrimination arose out of those comparatively few rejections.

The township representatives were reminded that Bruce Parker, operating a wood yard for years in the township, was reported to have approximately 4,000 cords of wood cut in the Garden Hill area which is understood to be destined for Oshawa.

Look After Customers

"As for coal we are looking after the same people we always supplied, and they are getting the percentage which we have been ordered to deliver," was the tenor of the reply to the two visitors who went looking for dealers and finally found six of them at the city hall meeting.

"What do you think is the best thing we should do?" Bruce Johnston asked. "We don't want to go into the fuel business unless it is a final necessity."

The answer was a suggestion to defer action until after a meeting here Thursday morning with a representative of the Fuel Controller, Ottawa, who has been requested by Mayor Hamilton to come to Peterborough and discuss the local fuel outlook.

Representatives Asked

Trade representatives at the meeting today were H. T. Rehill, John C. Thompson, W. S. Davidson of H. B. Taylor & Son, C. H. Elliott of J. E. A. Fitzgerald Company, J. E. Gregson of Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company and J. A. Boland of McCarthy and Johnston.

It was said that all the local dealers had been notified of the meeting, and Sanitary Ice and Fuel had telephoned that they were unable to be represented this morning. A report of the meeting will be forwarded as requested, to the Ontario Fuel Controller, with the special information that the dealers present recommend as the local area be confined to the city and suburbs and the community of Bridgenorth. It was felt that Lindsay, Havelock, Norwood, Hastings, Millbrook and Campbellford have their established dealers who should be in a position to supply their dealers in proportion to the rest of the district.

Further action this morning was deferred until Thursday or subsequent to the conference which is expected to be held at the city hall. The trade is encountering continuing difficulty with quite a number of consumers who are persistently demanding further supplies of coal on orders already partly filled, and complaining to dealers who are trying to carry out the most recent directive that priority is to be given to consumers whose bins are still empty.

No Cooperation

Incidentally, in the matter of trade experience in daily trouble, while the weather is yet mild, one dealer told of two neighbors who separately objected that trucks were not to drive over their lawns. To them the answer was, well, it is your decision, coal or lawns—and they wouldn't take the coal they could have had, except on their lawn terms. As far as that dealer was concerned the orders were not filled.

Some of the drivers do not wait to parley about details of final delivery. They roll their trucks up to the cellar window, and then the consumer telephones the office: "Your driver didn't ask us where he was to put the coal." And so it goes along the line of non-cooperation by certain householders to whom the dealers refer as 'they don't know yet there's a war on.'

A disturbing thought among dealers is that, if their present efforts toward joint action in filling priority orders fail to enlist the support of the entire trade, circumstances might develop when cold weather sets in forcing government intervention to the extent of complete control locally. The trade is anxious to supply homes that have yet no coal, but it was said this morning that this purpose cannot be carried out without full cooperation by all the dealers. Possibly something may be said on this point Thursday.

Another comment today was to the effect that some householders are asking for twice the amount of coal they ordinarily buy. By that means they expect that with even a 50 per cent delivery they would have all they need for the winter.

War-25 Years Ago

By The Canadian Press

SEPT. 28, 1918—The British and Canadians advanced to within two miles of Cambrai as the Canadians took Raillencourt and Sailly and the French took Montigny and Revillon. British warships and naval airplanes raided Zeebrugge and vicinity. Bulgaria asked for armistice.

AB Lew Evans Missing In Sea Action

Richard Evans, Lansdowne street west, received a wire from the Department of Naval Affairs at Ottawa, Monday afternoon notifying him that his son Able Seaman Llewellyn Evans of the Royal Canadian Navy was reported missing on war service. No further particulars were given but the telegram stated that a letter was following.

ABLE SEAMAN LLEWELLYN EVANS

Seaman Evans is 20 years of age and has been in the Canadian Navy for over two years. He trained for some time as Esquimalt, B.C., before going to sea and has seen service on the Atlantic since. Before enlisting he was employed in the Canadian General Electric plant.

The young sailor was for some time a member of the crew of the minesweeper "Wasaga" commanded by Lieut. John Raine, R.C.N.R. of Peterborough which won fame in helping the destroyer Caldwell reach an Eastern Canadian port.

He was home on furlough during the summer and at that time was due to take a special course as gunnery instructor. He had served on the "Wasaga" for eight months, during the rigors of winter on the Newfoundland patrol.

Congratulations of the city council were sent to Capt. Raine and A. B. Llewellyn Evans after the story of their vessel's part in the rescue of the Caldwell had been made public.

Wood Says Drink Responsible For Socks Theft

Norman A. Wood, 36, blamed drink for all his trouble, after he had pleaded guilty in police court this morning to three charges of stealing socks, twenty pairs in all, from the Canadian Department Store.

"I might as well tell the truth" Wood said when asked by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., as to what he had done with the socks, "I suppose I sold them to get money to buy drink."

The accused added that he had been drinking for some time before the thefts were committed.

Magistrate Langley, after reading over the accused's record sentenced Wood to four months definite and two months indeterminate in the Ontario Reformatory on each charge, the sentences to run concurrently.

Wood had been charged with stealing nine pairs of socks last Friday, five pairs on Saturday and six more pairs on Monday. Elwood Doxsee, store department manager, said that he had seen Wood near the hosiery counter in the C.D.S. store on Friday and again on Saturday and on both occasions socks were missing afterward. On Monday he had seen Wood there again and following him out of the store had stopped him outside and found the accused in possession of six pairs of stolen socks.

Soldier Given Term In Jail

Fifteen days in the county jail, the sentence to date from September 21, was the penalty imposed in police court this morning on James Clinton, 17, of Toronto, who pleaded guilty a week ago to stealing $10 from Pte. Louis Jobin of the Military Training Centre.

Clinton was discharged from the Army here last week, and his arrest followed immediately afterward when the theft of the $10 was discovered.

It was stated in court this morning that the boy had no previous record.

Driver Arrested Following Crash

After an accident in which his car was involved on Park street in front of the C.G.E. plant on Monday evening, Fred J. Doughty, Edison avenue, was arrested by Constables Leo. Murphy and John Morrow, who investigated the affair, on a charge of drunken driving.

Doughty appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning and pleaded not guilty. He was defended by John A. Bradshaw who asked for a week's adjournment and the request was granted when Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., said he had no objection.

John Hesmond, 672 Park street, was driving north on that street and Doughty was driving south when the two vehicles came into contact and both were damaged. No one was hurt.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Thurston Observe Their Golden Wedding

A happy occasion was celebrated on Monday, when Mr. and Mrs. Thomas James Thurston observed their golden wedding anniversary at their home in Dunsford.

Mr. and Mrs. Thurston were married at the bride's home in Fenelon township on September 27, 1893, with Rev. Moses Metherell of the Dunsford Circuit as officiating clergyman. The bridesmaid was the late Mrs. W. J. Kennedy (Hannah), sister of the groom, and the groomsman was Mr. Thomas Henry Thurston, brother of the groom, of Carievale, Sask.

They farmed north of Dunsford until seven years ago, when they retired to the village. They are both in good health.

The Thurstons recalled on Monday that Mr. Thurston's grandparents came to Canada from England with their children, and settled on the farm where their son now is. Mr. Thurston's grandson is the fifth generation to live on the old homestead.

MR. AND MRS. T. THURSTON

Built Home.

The grandparents had to hew their home out of the towering forests in Verulam township, and when they wished to take flour to the mill and get other supplies they had to go to Port Hope, which was the nearest place. They travelled by means of an ox cart and jumper.

Mrs. Thurston was born two miles west of her husband's home on the boundary between Fenelon and Verulam townships, while her husband was born on the homestead. When they were first married they found the going difficult for a time with poor crops.

Three sons and three daughters were with their parents. They were: Mrs. Gordon Maxwell and her husband, who is with the Veterans' Guard of Canada; Arthur and family of Snug Harbor, Lindsay; Walter of Omemee with his family; Mrs. Charles N. Taylor and family, Alvin, on the homestead with his family, and Laura of Toronto. They have eight grandchildren.

Long Trip.

A pleasant surprise came in the form of Mrs. Fred Thurston, sister-in-law of the bride, who came from Bow Island, Alta., and others present were from Toronto, New Toronto, Peterborough, Bobcaygeon, Lindsay, Quebec, Omemee and the surrounding district.

In the afternoon, tea was served by the family, when many friends called to extend their congratulations. In the evening supper was served to the family and the grandchildren put on a mock wedding. A number of gifts were received from the family and their friends.

With Boys In Services

The editor of this column will welcome extracts from letters from boys serving or any other information concerning them.
By JEAN STENTON

JOHN VICTOR

England again after an 8-months period in Canada, is the latest word from B.Q.M.S. John Victor, whose wife lives at 507 Gilchrist street. Formerly a decorator, Victor enlisted and went overseas with the 4th Anti-Tank unit two years ago. Eight months ago he was sent back to Petawawa and he is now attached to the 6th anti-tank unit overseas. His wife says that he is very fond of the country there, due to the fact that her people are there.

Joseph Gerard Guerin, son of Mr. T. Guerin and the late Mrs. Guerin, 274 Hunter street west, saw action in Sicily and is presumably with Canadian forces in Italy. His letters home, like those of other boys there, stresses the heat. He mentioned that he had seen a little action and that it was no fun when bombs started dropping and friends got hit. A friend who came to Peterborough with him from the West was killed by a German mortar bomb too.

"Joe Collins' son is over here, also Jimmy Higgins, and I have talked to the latter two or three times. This place never really cools off and I am now a gunner in the carriers. The people here seem to be very poor and there are very few cars, mostly mules. The houses are all made of stone with slate roofs."

This soldier enlisted with the Midlands in 1939 and then volunteered to go with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1940.

A group of 30 students and 17 instructors of the Canadian Women's Army Corps have arrived at the Canadian Driving and Maintenance School, Woodstock, and will be the nucleus for the first class of C.W.A.C. personnel to be given instruction at this centre.

The girls will receive instruction in motor mechanics, minor repairs and driving, the same as given to the men. There will be 45 to 50 girls trained in each six weeks course. Major H. C. Lawson will be officer commanding of the C.W.A.C. Wing instructors are women officers from Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Quebec.

Mrs. A. Hollings of Campbellford has received a letter from her son-in-law, Sgt. Leonard Grew, a paratrooper with the joint Canadian-American forces, in which he describes the recent landings made on Kiska.

They travelled 7,300 nuatical miles in the expedition, not counting the miles covered in landing barges, and other types of boats, planes and trains. On Kiska they went out on patrols, and apart from sleeping in Jap blankets, they were able to get no souvenirs.

GERALD S. CARPENTER

Gerald S. Carpenter, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Carpenter, Lansdowne street west, has arrived overseas. He received his basic training at Cornwall, then took a course in signalling at Kingston. Before enlisting he was employed in the C.G.E. tool room.

A note of warning has been sounded for friends and relatives who are planning to send boxes to their boys in Sicily and in Italy. Mrs. Georgian Gahagan, 494 Sherbrooke street, got word that her son Pte. "Mike" Gahagan had received a box in which everything but tinned goods was completely ruined. Chocolate bars, gum and cigarettes were nothing but a mess. Even a cake was bad.

Harris Glen, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Glen, Lansdowne street, has joined the Navy and is getting an opportunity to see the country. He enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R. about two weeks ago and his parents have received word that he is now in Winnipeg at H.M.C.S. Chippawa. Before enlisting he worked for 1½ years at the Ovaltine. A sister, Pte. Fanita Glen, is stationed at Kingston with the C.W.A.C. She worked at the Dominion Woollens until enlisting fourteen months ago.

A former C.G.E employee, William Lock, who enlisted some time ago in the Air Force and went overseas, has become something of a mystery to his friends here who have been trying to trace him for some time. Mrs. F. Delahaye, 559 Bethune street, at whose home he boarded for a while had a letter about two months ago stating that he was fine and enjoying his work.

Another Peterborough boy who found the Sicilian heat unbearable is Tpr. George Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Cooper, Nicholls Oval. During the day the thermometer generally stands at 110 degrees he writes, and it stops at about 95 at night. The group he was with was allowed to work only a few hours a day. In addition the flies were something to cope with. He said that there were plenty of oranges, grapes and lemons and that people were kind to them. On the way to Sicily he had an opportunity of seeing Gibraltar and Malta.

Enlisting in 1939 with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Tpr. Cooper later transferred to an Ottawa unit as a motorcyclist, and then was changed to a Bren carrier. He will soon celebrate his fourth birthday overseas. Before enlisting he worked for Better Beverage Company.

PTE. RUTH HOSKER

The Schweir family on Albert street have gone active in a big way. A daughter, Pte. Ruth Hosker, is a member of the C.W.A.C. in the Canadian Army Administration School at Kemptville. Her husband, AC2 Arthur Hosker is serving in the R.C.A.F. and their son Ricky stays with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Schweir. One son, Gnr. G. R. (Jerry) Schweir, R.C.A. (Signals) is overseas. Another son, Don, is anxious to join the Navy but is too young, and is at present a member of the Sea Cadet Corps. The father, Percy Schweir, served in the 1914-1918 war and for a time served with the Veterans Guard in this war.

H. Wood Helps Reduce Juvenile Delinquency

Senior Magistrate Hebert S. Wood, of Vancouver, finds from a survey that juvenile delinquency is not increasing. He is a brother of Dr. Edward Wood of Ottawa, and son of late Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, of Peterborough, city and county.

Magistrate Wood concluded that boys present a more serious problem than girls, and the Daily Province editorially comments: "The boys and girls of this province are getting better because of the practical help they are getting from Magistrate Wood and some persons working with him."

A summary of Magistrate Woods' detailed report was published in the Vancouver press two weeks ago, with his findings and recommendations.

One C.G.E. Group Totals $188 For War Victims

It was on February 7, 1941, that the Punch Press Department of the Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. made their first contribution to help the sufferers from air raids over Britain through the Peterborough and District British War Victims fund, since which time they have sent in a further nine different donations, with one listed in their name to-day.

With A. Griffith as foreman, this one group has in this manner contributed the total sum of $188 when the $26.27 listed in their name to-day is included, and this has played its full part in the grand total of $5,197.52 which has come to the fund from the employees in the C.G.E. and Genelco plants in this city.

This money has all been raised through the passing of a penny box at regular intervals, a system which is followed by a few others, and has been found in the long run to be a splendid way for them to give co-operative help, which individually was not missed but collectively has amounted to a really worth-while contribution.

Seventy Silver Coins

For the second time a contribution has been received from a lady who prefers to be known as "A Friend" which had been accumuated through her laying aside 10 cent silver pieces, thus giving the fund a $7.00 boost, repeating in identical fashion the contribution made on the first occasion.

The contribution listed under the heading of "From one who has seen for himself" comes from a young Peterborough patriot who has recently returned from England, where he was stationed on active service, and in handing it to the secretary of the fund, he expressed his pleasure in no uncertain terms that this City and District had its own fund to give the bombed out victims in Britain a helping hand, and having seen for himself the need that exists, he wished to do his little bit in helping the fund that goes from his native city to help them.

In a sense, this almost entirely duplicates a story that could have been told in connection with a donation reported on Monday from Miss Kitty Flowers. This young girl is staying with relatives on Dublin street, having come to this country from amidst the scenes of devastation wrought by air raids over Britain, and knowing what it meant she was keenly anxious to help the fund along in its work of mercy, so the flowers in her relatives' garden here was made the medium through which she was given that opportunity to do her bit.

Ladies' Softball League

The Peterborough Ladies' Softball League have embarked on an effort, the proceeds of which will go to two distinctly Peterborough projects to help along the war effort, of which this fund is one.

The members have begun selling tickets for a draw which carries chances on three prizes, the first of which is a suit, (ladies or gents), the second prize a $10.00 war savings certificate, and the third prize a $5.00 war savings certificate. The draw will be made on October 30.

People's Choice

Referee Maxwell got into the battle several times. On one occasion in an effort to make Hogan break a hold at the ropes the official clapped a monkey drop hold on the housepainter and the next moment the two of them went sailing over the ropes to light with a thud on the floor of the arena. Housepainter Hogan took a few punches at the referee and then climbed back into the ring where Clayborne sailed into him like a tiger and almost got a fall before the Coast Badman could do anything about it.

A little later came the stranglehold incident, Clayborne taking advantage of it to drop both his opponent and the referee and then takes the fall.

It was announced from the ring that Clayborne would appear before Ontario Athletic Commission today, asking them to order Palermo John Katan to meet him here in a return bout next Tuesday night.

Scowling Doc Felice who tangled with the crowd before he was nicely in the ring won the preliminary bout from Jumping Joe Maich of Brantford after 21 minutes. It was a good battle with Felice the aggressor most of the route. The big Yugo Slav who had twenty pounds on the lively grappler from the Telephone City gave Maich a rough ride but Jumping Joe retaliated with some of the same stuff at times and the crowd cheered wildly when Maich turned it on. Local fans have Felice listed in the public enemy column and anything anybody pulls on him is all right here. However he was too big and too strong for the popular Maich and finally took the bout by shaking his opponent badly with a series of body slams and then slapping an unconscious chin lock on the Brantford grappler that soon reduced his rival to helplessness after which he spread him for the fall. At that Maich got all the cheers when the bout was over.

Dunlop A Victor

Another bad man triumphed in the semi-final when Al. Bunny Dunlop in a stormy bout threw Joe Christie after 24 minutes of lively battling. Christie, the tallest wrestler to appear here this season, weathered the storm effectively over most of the distance, although he took quite a pounding from the rowdy Dunlop. The new-comer earned applause by his clever work in breaking out of several dangerous Dunlop holds. On one occasion the Toronto Strongman picked Christie up and whirled him around in an airplane spin that looked like curtains for the tall battler. However when he tried to complete the spin by slamming Christie to the mat for the fall he suddenly found himself neatly trapped with a scissors hold and instead of dropping his opponent he went down himself. The crowd liked that and they got an even bigger kick when Christie after absorbing a series of Dunlop punches suddenly turned the tables on Dunlop by grabbing both his thumbs and working a little painful judo that made the Toronto mat artist say uncle for a while. However Dunlop finally ended the argument by tossing Christie around the ring with a series of body slams and then dropping on him to pin his shoulders.

There was more excitement after the bout had officially ended for Christie jumped on his feet after Dunlop's arm had been raised by Referee Maxwell and sailed into the big Queen City grappler swinging lefts and rights to the jaw and looked to be on his way to a knockout when Bunny planted his knee in the tall battler's stomach a couple of times and slowed him down long enough to let him climb out of the ring and out of reach of the angry Christie.

The usual officials were in charge. Bert Maxwell of Toronto refereed all three bouts and Fred Scates did the announcing and timing.

Philadelphia Athletics and that seems a poor return for playing a major part in Toronto's capture of the International League pennant....One thing is certain about the world series and that is that the Cards will have a flock of left-handers for service against the Yanks....It looks as if Ernie White is back in form again to augment the St. Louis port-side brigade. He beat the Boston Braves yesterday 6 to 3....Credit the Philadelphia A's with consistency at least. The Mackmen sustained their 100th loss of the season last night at the hands of the St. Louis Browns....Old Preem Whiteley, Oshawa veteran seems to go on for ever and lose none of his stuff....He snapped his fast ball past the Toronto Invictus so effectively Saturday that the Queen City representatives could collect only four hits and were beaten 6 to 2.

Midwinter Garden of Indoor Plants

Gay Blooms Reward Little Care

So cheerful and colorful, a midwinter garden in your home tiding you over into spring! And so easy to raise, if you choose the right plants!

Clivia miniata, with its clusters of scarlet, lily-like flowers, looks delicate but is one of the hardiest. After a long and vigorous blooming period it puts forth jolly red berries.

Yet it asks so little care! A light window while it flowers; less light and less water afterwards. It can go on for years without re-potting.

You can even make the humble carrot work for your garden! With its bottom third in a dish of water it will sprout delightful, feathery leaves.

Our 32-page booklet gives simple rules for growing these and many other lovely flowering and foliage plants indoors—begonia, and cyclamen, narcissus and violet, to name only a few; as well as brilliant ivy, ferns, rubber plants. Has directions for all-year care; for window boxes, too.

For your copy of MAKING PLANTS AND FLOWERS GROW INDOORS send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

A UNIVERSAL CONVENTION

One convention which is universal among all experienced players is that which involves the rebid of one suit followed by the bidding of another one. It shows the first suit to be of at least six cards in length and the second to be of only four. By its use, many a safe trump suit of six cards in one hand opposite two in the other, is uncovered. Use of this convention can also point the way toward No Trump as the contract with minimum risk.

How much more accurate was the bidding chronicled above for Table 2 of the tournament where this deal was played. North showed South he had six spades and four diamonds, and South showed his partner he had six clubs and four hearts. So, when North put the side into 3-No Trumps, he knew exactly what kind of risk he was taking. As it developed, he made the contract, after East led the heart 5, though there are almost limitless possibilities to the variations which can come from different ways of playing the hand and different defenses.

At Table 1, where neither North nor South was particularly keen in bidding technique, North anyway knew enough to be sure that, after South said 3-No Trumps, he was in a spot. Having bid spades once, then diamonds once, then spades again, he had shown his partner only five spades and four diamonds. This is why he decided to try again at 4-Spades, getting himself set two tricks, doubled by East. He lost two tricks in trumps and three tricks to the three side aces.

Several Sites Suggested For City Hall

Planning for post-war municipal employment projects is proceeding at the city hall, but Mayor Hamilton and members of the council would like to inject more speed into present preliminaries while there is still ample time for considering primary aspects of some of the work which it is felt the city should undertake.

Recently consulting a federal building representative who was available in the district some of the proposed sites for a new city hall were visited, and in the meantime citizens generally have been making suggestions as to what they regard as desirable locations. One of them is on the north side of Murray street, between George and Water streets, extending deeply into that block toward the Public Library.

Adjoining property tends to enhance that block with St. Paul's Church on one side, the Y.M.C.A., Confederation Square, the library and other churches in the neighborhood. Choice of that location would require the purchase of a terrace on Murray street, private houses northward on Water and a service station and several houses on George street. The council has not yet reached the question of alternative sites, but it is generally recognized that wherever the city hall is built it will involve investment in land.

Conversations along the street have mentioned the Charlotte street front of the market hall block with the razing of it including the clock tower and stores along George street and the public building on Charlotte street.

The city owns that entire property, but its choice would cost the present rental income from the George Street stores.

Another site that has been mentioned is along Charlotte street from Louis to Aylmer street and to the west of the projected federal building whose erection was suspended by the outbreak of war. It is known that the Dominion government has bought the land and prepared plans for a combined post office and customs house, and those who have been mentioning that area for a city hall point out that the federal and municipal buildings would make idal companions, follow the trend of building generally to the west and south, and redeem Charlotte street at last from its rather ancient shabbiness in the vicinity of Aylmer street.

Another side which finds some approval is the corner of Brock and Water streets, and still another is the entire block within George, King, Water and Sherbrooke streets. The government probably still owns the south half of that area and would probably be willing to sell it to the city at a bargain. Reportorial mention of that property is aware of the fact that the north half of the property is occupied by the former Peter Hamilton manufacturing plant, and even reference to it might tend to cause Mayor Hamilton some embarrassment.

The council in its next step may send several of its members to St. Catharines and Kitchener to see their comparatively recently built city halls, and, as Alderman Bradburn remarked the other day, profit by any oversights or mistakes which they may have made.

And also in the meantime preliminaries for the consideration of a municipal airport are under way to the essential end of estimating what that enterprise would cost.

Mayor Hamilton's chief concern these days is get as much of the ground work completed early on municipal projects, for which there may be governmental assistance, and reach a position of comparative readiness for the time when men returning from the war will need work until the country resumes its peace time stride.

Ceiling Price Put On Apples

OTTAWA, Sept. 28 — (CP). — The Prices Board announced today that ceiling prices on apples when sold by growers in the main producing areas of Canada, and on apples sold at wholesale and retail have been established under an order effective at once.

Three "producing zones" have been designated and ceiling prices at all levels specified for each zone.

Zone 2 is the Maritime Provinces. Quebec. For apples sold in this zone the ceiling prices are based on a delivered price at the Island of Montreal and at distribution points on or south of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway west to Sudbury, Ont. For other distributing points in the zone the ceiling prices are based on Toronto prices plus transportation costs from point of shipment, less 25 cents a hundredweight.

Zone 2 is the Moritime Privinces. The ceiling prices in this zone are f.o.b. Kentville, N.S., plus transportation to other distributing centres.

Zone 3 is British Columbia. The ceiling prices are f.o.b. Kelowna. Ceiling prices for British Columbia apples in other parts of Canada will be the Kelowna ceiling plus transportation costs.

The varieties of apples produced in the main areas have been divided, for purpose of the order, into two groups, "along lines recognized by the trade." The first includes all apples of the McIntosh family, Gravensteins of Nova Scotia, Fameuse, Snow, Northern Spy, except in British Columbia, Golden Russet, Delicious, Newton, Winesap and Stamen Winesap.

Group 2 includes all other varieties.

In Zone 1, the growers' ceiling prices delivered at the named distribution centres in southern Ontario and Montreal, for No. 1 grade apples, group 1, packed, are $6.60 a barrel, $2.20 a hamper, $2.35 a Quebec crate, 82 cents for an 11-quart basket and 49 cents for a six-quart basket. For apples in Group 2 the ceilings are $5.60 a barrel, $1.85 a hamper, $2 a Quebec crate, 68 cents an 11-quart basket and 41 cents a six - quart basket.

For "Domestic" grade apples in Zone 1, the ceilings in group 1, are $5.75 a barrel, $1.90 a hamper, $2.05 a Quebec crate, 70 cents an 11-quart basket and 42 cents a six quart basket. In Group 2, "Domestic" grade the ceilings are $4.70 a barrel, $1.55 a hamper, $1.75 a Quebec crate, 58 cents an 11-quart basket and 35 cents a six-quart basket.

Affects All Zones

In all zones, apples of other grades or packed in other types of containers than those mentioned are "correspondingly priced," the Board said.

For loose-packed apples a discount of $1 a barrel or 25 cents a crate or hamper is provided. For windfalls, where they are permitted to be sold, a discount of $1.50 a barrel or 50 cents a hamper or crate below the domestic - grade ceiling prices is provided.

The order provides for addition of storage and shrinking costs after December 1, at a rate of 30 cents a barrel, 10 cents a hamper, box or crate, or quarter-cent a pound on any other package, for each month.

On the above ceiling prices for growers, wholesale distributors are permitted to add transportation cost from F. O. B. points, and a mark-up not to exceed 12½ per cent of their selling price.

Retailers are limited to a mark-up of not more than 20 per cent of the retail selling price on unbroken barrels, boxes or hampers or other packages, or 25 per cent of the selling price on broken lots of apples.

Soldiers Object To Italians As Allies

By EDWARD KENNDEY
Associated Press War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHERN ITALY, Sept. 21 — (Delayed). — (AP). — The Badoglio Government, now established in Southern Italy, seems determined to force itself upon the United Nations as an ally, but British and American soldiers here are frankly unenthusiastic about welcoming the Italians as comrades in arms.

It would not be surprising if Premier Badoglio issued a declaration of war on Germany as a means of getting into the winning camp and salvaging something in the post-war settlement.

The idea of accepting the Italians as "Allies", however, is repugnant to many of the troops, who thought they had defeated the Italians once and for all and now find it strange to have Italians in charge of civil administration here and issuing decrees which indirectly affect the Allied forces.

Badoglio, along with King Victor Emmanuel and Crown Prince Hum Humbert, now are established in a Southern Italian town which is in effect the provisional capital of Italy. Badoglio has his own army with arms, including artillery, and his government is permitted the use of the Bari radio.

Officers of the Allied military government of occupied territories (AMG) who came here to administer the country have found their organization sidetracked while the Italians control the civil power, and they are resentful of the situation. At least one high AMG officer has resigned.

Commissioner Wolfe thanked all for their support in their attendance and also drew attention to the coming Scout Apple day on Saturday, October 16.

Akela G. Groombridge gave the results of the days events. St. John's won the Bill Coleman Memorial Trophy for the Cub events with 14 points with George St. a close second with 12 points. St. Luke's was next in line with 9 points in the Scout events; St. Luke's and St. James' were tied for first position with 8 points each but as there is no award for first place this year the tie will not be broken. Sacred Heart, All Saints and Park Hill were next in line with 6-5-4 points in order given.

The genial master of ceremonies led in some good singing and a stunt was put on by two Cubs from Murray St. We want to compliment these two lads for their excellent description on knife sharpening.

Then in deep silence, standing bare headed in the darkness of the evening, with the light of the Camp fire casting its shadows in the trees, a splendid day was brought to a close with thanks to God as all joined in saying the Lord's Prayer.

Church Services Recall Grim Battle

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 28 (CP Cable)— The people of Britain looked back over three years today to the battle of Britain when the valiant and outnumbered R.A.F. in the sky and the civilian men, women and children on the ground won the first great victory of the war over the Germans.

Led by the King and Queen who joined the big congregation in a remembrance service at St. Paul's, Britons in the capital and provincial cities, towns and hamlets paraded to churches Sunday to commemorate the third anniversary of the Germany air force's defeat in the skies above Britain.

Civil defence and war workers, air crews and W.A.A.F's marched in the parades and attended the services to mark the Battle of Britain anniversary and civil defence day. The flag of the civil defence corps flew side-by-side with the R.A.F. ensign.

King Takes Salute

The King took the salute with the Queen by his side at the march past of thousands of London civil defence services and fliers, many of whom fought in the Battle of Britain.

After the procession passed, Their Majesties chatted with the heads of the civil defence and dominion high commissioners for some 15 minutes.

Later the King held an investiture in Buckingham Palace at which he decorated Subadar Lalbahadur Thapa, Gurkha officer who won the Victoria Cross for valor in the Battle of Egypt.

The memorial service at St. Paul's, itself scarred by bombs, was the largest in the country. Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding, R.A.F. head during the trying days of September, 1940; Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, Chief of Air Staff; cabinet ministers and members of the diplomatic corps attended while the Archbishop of Canterbury preached the sermon.

The Archbishop said that those who saved this island three years ago were "used by God as a means of miraculous deliverance."

3,000 Coal Miners Strike In Scotland

GLASGOW, Sept. 28 (CP Cable). —Seven Lanarkshire coal pits were idle Saturday as nearly 3,000 miners refused to work in protest at the arrest of six miners who failed to pay fines of £5 ($22.50) each imposed in a Glasgow court recently in connection with a previous strike.

The walkout took place against the advice of union leaders.

The strike followed shortly settlement of a Nottinghamshire walkout in which 20,000 miners were idle for a week over the jailing of a youth for refusal to work underground. The youth subsequently said he was prepared to go below ground.

Churchill To Blame

CHICAGO, Sept. 28 (CP).—Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist party in the United States, asserted Sunday that Prime Minister Churchill "made the decision not to open the second front" and that President Roosevelt submitted "because he is unwilling to have a public disagreement with Churchill."

ALLIES STORM POMPEI NEAR NAPLES

Nazis Stall Advancing Reds With Powerful Blows Along East Dnieper Banks

Russians Surging Ahead Rapidly Along Upper Dnieper Toward Gomel And Vitebsk Cities

By HENRY C. CASSIDY—Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Sept. 29—(AP).—Unleashing concentrations of troops and tanks in the battle for the Dnieper River, the Germans counter-attacked strongly today in a bid to maintain their bridgeheads on the eastern bank.

Frontline dispatches said the enemy, holding favorable positions, was launching 10 to 12 counter-attacks daily with powerful air support. The Communist party newspaper Pravda reported that at one point a Red Army was put in a "critical situation" at one time, but Soviet artillery came to its relief.

No further progress was reported immediately in the directions of Zaporozhe and Dnepropetrovsk, two major objectives on the lower Dnieper.

Zaporozhe lies on the east bank of the Dnieper behind a solid ring of fortifications. The main part of Dnepropetrovsk, the suburbs of which already have been reached, lies on the west bank.

(Today's German communique, as broadcast by Berlin, said German troops, engaged in heavy defensive fighting on the Dnieper warfront, lost ground temporarily yesterday but wiped out their losses with counter-attacks.

(The communique said Russian attacks at several points on the west bank of the central Dnieper were frustrated. It reported Russian bombers raided Constanta, Rumanian Black Sea port.)

Situation Static.

The situation around Kiev, less than 200 miles to the northwest on the great bend of the Dnieper, was comparatively static with the Russians consolidating their positions on the east bank across from that great German defence bastion.

Soviet armies far to the north were plunging forward in a movement that threatened the early collapse of Germany's upper Dnieper line. The Moscow war bulletin recorded the capture of more than 1,000 villages and towns in this drive into White Russia toward the Baltic States and old Polish border. Already the strategic Gomel-Vitebsk railway line is within range of Red Army siege guns.

German troops falling back on Vitebsk were reported blowing up bridges and dynamiting military installations as the Soviet columns stormed to within 10 miles of that key to Poland and the Baltic seacoast.

The Soviet communique declared that German troops were falling back in disorder between Vitebsk and Gomel, junction of five railways

Liberals Start New Program Of Organization

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Sept. 29 — (CP). — With a new executive and a new program the National Liberal Federation today began a period of organization activity after being virtually inactive since the 1940 Dominion elections.

The special meeting of the federation advisory council and more than 300 additional members registered as non-voting delegates completed a two-day meeting late last evening.

A series of resolutions were adopted but not made public. It was intimated that they would be consolidated in a single program which will form the basis of the federation's educational campaign in the coming months.

All the meetings were closed to press and public but an official spokesman said the resolutions might be made public later when they have been reprinted.

Peterboro Man Held For Murder

TORONTO, Sept. 29—(CP).—Mrs. Oliver Casselman, mother of two children, is dead and 53-year-old Walter D. Holland, with whom she lived for 11 years, is under arrest charged with her murder.

The woman died suddenly yesterday after she had taken a capsule believed to have contained poison. Police said the capsule had been given to her by Holland the previous evening when she asked for a pill to relieve a headache.

The 32-year-old Mrs. Casselman, who, police said, had left her husband and lived with Holland in Peterborough, Ont., and Windsor, Ont., before coming here, died in hospital soon after she had collapsed in a house on Woodycrest Avenue. Driver for a cleaning firm, she became ill in her truck and had gone into the house to telephone her employers. She collapsed while talking on the phone.

Holland, automobile storeroom keeper, was arrested at his work, and Detective Robert McArthur said that while the man was being placed under arrest he attempted to get rid of some capsules that were in his pocket. They were recovered by police, however.

Police said they had learned Holland and Mrs. Casselman had been drinking in a hotel beverage room Monday night when the woman was said to have complained of a headache. She was given a capsule, police said, but evidently didn't take it until sometime yesterday.

Senators Try For Waterway

War Will Delay St. Lawrence Project

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—(AP).—Authorization for construction of the St. Lawrence Waterway to open the Great Lakes to Atlantic ocean traffic and develop water power resources has been proposed in bills by Senator George Aiken (Rep., Vt.) and Rep. William Pittenger (Rep., Minn.)

Aiken said there was little hope of passage of the measures during the war, despite support of the United States War, Navy, Commerce, Agricultural and State Departments.

The development would cost about $429,000,000, of which Canada would pay $144,000,000, Aiken said.

The St. Lawrence would be deepened to 27 feet, enough draft for seagoing vessels. The power plants would be constructed by the State of New York, but the bill would require the state to sell excess power to adjoining states. The present plans call for development of 2,225,000 horsepower, Aiken said.

Paralyzed 4 Years By Incurable Malady Man Earns Living With 1 Finger Typing

By MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Sept. 29 (CP)—The true story of John Patrick Murphy is stranger than the fiction he writes. It's a pulp writer's dream come true.

Four years ago—on July 26, 1939—John Patrick Murphy was picked up by police from a Toronto street. A woman standing by muttered, "aren't these drunks disgusting," and an ambulance took him, unidentified, to a hospital.

John Patrick Murphy wasn't drunk. He was completely stricken by paralysis. His brain was clear, but he couldn't move a finger, he couldn't even frame his own name with his lips. He did try, and from the results he was booked for two years in that hospital as "John Murray" of Vancouver.

Mystery Man

John Patrick Murphy of Timmins, Ont., telegrapher and radio announcer, vanished into thin air. A mystery man lay in the hospital. A wife and a nine-year old son waited at home, dazed, incredulous that the father of the home should not return from a business trip to Toronto.

As John Patrick tapped out on an alphabet board in Our Lady of Mercy Hospital for incurables the other day: "Even from the first there was little pain—only shock. My mind was clear."

At the end of eight months he could swallow and a little feeling had seeped into his left side. He still couldn't grip a pen or pencil.

One day, his wife in her search for him, passed within two blocks of the hospital. She couldn't know that her husband might almost have seen her from his wheel chair by the window.

John Patrick Murphy still sits in that same chair. He's still a paralytic. He still has no control over his body except for the fingers of his left hand with which he can punch typewriter keys.

But the world became his oyster when the meagre power came back to those fingers.

Hands Move

"I'm doing all right now," he tapped out on his alphabet board.

Slow Down In Industries Worries British Leaders

By DOUGLAS AMARON—Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 29—(CP).—The buoyancy with which the nation greeted the success of Allied arms had a paradoxical effect in war industries where good news led to some relaxation of the all-out effort workers have been making since Dunkirk.

Britain's factory output is higher than a year ago and the hourly output per worker is greater than in the United States or Germany, but there have been in recent weeks signs of industrial unrest which are causing concern.

Late in September 20,000 workers were on strike in Britain and other strikes were threatened. In many cases the grievances were what one industrial reporter termed "frivolous" and the real reason was believed to be the conviction that "the war is as good as won."

The government, however, as shown in Prime Minister Churchill's speech to the House of Commons Sept. 21, does not hold such an optimistic opinion, contending that the bloodiest period of the war is still to come. The industrial unrest has government departments worried.

Hits Aircraft Group.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Minister of Aircraft Production, met 1,000 representatives of the aircraft industry in London the day Mr. Churchill spoke to hear and discuss their complaints and to tell them the government's program.

For some months there has been unrest among aircraft workers, provoked by what they claim are "inexplicable delays and lack of work."

At the end of the meeting, during which a message from Churchill was read, a pledge was made that the industry would devote its untiring effort to provide the R.A.F. and fleet air arm with the greatest output of aircraft within its power.

Britain has weathered greater threats to industrial production than those she faces at present but the coming weeks and month are important one and the government is stressing the fact that every bomber produced now, every ship sent down the slips, every ton of coal mined, will help speed the end of the war.

Ford Dismissal To Be Discussed

TORONTO, Sept. 29 —(CP)— O. E. Lennox, Assistant Master of the Supreme Court of Ontario, today said a preliminary discussion will be held here Monday between J. L. Cohen, K.C., of Toronto, counsel for A. Nelson Alles, C.C.F. member of the Ontario Legislature for Essex North, and J. B. Aylesworth, K.C., of Windsor, counsel for the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, on circumstances in connection with the dismissal of Mr. Alles by the Ford plant a week ago.

A public hearing will open at Windsor, Oct. 6, Mr. Lennox said.

Mr. Lennox was appointed by the Provincial Government last week to conduct a public inquiry into the dismissal.

Mr. Alles said last Wednesday that on his return to his job at the Ford plant he was told by Wallace Clark, head of the personnel department, that he no longer was on the payroll of the company.

The C.C.F. member was an accredited delegate to the recent annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada at Quebec and following that meeting attended a C.C.F. caucus at Toronto.

He said he had asked for leave of absence to attend the Quebec meeting and had been refused. He said company officials told him that if they granted him leave it would be setting a precedent.

Canadians Capture Town On Hill

12-Hour Siege Stampedes Nazi Garrison

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 8TH ARMY IN ITALY, Sept 20 — (Delayed)—(CP Cable). — Canadians occupied an important town in the hills of Southern Italy after a 12-hour siege fought from neighboring slopes.

Difficulty of the approach to the town made it possible for light German rearguards to hold the Canadians off until Royal Canadian Engineers had cleared the roads of mines and built a detour around a demolished bridge to open the way in.

While they worked tanks, which later rolled into the town with the first troops, sat in the hills blazing away at cleverly-concealed German machine-gun nests. Canadian artillery behind the tanks also battered various defensive locations.

Canadian infantry who moved slowly into the town took a few German prisoners who were among the first captured since the start of the invasion of Southern Italy. Both infantry and engineers came under rapid fire of German machine-guns and suffered slight casualties.

Progress Slow.

We joined the Canadian spearhead force of reconnaissance, infantry, tanks, artillery and sappers late on Sunday afternoon and got to within two miles of the town at nightfall. It was slow progress because engineers had to repair bridge demolitions carried out a bare half-an-hour before the Canadian advance, and sweep roads of mines.

The Canadian column moved on with the Lieutenant-Colonel commanding the force riding in a jeep directly behind the leading carriers and tanks. I mounted the turret of a scout car with Captain W. G. Janes of Bowmanville, Ontario. Suddenly the column halted and the wireless crackled with the news that enemy tanks were believed ahead. The alarm about enemy armor proved false and the entire column speeded up as the sun began to sink behind a purple ridge. Progress as soon slowed down once more, however, while sappers rooted up and exploded

The sappers went about their hazardous work casually, crouching only a few yards over the edge of the high road when the mine exploded throwing a great, black smoke ring skyward.

Many Fresh Graves

Janes pointed out German graves by the roadside, identified by helmets perched on crude wooden crosses planted in mounds of earth. All along the road there was evidence of the Allied air forces which had intercepted the withdrawing German transport. The road was pocked with big craters and every quarter mile or so there was the wreck of a German vehicle, either on the road or pushed over the edge into the valleys.

Janes said the troops, tankmen, gunners and sappers in the spearhead column had been travelling for three days with little sleep and irregular snacks but the Germans were still evading them.

Italian Town Flattened By Two Enemies

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

CORLETO-PERTICARA, Southern Italy, Sept. 22—(Delayed)—(AP)—Here in Corleto-Perticara you will find the heartbreak town of southern Italy.

Along four military roads which meet in a dusty junction at the edge of the bomb-torn Piazzo Plebiscito the German retreat rushed pell-mell last week-end.

For four days and night R.A.F. and American bombs sowed explosives in giant patterns over the sun-scorched shoulder of the Appennines whereon Corleto stands.

German vehicles caught in the whiplike range of Allied bombs were splintered into a thousand fragments and scattered as chaff in the wind.

On Corleto's main street—Via Pietro la Cava—gray stone buildings with red tile roofs collapsed in piles of rubble and shade trees were upturned.

German Depression.

A half mile from Corleto on the crater-pocked road westward lies a mangled Nazi army truck in which two Germans set out to lay mines to protect the retreat toward Potenza. One was killed outright by an Allied air attack and the other died within a few hours, the Italians told me.

Beside the overturned chassis in the ditch was a Paris-made letter folder. Inside was a neatly typewritten message to "Mein Lieber Kurt" from a bitterly distressed girl who scawlingly identified herself as "Bobb."

I've just read this letter—so despairingly and war weary and anti-Nazi—that it casts an amazing light on what the German home front has been thinking. It was dated Aug. 1, 1943.

"It's now weeks and months that my last two letters have gone unanswered," wrote the Berlin girl to her soldier lover.

Terror Raid

"Everything here is satisfactory... Allied terror attacks are greater than ever....Hamburg, which is spoken of as a 'general test,' suffered heavily....Everything is satisfactory except that my 76-year-old father's home was hit and burned down. He was knocked unconscious and was taken to the hospital with grave burns.

"Reichmarshal (Goering?) whose mouth was always so full of words is not silent. He is called 'Tengelmann' (name of a German chain system of restaurants) because in so many towns he has had defeat."

Eating bully beef and biscuits in the debris of Corleto's Piazza Plebescito I heard the story of 24 Jews—14 women, eight men adn two children—from the grizzled, bespectacled Hermann Emphraimson, former

Fall Of Naples Imminent Germans Withdrawing; 8th Army Wins Zappanetta

Montgomery Wipes Out Deep Salient Between Malfi And San Angelo Clark 13 Miles From Heart Of Naples

By N. NORGAARD—Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 29—(AP).—The 5th Army has driven the Germans from their last mountain positions above Salerno and is pursuing the enemy on the plain within 15 miles of Naples, the fall of which appeared today to be imminent.

The Germans, routed out of the mountain strongholds in six days of heavy fighting, were in general retreat, leaving the Allies in complete possession of the Sorrento Peninsula, which separates the Bay of Naples from the Gulf of Salerno.

British and American troops of Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark began the final attack on the enemy's extremely strong mountain positions at dawn yesterday and by noon had captured Nocera, vital road centre at the beginning of the coastal plain leading to Naples.

Castellammare, important naval base on the southern shore of the Bay of Naples, also fell quickly into Allied hands as the Germans withdrew in a flight that may not cease until they reach the River Ventura line, well north of Naples.

(In London, the authoritative British Press Association said it had learned that 5th Army forces had entered historic Pompei at the foot of smoking Vesuvius and only 13 airline miles from the heart of Naples.)

Advance General.

The break through on the extreme western end of the front extending across Italy from coast to coast was accompanied by a general advance on the entire 8th and 5th Army line.

Troops on the 5th Army's right flank smashed their way six miles northward against crumbling enemy opposition and were within seven miles of Avellino, road and rail junctions which is the key to inland communications east of Naples.

The capture of Avellino would constitute a threat to any German effort to make a new stand anywhere east or south of Naples.

Straighten Line.

The British 8th Army, including the Canadian 1st Division, meanwhile wiped out the deep salient on its western flank, previously reported, and established a straight line between San Angelo and Malfi, while along the Adriatic Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's forces stormed northward from Margherita Di Savoia and occupied the town of Zappanetta on the gulf of Manfredonia, due east of the great Foggia air base.

British troops on the extreme southwest end of the Allies' front began the final shove against the enemy in the mountain line north and northwest of Salerno and encountered the bitterest kind of fighting at the town of Sala, which already had changed hands many times in recent weeks of the furious struggle.

This time Allied troops seized it for keeps and swept on triumphantly, realizing that any further attempt to make a stand in that area was futile, began to retreat.

Reports from the front emphasized that the enemy's withdrawal was orderly and there was no suggestion that the Allies were taking

Reek Explains Duties Of Commission

TORONTO, Sept. 29.— (CP). — "This is the first committee of its kind in Canada," W. R. Reek, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, told members of the Ontario Agricultural Royal Commission at their first meeting to-day. The commission with wide powers has been set up by the Ontario government to inquire into and recommend on farm problems.

Stressing the wide powers contained in the commission, Mr Reek said it permits the members to inquire into the necessity for methods to provide credit for agricultural purposes; education for successful agriculture development and satisfactory country life; organization for profitable marketing of farm products together with cost of producing, marketing and processing farm products.

The commission also permits inquiry into price spreads, methods of financing and labor problems.

Wide Authority.

"You are given authority to delve into everything connected with agriculture," Mr. Reek declared.

The commission also has power to summon persons and corporations to give evidence under oath and order production of documents on matters under examination.

"The commission stands on its own feet with power to make recommendations and it is up to the government to take steps to put these recommendations into effect," he said.

Eden Optimistic On Soviet Talks

LONDON, Sept. 29 — (CP). — Looking forward to the British-American-Russian tripartite conference of Foreign Ministers, Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, yesterday advocated proceeding "by practice rather than by blue print" in plans for a future world order.

Addressing a national conference of 6,000 women called by the Government, Eden added:

"Given an agreement between the British Commonwealth, the Soviet Union, the United States and China, any schemes for regional organizations, security systems and so forth can be worked out without too great difficulty...."

He declared that without some agreement between the four Powers "not one of these projects" is likely to prove to be practical politics.

In welcoming the forthcoming conference, Eden said:

"I hope that one task for that meeting will be to examine and to decide upon methods for joint consultation and joint action between us all in peace as well as in war."

Nazis Face Two-front Bombing Attacks

Reds Spring Trap As Foggia Capture Leads To New Aerial Pressure

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Capture of Foggia in Southern Italy — great communications centre and focal point of a baker's dozen up-to-date airdromes — represents one of the major triumphs of the Mediterranean war, it's the key to vast new fields of Allied endeavor.

Possession of Foggia will permit us to unleash a fresh tornado of bombing and fighting planes. First off, it should greatly expedite the conquest of the Italian peninsula, for it will go far towards breaking the back of German resistance there. An early development should be Nazi evacuation of the hotly-contested Naples region.

But our gun-sights can be raised to much more distant horizons. From Foggia we can reach into Germany to vital centres which heretofore have been difficult to bomb. We've destroyed a huge portion of Hitler's industrial structure, and much of the balance now is within our range. The Balkans lie open to the flying fields of Foggia—a matter of the utmost importance at this moment when the cockpit of Southeastern Europe is squirming to escape Hitler's clutch.

Slight Error

Italy isn't the only theatre to produce sensations, however, for the Russians have broached a new operation which may be a blockbuster. That's up on the Leningrad end of their flaming front. A couple of years ago Hitler in one of his bombastic speeches defied the United States, dared Britain to invade France and, as a special mark of his prowess, proclaimed that Leningrad "is surrounded and no one will free it again and it will fall into our hands."

That was the time when this birthplace of the Red revolution was being defended not only by Russian soldiery but by its citizens— men and women, young and old. It was a winter of horror, of violent death and the slow torture of starvation and bitter cold, but still they clung to their city. Somehow the Hitlerian ring was pushed back until Leningrad no longer was isolated, though the invaders have continued to hold their line not far from the southern side of the city.

Well, the Russians now as part of their great offensive against the Nazis are beginning an operation which is calculated to be the pay-off for Hitler's crime against the city of the Red revolution. I refer to the capture of the strategic city of Smolensk and the continuing drive westward. It's as fascinating a display of tactics as we are likely to encounter.

Good Generalship

One Red Force is headed northwestward along the Smolensk-Vitebsk-Dvinsk railway towards the little aBltic state of Latvia, which is only 200 miles away. Other Russian contingents are pushing southwest, in a turning movement against the German line. If the Muscovites have the reserve strength to develop this movement, it will cut off the Hitlerites in that whole northern zone which has its apex in Leningrad. It also will place Finland in a

400 Lonely U.S. Soldiers To Get Boxes

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29 —(AP)— Four hundred United States soldiers in all sorts of out of the way places will receive Christmas boxes from an unidentified little old lady in blue gingham dress.

"I want to buy a Christmas present for a few of the boys overseas who would not get one otherwise—boys in the most remote and lonesome places," she told the Washington Post.

She held out a certified cheque for $1,000.

"I only wish I knew how long I will live. I am 76 now. I think I will ask my banker what to do," she said on her return the next day by appointment. In about an hour she was back again with a second cheque for $1,000.

United States Army chaplains helped select the gifts but the little old lady insisted upon a frivolous item or two, "soap that smells nice or violent talcum powder."

BLOODY BATTLE AT FINSCHHAFEN NEARS CLIMAX IN PACIFIC AREA

Aussies Take Heavy Toll Of Japanese

60 Planes Burned At Wewak 7 Ships Destroyed

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Sept. 29—(AP)—The bloody battle for Finschhafen roared toward its finish today, with Australian soldiers exacting a heavy toll among the Japanese defenders, while the supporting bases of the enemy for 300 miles to the northwest along the New Guinea coast were bombed into impotence.

More than 60 planes were destroyed at Wewak by Allied bombers and fighters Monday. Three tankers and four merchant ships, just arrived in the Wewak harbor with supplies which could have been intended for overland movement south, were blasted to the harbor bottom.

The coastal road leading from Wewak down to Finschhafen was strafed at Hansa Bay by Allied fighters.

Less than a mile north of Finschhafen, veteran Australian ground troops struck hard at Japanese positions on high ground, inflicting heavy casualties.

Other Australians have fought their way to the banks of the Ilebbe Creek west of Finschhafen. The enemy's air and supply base, which is separated by only 70 miles of water from Japan's strategic island holding of New Britain, is virtually encircled.

200 In Raid

Headquarters, in the first report on the new air raid on Wewak, said that operational base was heavily bombed and also hit by 160,000 rounds of ammunition Monday by more than 200 raiders. Fifty planes were destroyed on the ground.

Twenty planes got aloft. Eight were shot down for certain, three others probably. Three raiding bombers were lost.

The Wewak harbor took a terrific pounding. Twenty-nine barges or luggers were destroyed. On the previous day Allied fighters bagged at least six enemy planes at Wewak where Japanese losses since mid-August now exceed 460.

Institute Sponsors Homemaking School

COBOURG, Sept. 29 (ENS) — Homemaking training school will be held next month for girls of Northumberland County. It is the custom for a club leader to be chosen who will receive special training and through the winter months conduct regular classes with the girls of the community.

This leaders' training school will be held in the council chamber of Warkworth township hall on October 12 and 13 from ten in the morning until four in the afternoon each day. The various Women's Institute of the county have been contacted by agricultural representative R. C. Banbury of Brighton, and are being asked to see that a leader attends this school, so that each rural community may be able to offer this opportunity of homemaking study to the young women resident in the area. The instruction will be under the guidance of Miss Jean Scott from the Women's Institute Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Any other community, in which there are five or six girls, may send a suitable senior person who will be welcomed to the training and these activities.

School Boy, 11, Falls 20 Feet From Barn Roof

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 29 — (ENS). Gerry McCullough, 11, village lad, had a narrow escape from serious injury when he fell 20 feet from the rafters of Robert Charlton's barn to the floor, badly cutting his head and breaking both bones in his left wrist.

Gerry, accompanied by four chums, Jimmie and Delmer Sloan, Myles Huddlestone, and Gordon Blake, was attempting to catch pigeons in the haymow, when he slipped from a rafter and fell, striking his head against the ladder in his plunge.

His chums carried the injured boy over a quarter of a mile to the home of John Huddlestone who drove him in his car to Peterborough to the hospital. There it took four stitches to close the wound in his head and the broken wrist was set and put in a cast. He remained in the hospital overnight and was brought home on Tuesday afternoon.

'In a few years I'll be sitting pretty."

It was two years before John's large, capable hands showed signs of life, then only the left one responded to his ceaseless flexing. One day he found he could clutch a pencil — and John Murray of Vancouver was a mystery man no longer.

"I spent days printing notes to my wife, my mother, my friends," he typed out.

His wife rushed down from Timmins.

"We decided there must be something I could still do. Then we hit on it—I'd write stories. The problem was solved—I thought."

This is the story of the birth of John Patrick Murphy—author, as he punched it out himself.

Writes Now

"Ad built a special table for me to fit a wheelchair. A typewriter company rented me a typewriter at a purely nominal sum. I thought I was made.

"For seven months I ground out tripe only to have it fired back in face—with reason. Finally in March, 1942, came my first sale. Ten bucks—for 2,500 words. My wife was jubilant. Me too. We were made. I was a writer.

"But I didn't have another sale until August. After that my writing paid off better. I've made several hundred since then — $300 since January of this year. Writing in a 13-bed hospital ward is rather hectic at times, but I spend from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. in my wheel chair, and I work eight hours every day. I'm still clawing at the fringes, but I'm improving."

Board Decides On Plans For New School

At a special meeting of the Board of Education on Tuesday, the members decided to adopt plans for a new school in the Parkhill Road area to be built by Wartime Housing. The plans and contract were agreed upon subject to a lawyer's advice.

According to the terms of the agreement a two-room school will be built by the Wartime Housing and the Board of Education will be responsible for operating and equipping it. The terms of the agreement will be in force until six months after peace has been declared, and the building must be turned over in reasonably good shape.

Since this new school will be for junior pupils in the Parkhill Road area, Inspector Wightman suggested that certain modifications be made in the plans in the matter of blackboards and wash rooms, so that the equipment would be suited to pupils of Primary and Grades 1 and 2 age. It was also suggested that a small teacher's room be fixed up, and fluorescent lighting used. The question of a play room was discussed and while the Inspector said that no such provision had been made he declared that it was not necessary, since the teacher gave the pupils breaks in class in many of the city schools.

Begin Immediately.

An up-to-date hot water heating system will be installed when the school is built, and the members discussed the question of hiring a part-time janitor. G. W. Craw suggested that the man who looks after the Community House might be willing to act in that capacity, and the matter was left.

H. G. Walker felt it was important to know when the school would be ready for occupancy and included in the list of modifications was the request that the school be finished by January 1. Inspector Wightman declared that the Wartime Housing had priorities on material and would have no difficulty in getting started, and as soon as the agreement was signed, Mr. S. Longhurst would contract for the building.

It was the general opinion of the Board of Education members that the plans which had been submitted for their approval looked good, and that there was "nothing temporary" about the building that it is acquiring.

relations, agriculture, fisheries, lumbering and mining. The resolution on labor relations was said to have demanded efforts to bring about a better understanding between capital and labor and to widen the recognition of labor's rights.

The meeting voted confidence in Prime Minister Mackenzie King and expressed the desire that he remain in a position to guide Canada's war effort through to victory, and to represent Canada at the peace table.

Some changes in the constitution were made at yesterday's meeting, designed to give the federation a new purpose and widened field, particularly to encourage the political activity of the younger people.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 29 — (CP).— The usual din was missing from the trading floor of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday as the Federal order halting trades in wheat futures became effective.

The wheat pit, major grain market of the world, was a shadow of its former activity, here sales of millions of bushels of wheat for world markets had been carried out.

Pitmen made their final transactions yesterday, closing out the traces in accordance with orders from Ottawa, sales being made at Monday's close.

With wheat off the boards, rye became the spotlight with sharp gains to new seasonal highs. Gains ranged from 6⅝ to 8⅛.

Plan Swift Retreat.

The Germans appeared to have realized far ahead of time that they must ultimately yield before the sledgehammer blows and accordingly made plans well in advance for a swift retreat.

On the 8th Army front a military spokesman reported that German parachute troops who were captured complained bitterly that only 17 men were left in one company as the result of recent fighting.

With the advance moving ahead from the south and east, there was adequate evidence that Field Marshal Albert Kesselring long ago decided that Naples would be undefendable once the heavy, drawn-out mountain fighting ceased.

The capture of Castellammare gives the Allies a valuable shipping centre and naval base capable of handling warships up to 230 feet in length. The town has a population of 45,000.

Drive Huns From Mountains In 6-Mile Advance; Sorrento Peninsula Taken

5th Army Within 18 Miles Of City After Clearing Heights Engineers Repair Airports At Foggia

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 29—(AP).— Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark's Anglo-American 5th Army has broken through the mountains above Salerno and entered the plain leading to the great Italian port of Naples after capturing all of the Sorrento Peninsula, it was announced at headquarters today.

In driving the Germans from their strong mountain positions south of the Naples plain, the 5th Army forces pushed ahead four to six miles and overran the road and rail junction of Nocera, 19 miles southeast of Naples.

The latest thrust, said a communique from Allied headquarters, pushed the Germans out of the heights north and west of Salerno and "forced an appreciable withdrawal."

(An Algiers broadcast placed 5th Army units within 18 miles of Naples, Italy's second greatest port.)

Advancing Allied troops on the right flank of the 5th Army captured Salza, about 35 miles east of Naples and eight miles northwest of Cassano, the capture of which was announced earlier in the week.

The air offensive against troop concentrations and supply lines of the retreating Germans was hampered by bad weather, although some Allied squadrons which carried out offensive patrols encountered a few enemy fighters and shot down one of them.

Pacific Troops Take 250 Miles During Year

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Sept. 29 —(AP). — Allied armies in New Guinea are advancing against the Japanese today on a battlefront 250 airline miles north of the Owen Stanley mountain point where they started their offensive just one year ago.

Last year on this date General Douglas MacArthur's forces made their first gains against the Nipponese, who had advanced to within 32 miles of Port Moresby on the southern coast of New Guinea across the Coral Sea from Australia.

Since that drive through the treacherous mountains started the Australian and American soldiers have regained control of the Papuan Peninsula and moved 250 miles along the northeastern coast from Buna.

The vital bases at Lae and at Salamaua and the Finschhafen air field have been recaptured during the last three weeks. Now the Allies, not only are closing in on the town of Finschhafen, but are starting a new thrust toward Madang, 170 miles along the shore to the northwest.

This movement toward Madang is an overland drive from the Markham Valley at a point 68 miles northeast of Lae. Monday's communique announced the capture of Sagerak, a village about 70 miles south and a little east of Madang.

Capture of Finschhafen appeared near as the Allies moved in from three directions. The nearest force was only three-quarters of a mile north of the town. Other troops threatened from the west and south.

At last the pictorial censorship has been lifted on the huge swinging doors of our beloved ugly duckling, the LST, meaning landing ship-tank. These craft have seen action at Sicily, Attu, Munda, Rendova, and wherever U.S. soldiers are fighting. Here we see some fighting men—destined for action in Sicily—in the maw made by the huge swinging doors after they had disgorged equipment and munitions during exercises on the Atlantic coast.

CAMPBELLFORD

Find Air Cadets Permament YouthMovement

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 29 —(ENS).—Aid Cadet Corps are being organized as a permanent youth movement and are no longer a purely wartime expediency according to Flying Officer N. F. Adams of No. 1 Training Command, Toronto.

Addressing Rotarians at their luncheon here on Monday, Flying Officer Adams urged them to assume the responsibility of forming a local Cadet Corps Unit. Introduced to members by Rotarian G. N. Maxwell, the speaker traced the founding of the movement first organized in Britain in 1938 and comprising youth "who during the Battle of Britain did just about everything but fly the planes."

Following its inception in Canada the R.C.A.F. saw the potentialities of the movement and took over the administrative end of the Corps which now embraces some 30,000 cadets across Canada. "The Air Cadet League proposes to keep this movement going after the war so that a permanent organization for boys between the ages of 14 and 18 is being set up."

Medical Service.

The speaker pointed out that among the important contributions it was making to youth was the medical examination provided on enrolment and at regular periods while they remained members of the corps. He saw in this fact alone a distinct benefit to the community welfare and added that the success of the organization depended on the enthusiasm of the local men behind it.

Four chief responsibilities to be assumed by the sponsoring organization were: (1) Enroll boys physically fit aged 14½ to 17½; (2) Provide quarters for them to meet, hold parades and receive instructions, (3) Provide a commanding officer who will in turn select those who will assist him, (4) Provide air cadet uniforms at a cost of $7.50 each and payable over a 24-month period. To offset this uniform charge is the R.C.A.F. per capita grant of $1.00 for each cadet at the annual parade (or absent with leave) and a further grant of $1.25 per year for each uniformed cadet.

The sponsoring organization must provide uniforms for the officers if the officers are unwiling or unable to make the necessary $45.00-$50.00 outlay themselves. But now with a fourteen day officer's course being provided and an opportunity for qualifying as a fully commissioned reserve officer with reserve pay of from $150-$160 per year there should be little trouble in arranging payment for the officer's uniform, he declared.

No Obligation.

Flying Officer Adams was of the opinion that public subscription, once the corps was formed, would go a long way towards financing it. He then went on to explain that despite the training they received recruits were not obligated to join the service on completion of the course. "The boy does not enlist, he simply enrolls as he would in the Boy Scout or any other youth movement. However, it he does decide to join the service, he has the edge on those who have not had the advantage of this preliminary training.

As a further evidence of the important part the Air Cadets would play in the post war world, Flying Officer Adams pointed to the dominating position held by Canada in the world air routes and suggested it would be of great advantage to this country to have a potential reserve of young men trained in the various fields of air transport.

Rotarian H. N. Carr, who moved the vote of thanks to the speaker, urged that the club executive give the proposal consideration. Guests at the meeting included Mr. George Palliser of Brantford, and Mr. E. H. Greig of town.

COUNSELS CAUTION

The so-called "Common Cold" is invariably prevalent at this season of the year. Unfortunately most of us are inclined to treat this affliction too casually, in many cases with dire results to ourselves and also to many others, to whom it has been communicated by our carelessness. A "cold" should be treated immediately and if it does not respond quickly a visit to your Doctor is very much in order. Today, due to the overtaxed capacity of our various transportation facilities, it is most obvious that a greater than usual hazard is present, inasmuch as a large percentage of "colds" are the result of infection by others. This condition therefore calls for precautionary measures. The building up of "Systematic Resistance" by the taking of the proper "Vitamin Compounds" is of course a very excellent procedure and one of proven worth. The use of Antiseptic Gargles, Nasal Sprays and Inhalations is also to be considered in this respect. Following these thoughts, may we remind you that your Tamblyn Drug Store is fully prepared and qualified to fill your Doctor's prescription, and, in addition, they can supply medicine of merit both for prevention and relief, many of such being included in this list of

Toward a New City Hall

We are glad that the question of a site for the new City Hall is attracting so much attention, and we think that the city is in complete agreement with the Mayor that the preliminary deliberations should be made now, so that there will be neither delay nor unwise and hasty decisions when the war is over. There is no reason why a site cannot be chosen and plans for the building completed, so that work can begin as soon as the war ends, and employment given to a large number of workers who might otherwise suffer from a post-war slump of unemployment.

Several sites have been suggested, and some of them are under consideration. Two notions of a City Hall appear to be in conflict: there are those who think that it should be built toward the south part of the city, in order to follow the apparent south-westerly expansion of the business section; and there are those who see no reason why a city hall should be in the busiest part of the town. The former group favour a site of George Street or Charlotte Street; the latter favour a site on Murray Street, between George and Water.

The advantages of the northern site are many. The City Hall would be with a number of other public buildings, and would be near two handsome parks. And, as it is fair to assume that land in that vicinity is not so expensive as it is in the business section, it would be possible to surround the City Hall with lawns and flower-beds which would set it off to advantage.

All the judgement and care that can be mustered should be used in deciding upon the site and the plans for the new City Hall. Once it is built it will be expected to serve for a long time; Canada has reached that stage in her history when we must begin building for future centuries, and not merely for future decades. The spirit in which the present Mayor and Council are approaching the problem will meet with approval in all quarters.

Those Foreign Names

Several of our contemporaries have recently taken a poke at those radio announcers and news broadcasters who astound us with their pronunciation of the names of the foreign towns and regions which crop up in the news. We have at hand a piece from the Halifax Chronicle which attributes much of this desire for accuracy to the example of the B.B.C.; the Chronicle has a poor opinion of what the radio broadcasters are trying to do. Let us pronounce foreign names as though they were English, it says, and away with all this truckling to foreign standards of pronunciation!

That attitude would be defensible if it were possible to pronounce all foreign names in an Anglicised version. We agree that it is better for us to talk about Mexico than about Mehico, but how does the Chronicle expect to Anglicise a name like Przemysl? There are more foreign names without an English version than with one, and the broadcaster has to pronounce them when they turn up. And so he very sensibly searches through a gazetteer and approximates the native pronunciation as nearly as he can.

The Chronicle suggests that broadcasters be "natural", in order to be better understood. Who sets the standard of naturalness, please? Broadcasters have to remember that many of their listeners are acquainted with one or more foreign languages—may, indeed, be foreigners resident in this country. Are they to assault the ears of these listeners with pronunciations which seem "natural" to the ears of the Chronicle? Such naturalness might easily be mistaken for ignorance.

We see the broadcasters' difficulty, and we think that they manage fairly well with it. And Canadians really should not be too critical in such matters. When visitors to our country mispronounce some of our place-names — such as Gananoque, Kouchibougu'c or Musquodoboit—we wonder how they can be so stupid. But imagine the woes of an Italian announcer, for instance, urged by an Italian paper to give these names an Italianate sound!

A Park For The County

Some excellent work is being done these days by the National Parks Association of Canada in drawing the attention of the public to the need for conserving our forests and for putting them to the best possible use. A forest tract can be useful in two ways—as a source of timber and as a source of health. Indiscriminate felling will soon ruin a forest tract, and only systematic re-planting will keep a forest in first-rate condition. As for health, a park can only be useful if it is accessible to the public.

With this in mind, we advance the suggestion that the Peterborough County Game Reserve might be opened to the public as a large natural park. It is a fine tract of forest land, and it contains many beautiful lakes. At present there are no roads through it, and building these would be the chief necessity if it were to be used as a park.

We do not, of course, suggest that the Game Reserve become a picnic ground or an unrestricted camping-ground. It would have to retain its character as a sanctuary for game. But in the ten years or so that it has been completely closed the game should have multiplied to the point where it would not be driven away by a few visitors.

After the war the county might consider opening the Game Reserve with some roads, and permitting the establishment of a few well-supervised holiday resorts. Thus it would provide another beauty-spot for people who live in the county, and another attraction for the tourists who will be coming to the county in increasing numbers.

A Problem Of Sex Education

An interesting point related to sex education in the schools was brought up by Dr. S. R. Laycock, director of the Education and Mental Health Division of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, when he addressed the York County Home and School Councils recently. Sex education, said he, should not be confined to an exposition of the physical side of sex, and a warning against venereal disease, but should direct attention to love and marriage. Young people should be taught "that the psychological needs for affection and belonging and self-esteem can only be met where there is deep love", he is quoted as saying, and urged that a warning be given against other forms of sexual expression "which leave the deeper needs of the personality unsatisfied".

We see what Dr. Laycock is aiming at, but we are doubtful if there could be any successful teaching along the lines he has suggested. We agree that it is bad for the individual and bad for the nation that most people should be as confused about marriage as they are when they contract to enter that state, but we are not confident of the results which would follow if young couples were to marry filled with information which had been doled out to them in school. Who is to do the teaching? Must the teachers all be people who can prove that they have married happily? Is a standard of love, authorized by the Department of Education, to be set for the Province? We are sure that Dr. Laycock has not foreseen the pitfalls which would be opened by any attempt to put his suggestion into execution, and we are sure that few classes of adolescents would be grateful for the sort of advice he suggests. It is characteristic of adolescents that they think they know more about love than their elders, and that sex is their personal discovery, and this attitude must be indulged to some extent.

The place for the sort of teaching which Dr. Laycock suggests is not in classes on sex, we believe, but in classes on literature. Give adolescent boys and girls the poetry, the novels and the drama in which men of great perception have described the passion of love, both in its noble and its ignoble aspects, and they will learn more than any teacher could hope to tell them. There is a tendency to select books for study which avoid such matters, preferring Walter Scott, who had nothing new to say about marriage, to Samuel Butler, who had much to say about it. The literary way of approaching this problem, we think, would have a greater chance of success than a series of lectures by a teacher who might be seriously embarrassed in giving them.

NOTE AND COMMENT

One of the peacetime luxuries which war has eliminated is sales resistance.

Refinement, says the Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph, lies in the ability to yawn without opening the mouth.

The veal which used to be so popular for making chicken salad is now rationed, but boarding-house keepers may comfort themselves that there is still plenty of squash left for making pumpkin pie.

A Comic Writer's Anniversary

By
SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

A FEW days ago I happened to pick up a copy of "The Ingoldsby Legends" and was interested to find in it a Preface dated February 1, 1843. The book was a second edition, and not a first, and in any case the Legends first saw light in Blackwood's Magazine in 1837, but upon this slim excuse I mean to write a column about the book, and anyone who does not like it is under no compulsion to read further. "The Ingoldsby Legends" are first-rate comic verse; they contain some of the most ingenious rhymes to be found in English poetry. They were written by the Rev. Richard Harris Barham, a contemporary of Sydney Smith, that other immensely witty clergyman. What, one might ask oneself, has caused the decline of wit among the clergy? The only witty cleric of our time whose name comes at once to mind is Monsignor Ronald Knox, and he is no match for either Barham or Smith. Let some earnest university researcher look into this matter and give us his views.

BARHAM came of ancient lineage, his family possessing estates in Kent, near Canterbury; it was his boast—an odd one for a cleric—that a direct ancestor of his was that Reginald Fitzurse who was one of the assassins of Thomas a Becket. As a lad young Barham was in a coach accident which left him lame for life, and may have turned him from the active pursuits of a country gentleman to the more sendentary occupations of a clergyman and a writer. Early in his career he became a minor canon of St. Paul's cathedral and a priest-in-ordinary of the Chapels Royal. His cast of mind was not conventionally clerical; he loved burlesque, irony and gay living, and he had a somewhat wry outlook upon the passion for legends and antiquities which possessed so many cultivated persons of his time, and which plunged the novel and the drama into a welter of uncritical romanticism.

BARHAM had the true burlesquer's gift for turning the grave into the gay with the least possible expense of effort. Consider this stanza from his parody of "The Burial of Sir John Moore"—

Not a sou had he got, not a guinea or groat;
  And he looked confoundedly flurried,
As he bolted away without paying his shot,
  And the landlady after him hurried.

In Barham's day parody was more highly esteemed than it is now, and he and Theodore Hook, and the brothers James and Horace Smith gave contemporary poets—including Byron and Wordsworth and Southey — an uncomfortable time of it when they set to work.

THE best known of "The Ingoldsby Legends" is undoubtedly "The Jackdaw of Rheims," but it is not the best in workmanship or humour. A hundred years ago it was considered permissible and laudable for humourous writers to poke very bitter fun at Catholic legend and belief, and many of the "Legends" travel that easy path. Ideas of good taste differ from age to age, and this must always be borne in mind when reading the works of dead writers; we do not, nowadays, think Barham's burlesques of Shakespearean themes funny, either. The burlesquer and parodist gains his effects by treading hard on somebody's corns, and frequently by exploiting popular prejudice. We can hardly blame Barham for being a man of his time. But the best of his verses have a life which will ensure their popularity for a long time to come. Every reader of the "Legends" has his favourites; my own happens to be "Nell Cook; the Legend of the Dark Entry," which contains so much of the best of Barham. It has an excellent story to tell; its form is poetic and its spirit lively; I was frightened by it as a child and have not altogether mastered my dread of the jealous cook who made the poisoned pie. If you have not read it try it some dark night when you are alone; it is a notable bit of grisly fun.

BUT dispute about tastes is futile, and the Legend of Bleeding Heart Yard, and the Legend of Salisbury Plain, and the Legend of France all have their partisans. The time to read the Legends is at night; that is when they were written; Barham was a night-bird if ever there was one. A story is told of his Oxford days, when he was a commoner at Brasenose; his tutor, a Mr. Hodson, rebuked him for his late hours, and especially for his frequent absence from morning chapel. "The fact is, sir," said Barham, "you are too late for me." "Too late!" said the astonished tutor. "Yes sir; I cannot sit up till 7 in the morning. I am a man of regular habits; and unless I get to bed by four or five at latest, I am really fit for nothing the next day." It was this boon companion spirit which Barham carried through his life. His sermons have not been handed down to posterity, which is not surprising, but his legends have stood the test of a hundred years, and if we may judge from the number of reprints of them which continue to appear, they are good for another century at the very least.

By Consent of the Governed

We think of Mr. Churchill as one of the most powerful men of the world, and of course he is. That conceded, it is a salutary thought that he can be turned out of office in five minutes any day the British House of Commons is sitting, if a majority of the members decide they have had enough of him. Mr. Churchill in himself has no power save in his great mental capacity and his long experience—his vast authority arises from the confidence put in him by Parliament. Of himself and without that confidence, he could not command the services of any soldier or of the humblest civil servant.

In this country Mr. Mackenzie King for many years has been charged with great responsibilities—but at any time 125 members of the House of Commons could have toppled him from his high post.

This elasticity is the great merit of the British system of democratic government. To a far greater degree than in the case of the President of the United States, the prime ministers of British countries are immediately responsible to public opinion. The party system saves frivolous use of the rights of private members of Parliament, but the real power is there, in the hands of the elected representatives of the people.

By contrast there is no safe peaceful way by which the German citizen can do anything to remove Hitler from office—Hitler's power is personal, not constitutional, and his acts are not subject to official review. That is the great difference between a dictatorship and a democracy. —Ottawa Journal.

THE LEANING TOWER

The Fanciful Lie Of The Land

IF you were to draw a map of South Africa today in the old pictorial fashion of the cartographers who filled empty spaces with the creatures of their imagination, you would focus your attention on a region a thousand miles northeast of Cape Town and write with many flourishes of your pen, "Here is Gold." Then you would return about a third of the distance you had travelled, and you would write, not quite with the same ample flourishes but fancifully enough, "Here are Diamonds." You would then follow the Orange River in its westerly course to the Atlantic Ocean, and, coming to the sea, you would mark along the coastline again the magic words, "Here are Diamonds." This would still leave much of your chart unaccounted for, and therefore you might journey due east in search of further treasure and ultimately find yourself on the shores of the Indian Ocean, where, for want of something more valuable, but tempted by the pictorial possibilities, you would mark, "Here are Bananas."

Having in this way charted the gold mines of Johannesburg, the diamond deposits of Kimberley and the southwest coast, and the fertility of the Garden Province of Natal (which you might further have indicated with "Here is Sugar"), you would have created a picture which in many respects equals the expectations of the man who has never seen the land but may often have thought of it. In one respect, however, you would have sadly failed him. For you have indicated no lions, no elephants, and not even a wandering hippopotamus.

The plain facts are that you may spend a lifetime between Cape Town, Johannesburg, and Durban without ever seeing a lion or an elephant anywhere except in a zoo, and the first and last vagabond hippopotamus that went wandering, contrary to all hippo custom, among the habitations of men, along the southeast coast, was shot by an unappreciative farmer, to the general indignation, about a dozen years ago. Wild life has everywhere retreated before the advance of man — doubtfully before the black man and assegai, decisively before the white man and his rifle. Today South Africa protects its animal life in several national parks, and therefore he who insists on a pictorial map may mark, "Here are Elephants" (in the Addo bush near Port Elizabeth), "Here are White Rhinoceros" (in Zululand, white only by courtesy), and "Here are Many and Various Animals" (in the great Kruger National Park along the eastern marches of the Transvaal.)

So much for the fanciful lie of the land. Geographically the country also presents some striking features. It rises in four plateaux, from the coast flats at the Cape to the Highveld of the Transvaal, where it reaches an altitude of six thousand feet. In Basutoland the veld becomes mountainous and heaves up to a height of ten thousand feet. The coastal regions are rich, even luxuriant, and the Transvaal is temperate and fertile. Between the two is the arid Karroo, with its semi-desert vegetation, which, travelling inland from the Cape, you enter by way of the Hex River Mountains, and the dust of which you do not really shake from your teeth till you leave Kimberley. But here you are already on the fringes of the Kalahari Desert, which stretches west and north in red sand dunes, thorn trees and tufts of desert grass.—From "The Union of South Africa," by Lewis Sowden. (New York: Doubleday, Doran.)

At the Centre of Empire

(By SCOTT YOUNG Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Sept. 29 (CP)—Nothing typifies war to Britons so specifically as an aircraft, the battle machine which saved this land when all else but hope was gone.

Three years ago these Britons knew every fighting aircraft by sight. The types were few, and sometimes a life depended on knowing whether that lethal bird of flight above was a Spitfires or a Messerschmitt.

But now, with every aircraft but the Spitfire from the 1940 crop dropped from frontline duty, these aircraft identifiers are hanging on the ropes, cringing each time a new type takes the air searching memories doggedly for names for the ones already there. They are almost always wrong.

This point was brought home in devastating fashion a few weeks ago when 30 of Britain's crack correspondents were transported to the Dover cliffs to watch the tail end of a great amphibious exercise. The point of their present was that if the Luftwaffe chose to come out and fight they would see possibly the greatest air battle since Dieppe.

They arrived on the cliffs about dawn, and within a few minutes the planes started to come over. The first, according to all popular theory, was a Spitfire. There was general agreement on that because only one man saw it in a break in the clouds, and the others admitted gravely that it sounded like a Spitfire. Next to appear was a flight of six two-motor medium bombers.

It is popular knowledge that among the more prominent of the two-motored bombers now in operation are the Marauder, the Mitchell, the Wellington, the Boston and the Mosquito. It also is fairly well known that Marauders and Mitchells have been in heavy use over the Channel recently. So it seemed most likely that any argument would be a straignt Mitchell vs. Marauder fight, with no complications. How wrong!

One man took a searching look, then announced solemnly: "Mitchells."

The man beside him started with surprise.

"Oh, no! old chap," he said. "Marauders.'

"They are Wellingtons, definitely," said another.

A fourth went for Mosquitoes, and there was scattered support for Beaufighters. One man claimed with some dignity that it was a flight of Junkers-88's returning from a raid on our airfields, and prophesied: "The fight will start any minute now."

While landing craft came from the Dover area and proceeded leisurely towards the coast of France, then returned, and planes went over in constant roaring waves, this went on all morning. And eventually these crack air correspondents were taken back to London and told that the great amphibious exercise had been an outstanding and almost bloodless success. Although heavy fighting had raged for hours between expert air reporters on the cliffs of Dover, none of our correspodnents failed to return.

Gone At Last

AS soon as a piece of work is out of hand, and before going to sleep, I like to begin another: it may be to write only half a dozen lines: but that is something towards Number the Next. The printer's boy has not yet reached Green Arbour Court with the copy. . . .—and here I come back to the study again: tamen usque recurro. How lonely it looks now all these people are gone! . . . .

What an odd, pleasant, humorous, melancholy feeling it is to sit in the study alone and quiet, now all these people are gone who have been boarding and lodging with me for twenty months! They have interrupted my rest: they have thrust themselves upon me when I . . . . wished to be idle, and I have growled out a "Be hanged to you, can't you leave me alone now?" Once or twice they have prevented my going out to dinner. Many and many a time they have prevented my coming home, because I knew they were there waiting in the study, and a plague take them, and I have left home and family, and gone to dine at the Club, and told nobody where I went. They have bored me, those people. They have plagued me at all sorts of uncomfortable hours. They have made such a disturbance in my mind and house, that sometimes I have hardly known what was going on in my family and scarcely have heard what my neighbour said to me. They are gone at last, and you would expect me to be at ease? Far from it, I should almost be glad if Woolcomb would walk in and talk to me; or Twysden reappear, take his place in that chair opposite me, and begin one of his tremendous stories. . . .

As I write, do you know, it is the grey of evening; the house is quiet; everybody is out; the room is getting a little dark, and I look rather wistfully up from the paper with perhaps ever so little fancy that he may come in.—No? No movement. No grey shade, growing more palpable,

A Bible Message

And the whole earth was of one language, and of one speech. And it came to pass, as they journeyed from the east, that they found a plain in the land of Shinar; and they dwelt there. And they said one to another, Go to, let us make brick, and burn them throughly. And they had brick for stone, and slime had they for morter. And they said, Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.

And the Lord came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded. And the Lord said, Behold, the people is one and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do. Go to, let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech. So the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city.

Therefore is the name of it called Babel; because the Lord did there confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the Lord scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth. (Gen. 11: 1-9.)

And I gave my heart to know wisdom, and to know madness and folly: I perceived that this also is vexation of spirit. For in much wisdom is much grief: and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow. (Eccl. 1: 17, 18.)

Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. (Col. 2: 8.)

Human Bees

Refuting Mark Twain's theory that nobody does anything about the weather—large apple orchardists do, and by employing "human bees."

In the fruit-growing valleys of Washington State they can be seen at work—girls and women on ladders dipping into one apple blossom with a fine brush, then using the brush on another flower.

Like the bees, they are mixing the pollen.

Proponents of this aid to nature call hand pollination of apple trees crop insurance, wherein a good fruit set is assured despite weather conditions during blossom time. The practice costs less than thinning and the human bees can properly space the apples.—Christian Science Monitor.

Winnie Set Right

Churchill tells Harvard that a university "is the academic grove where learning is stimulated where virtues are inculcated and thought encouraged." That's what you think, Winnie.

But in the United States a university is a place where football is played, where a successful coach gets a fabulous salary and a professor is paid so little he becomes a rebel against society and goes left-wing. — Iffy in the Detroit Free Press.

HELP FILL THE BLOOD BANKS - BE A BLOOD DONOR!

1000 New Donors Needed NOW!

You say you want to help, yet have you ever gone any further? Have you ever done the thing that almost all of us can do; have you ever been a blood donor? The process is simple, just as shown here. There is no pain, very little effort, yet it takes very little sometimes to save a life.

BOTH MEN AND WOMEN

The Red Cross needs the blood you can give to build up the "blood-banks" that are saving the lives of many of our brave soldiers, sailors and airmen.

Both men and women between the ages of 18 and 60 are urgently needed to fill Peterborough's Blood Donor Clinic weekly quota.

Don't leave this duty to someone else. Now-a-days the need becomes constantly greater.

Feel the thrill of helping to save the life of somebody's son—perhaps someone dear to you—who was so ready, willing and eager to fight and, if necessary, to shed his blood for you.

Think about this—talk about this—and above all, do something about this. Register now as a Blood Donor.

CENTRAL AND KING EDWARD TEAMS DIVIDE SOCCER LEAGUE POINTS

Red Heron Stars In Other Sports Besides Hockey

By EDDIE LEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

TORONTO, Sept. 29 — (CP). — These autumn days Robert (Red) Heron, well-known professional hockey player, feels like a vaudeville artist juggling rubber balls and balancing a pole on his chin. But, ne says, it's nice work if you can stand the strain.

Robert, in short, is the busiest athlete who ever mixed three sports in one career.

Take a recent day in Bob's life as exhibit A. In the afternoon he played his first football game in nine years—with Toronto R.C.A.F. Hurricanes in the Ontario Rugby Football Union. The 25-year-old backfielder didn't score, but his performance was promising enough to draw polite praise from the critics.

The day was just beginning for Bob when he pulled off his sweater in the dressing-room as Hurricanes celebrated a 31-3 victory over Toronto Navy. The next stop was the airport where he boarded an R.C.A.F. plane for London, Ont. A few hours later he was dressed and on the diamond playing for No. 1 Training Command of the R.C.A.F. against London Army in the Ontario Baseball Association Senior final.

A Heavy Slugger.

London won the final in two straight games, but LAC Heron distinguished himself at first base and at bat, especially in the first game of the series when he had two triples and a single in five trips.

What are his sports plans when the football season ends? He has none, but would "like to play" hockey for a Toronto R.C.A.F. team. He predicts the airmen will have a strong entry in the Ontario Hockey Association senior series this year.

Last season Bob played for Research Colonels, lone civilian entry in the Toronto Group of the Senior O.H.A. Colonels finished in last place, but that didn't stop the red-headed centre star from leading the league in scoring.

Surprisingly enough, Bob— who played for Brooklyn Americans in the National Hockey League and Pittsburg Hornets in the American Hockey League in 1941 and the year before lined up with Toronto Maple Leafs — says he prefers hardball to hockey.

But, he says, "I'd like to play professional hockey for one more season after the war."

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Gentleman Jack Clayborne has obtained his wish at last, another meeting with Palermo John Katan. A wire from Promoter Frank Tunney intimates that the Ontario Athletic Commission has recognized the South African's claim for another crack at the Panther as just and Katan has been ordered to wrestle the Ebony Flash here next Tuesday night. That means plenty of trouble. The two battlers were plenty hot about the whole affair before and now that Katan has been forced to go on against Gentleman Jack the Killer will be in a more ugly mood than ever. When they met here some time ago the pair staged one of the most sensational contests of the season and the climax when Katan took the winning fall on what his opponent and about everybody else in the arena thought to be a raw decision on the part of Referee Bert Maxwell will long be remembered. The crowd demanded that the fall should be disallowed and caused such a riot that Maxwell and Katan had to be smuggled out of the arena by a back door while angry fans milled around the front and finally threw stones through the rink windows. Katan has steadfastly refused ever since to meet the negro grappler here. Now under pressure he has had to yield and the pair have been signed for next Tuesday night. The bout will undoubtedly draw the biggest crowd of the season.

The world series is beginning to get the fans talking. We know it is because at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning the office phone rang and a local enthusiast wanted to know the names of the members of the double-play combination that used to be famous many years ago in the National League. Why he expected the sports department to be operating at 1 o'clock in the morning seeing that sports writers are generally believed not to work at all is a mystery but anyway he rang in. Fortunately we were not too sleepy to fail to remember the names he wanted and we told him that the trio he was asking about were Tinker, Evers and Chance of the old Chicago Cubs. And then by way of thanks he loudly declared that the Yanks were going to win the series and rang off. So we are taking this means of replying with the equally loud declaration that the Cards will repeat their triumph of last year. Both clubs have lost valuable players since they met a year ago but we feel that the National League winners still reserve enough of the hustle and speed that marked their play last season to carry them through the annual classic again. And on top of the speed they look to have more power at the plate—Charlie Keller notwithstanding — and their left-hand pitching is again likely to bother the Yanks so for us it's the Cards all the way. Incidentally we don't want anybody ringing us up in the middle of the night to argue about it, either.

Praise For Westclox

Stratford sports writers pay tribute to the Westclox girls. The special correspondent who accompanied the Kroehlers to Peterborough says of the game here: "The Stratford team thereby eliminated the Westclox team in two successive games but not before a real battle in both games. The Peterborough club drew high praise from every member of the Kroehler team, all of whom rate their semi-final rivals as easily the best club they have stacked up against to date. Saturday's game was nip and tuck all the way and a couple of hits at the right time could have made all the difference for the home team." And Chick Appel, Stratford sports commentator, whose daughter Betty played brilliant ball at short for the Kroehlers used the same phrase as this column did Monday when he remarked in his comment that the results "might easily have gone the other way." "It has been a long time," remarks the Classic City scribe "that two such evenly matched teams met in the championship semi-finals. It was no disgrace to Peterborough to lose to Stratford, and had the shoe been on the other foot it can be taken for granted that Kroehlers would have no regrets losing to a team of girls like the Westclox, who proved good losers and a high type of Canadian womanhood when they played in Stratford."

* * * * * *

Playing before a strange crowd (and the report is that there was a real crowd at the game, taxed two bits per head)," continues the Appel comment, "and on a diamond that was not conducive to the best softball, the Kroehler girls chipped in with five errors, but they usually managed to tighten up when danger threatened. Besides having a slower grass infield, something which the Kroehler girls are not accustomed to, the Peterborough infield has the baseball pitcher's mound jutting up in front of the shortstop position, which makes it very difficult to gauge the bounce on ground balls. This was the cause of at least one Kroehler error. However, despite these disadvantages the Stratford girls came through and that's all that matters."

Fricks Do Trick

Two sons of a former well-known Peterborough athlete Ab Frick, now a resident of St. Catharines, have been going great guns playing lacrosse with the St. Catharines Tecumsehs in the O.A.L.A. juvenile series. The two, Don and Bill Frick, the former a forward and the latter a goalie starred in a recent series with Hamilton juveniles. The St. Catharines story under the head "Fricks Do Trick" says "In so far as the starring roles went the Fricks carried the torch. Bill, in the rigging, stopped a hundred with stick, hands and a kayo in the final frame. Don (Duke) Frick zoomed in five goals for the home cause." Srtangely enough in the second game of the series, played at Hamilton, the two former Peterborough kids were the only casualties on the St. Catharines list. Again from the Standard: "The two casualties were the Frick brothers. Billy in the Tecs' nets stopped a shot with his face for a kayo in the second stanza but returned to turn in a starry effort as he had done previously. On one of the last-minute plays Don Frick was sliced across the back of the head for several stitches but the affair was deemed an accident and no penalty followed for the reason that officials or players could not find the guilty hatchet man." The Frick youngsters are all-round athletes, starring in hockey as well as in lacrosse.

For the second time in two seasons the Syracuse Chiefs have won the Governors' Cup. They wound up the final series with the Toronto Leafs last night in convincing style when Arnold Carter, coming back after being beaten in his first start of the final round against Leafs, came back to shut out Burleigh Grimes' hirelings 2 to 0. There doesn't seem much doubt of the fact that Syracuse has been the better ball club throughout the series. When a team can only score one run in its last three playoff games, as was the case with the Leafs, the superiority of the opposition doesn't require much proof. Syracuse took the last three games in succession as Millard Howell, picking off his second victory, Tom De la Cruz and Arnold Carter in turn came up with a pitching classic. Howell allowed only two hits and a solitary run and his pitching mates followed that effort with a double application of the whitewash brush. Toronto pitching throughout was good too but in the last two games the only chance Luke Hamlin had to get a win was to have blanked the opposition and banged out a home run himself. It is a recognized principle of baseball that you can't win without runs and the Leafs had forgotten how to manufacture them before the series was over. However the pennant winning Toronto club has had the best season in a couple of decades and that is something.

Central Goalie Stars; Game Scoreless

After battling for seventy minutes on Tuesday afternoon, on King Edward Park Central and King Edward divided the league points in an exciting game with the teams endeavouring to get their first win, but resulted in no scoring. D. Long, Central goalie, was brilliant in goal.

First Half.

Right from the kick-off, King Edward took the initiative as they peppered Central's goal, but D. Long, custodian, put up a brilliant display in between the sticks from shots ranged at him by Lawson, at close range, to put the ball out of danger. Dolan carried the offensive repeatedly to find Central's goalkeeper being their stumbling block to success. Central replied with many attempts to relieve the pressure through the efforts of the full-backs, F. McMaster and D. Brook, who kept punting the ball upfield that seemed to be wasted as the forwards bunched. instead of playing their positions. Before the interval, the south-end boys did everything but score and credit must go to the excellent defensive tactics of Central's full-backs. Half time: No scoring.

Second Half.

On resuming, both elevens opened up the game to test the abilities of the custodians. Central still abided with individual efforts that proved a detriment to their success; while King Edward would break fast and test the goalie from all angles. D. Long, the goalie, making spectacular saves, in particularly, the evasive play and finish of Lawson as he picked the corner of the upright but he was surprised to witness the Central goalie clutch the ball quickly to relieve the situation. Later he went right through to shoot but McMaster spoiled his parting drive to save his citadel. Both goals were bombarded until the finish. Full time: No scoring.

Central—D. Long, goal; F. McMaster and D. Brook, full-backs; J. Dormer. B. Edwards and H. Chambers, half-backs; C. Sergeant, A. Carter, H. Wirght, H. Keene and J. Whitnal, forwards. Subs, B. Dormer and K. Delahaye.

King Edward—D. Downer, goal; A. Crocker and A. Ricnes, full-backs R. Clarke, J. Byers and J. Murray halves; N. Lane L. Eakins K. Lawson W. Dolan and H. Dibben forwards. Subs J. Robertson M. Chambers.

SYRACUSE ELIMINATES TORONTO TO ENTER LITTLE WORLD SERIES

Leafs Lose 2-0; Carter Winning Hurler

TORONTO, Sept. 29 — (CP). — The Syracuse Baseball Club of the International League won their way into the Little World Series for the second straight year last night by defeating Toronto Maple Leafs 2-0 for the second straight night.

Their opponent in the minor league classic still hasn't been determined, Columbus leading Indianapolis two games to none in the best-of-five final play-offs which determines the American Associations representative.

The first three games of the Little World Series will be played at Syracuse with the remaining games of the best-of-seven meeting slated for the mid-western loop.

A year ago Syracuse opposed Columbus and lost in five games.

The Chiefs, third-place club during the regular International League, eliminated Newark in the semi-final round and then carried on at the expense of the Leafs, 1943 pennant winners.

In last night's game, Arnold (Lefty) Carter and Nick Strincevich hooked up in a hurling duel, with Carter proving the stingier in the pinches and stranding 10 Leaf base runners. Each pitcher allowed six hits.

Pair of Singles.

One of Syracuse's tallies came in the third inning on a trio of singles with Carter scoring the run. The second came in the ninth when Dick West doubled to open the frame and scored on Garton Del Savio's fly and an overthrow. Toronto challenged in the third and ninth innings but lacked the punch.

In the third Gamble reached the third base with one out, but Carter forced the next two batters to ground out.

The ninth inning also provided some excitement for 13,000 disappointed Toronto fans, when the first batter, Harry Davis, was safe at first on Harrington's error. Two outs followed and Charlie Letchas batted for Stincevich. The game appeared over when he grounded to Harrington at second but the Syracuse player couldn't get the ball out of his glove and both runners were safe. Harrington made sure of victory on the next play by throwing out Frank Zak.

Cincinnati Reds Start Too Late To Win Pennant

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Before they shed their uniforms for the winter St. Louis Cardinals may have reason to be glad that they clinched the National League pennant before Cincinnati Reds became properly organized.

The Reds steamed into second place yesterday, mathematically clinching it against any belated assault, by sweeping a doubleheader from Philadelphia Phillies and running their latest winning streak to nine games.

The Reds had a couple of six game streaks earlier, but it took the late days of September for them to get really hot. They whipped the Phillies 4-3 and 2-0 with seven-hit pitching performances by Ray Starr and Joe Beggs. The only runs the losers made during the entire day came on a homer by Schoolboy Rowe in the first game.

Dodgers Drop Two

The Reds' clinching of the runner-up spot was assisted by Brooklyn Dodgers, who dropped a doubleheader to Pittsburgh Pirates 5-2 and 4-2 and fell into 4th place as the Buccaneers took over third. The Pirates were held to six hits in each game, but bunched five of them for three runs in the sixth inning of the opener and fitted them together at timely intervals in the second session also.

In the meantime Cardinals split a doubleheader with Boston Braves and did nothing to improve their prospects for next week's World Series with the New York Yankees.

Cooper Slips

Mort Cooper, the Cardinals' ace pitcher, started the first game and was relieved in the sixth inning by Lefty Harry Brecheen with the Braves ahead 4-3. Boston went on to win in the 13th 6-5 and the fact that another southpaw, Max Lanier, stopped the Braves in the second game 7-1 on six hit hurling did little to camouflage Cooper's unsuccessful effort in the first game.

Tommy Holmes decided the opener with a single with the bases loaded and Marty Marion and Lou Klein each drove in three runs in the nightcap.

Chicago Cubs took two games from New York, definitely interring the Giants in the cellar, 3-2 in 10 innings and 2-1. A single by rookie Eddie Sauer with the bases loaded in the 10th gave the veteran Paul Derringer the 200th victory of his major league career in the opener and a two-run rally in the ninth won the second session for Lon Warneke after Hugh East had pitched five-hit shutout ball for eight frames.

New York Yankees were beaten 11-3 in their final conflict with Cleveland Indians, but all the score meant was Martin Breuer would get a good rest during the World Series.

Manager Joe McCarthy gave Breuer his first starting assignment of the season and saw Breuer giving up nine hits in less than five frames, allowing a five run rally in the fourth and letting another five-run flurry start in the fifth. The only pleasure for the Yankees was Joe Gordon's 15th homer.

Boston Red Sox trounced the Detroit Tigers 6-1 and Philadelphia Athletics worked out on St. Louis Browns 8-3 with rookie Lou Ciola scattering eight hits.

TORONTO, Sept. 29 — (CP). — Some of the old-timers out West will give you Frank Fredrickson as the outstanding centre in the history of hockey. Of Icelandic descent, Frank served with the Royal Flying Corps, then the R.A.F. in the First Great War. He began his hockey career after the war was won, captained Winnipeg Falcons to the Allan Cup and Olympic championship in 1920, then turned professional with the Victoria Cougars. He helped Lester Patrick's Cougars with the Stanley Cup in 1925. He moved up to the N.H.L. with Detroit, and later with Boston, and in his first year, 1926-27, finished fourth in scoring just a point behind the great Howie Morenz.

Frank is back in uniform again—an R.C.A.F. flight lieutenant stationed at Calgary. And here's the point of this story: Frank Fredrickson, Jr., just 18, has enlisted in the R.C.A.F. at Vancouver to train for air crew. Perhaps he'll come back from this rumpus to become one of Canada's greatest atlhetes, just as his dad came back 25 years ago

Whodunit?

Annis Stukus, Toronto Star sports reporter, is writing mystery stories. Stukus did the story of the Balmy Beach - Toronto Indians football game at Hamilton on Saturday for his paper. He named a lot of guys named Joe among the players and he had this sentence: "Two touchdowns, a field goal and a convert accounted for Beaches total." Stukus didn't mention who did the scoring in Beaches' 14-3 victory, but the other papers couldn't keep a secret. The said one guy got all the points by hisself—Annis Stukus.

Incidentally:

Baz O'Meara of the Montreal Star has been named to a committee concerned with the selection of names of hockey's Hall of Fame. Therefore there's something semi-official about the list O'Meara publishes in his Montreal Star column as obvious choices for recognition — Tom Phillips, Lester Patrick, Joe Malone, Frank Nighbor, Frank Boucher, Aurel Joliat, Mickey Mackay, Si Griffis, Fred Taylor, Dit Clapper, Eddie Shore, Frank Clancy, Charlie Conacher, Harvey Jackson, Chuck Gardiner, Clint Benedict, Hooley Smith, Nels Stewart.

Major League Hockey Starts Oct. 30

MONTREAL, Sept. 29 (CP) — Shorn of many of its stars by an ever-tightening manpower situation, the National Hockey League swings into its fifth wartime season Saturday, October 30, it was disclosed last night with publication of the 1943-44 schedule.

Four of the league's six teams will see action opening night, with Boston Bruins at Montreal Canadiens and New York Rangers at Toronto Maple Leafs. The remaining two teams—Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks—will get into play the next night, when Rangers move on to Detroit and Maple Leafs to Chicago.

The 4½-month season ends Sunday, March 19, and, as in the 1942-43 season, each team plays 50 games.

Delayed Openers

The first home game for Rangers will be Saturday, Nov. 6, when they will be "at home" to the Black Hawks, but Boston fans will have to wait until Tuesday, Nov. 16 before seeing a contest on home ice. That night Bruins clash with Canadiens.

Once again Toronto gets a major quota of Saturday night games, with 20 of the 21 Saturdays on the schedule allotted to them. The exception is New Year's night, when they meet the Bruins at Boston while the Canadiens play at Chicago.

Canadiens gain a bit on the Saturday night games this season, with 12 scheduled for Montreal against 11 last year.

The first clash between the Leafs and Canadiens is scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 18, at Montreal. The last of the 10-game intercity contests will be Sunday, March 5, in Montreal.

This year will find considerable fresh talent in the N.H.L. ranks, with an increasing number of former stars in the armed services since the end of last season.

May Give Italy Full Status With Allies

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY, Sept. 26 - (Delayed). — (AP). — Despite the Badoglio government's obvious desire for recognition as a full - fledged British - American ally, it now seems possible that Italy may be accorded the status of a co-belligerent and that any concessions she may receive will be measured by the aid she delivers.

There have been indications during the past week that Premier Badoglio has been on the verge of declaring war upon Germany in an effort to line Italy up with the Allies.

This would be purely an independent action, however, and it is expected that Italy's new war role and her relations with the United Nations will be fixed shortly through negotiation.

Many difficulties lie in the way of granting Italy anything even approaching the United Nations status. One is the reluctance of the troops who have been fighting the Italians to accept them as Allies — a feeling doubtless shared by a large part of the public in Britain and the United States.

The attitude of London and of Washington, on the other hand, seems to be that since the Italians apparently wish sincerely to help in the fight against Germany it is only common sense to make use of them.

Coal To Italians

(A dispatch from William McGaffin, Associated Press War Correspondent in Cairo, reflected a similar viewpoint. McGaffin said that British forces which recently occupied Coo and Lero islands in the Dodecanese had accepted the Italians as "co-belligerent" on the grounds that the Allies' first task is to kill Germans and that to accomplish this they should use every weapon and means at their command.)

How much Italy can help to wage war on Germany is, of course, a question. Her capacity to help may be limited mainly to behind the lines assistance to the British and American armies, but having the Italians with us might simplify our occupation problems and aggravate those of the Germans, possibly relieving several Allied divisions from occupation tasks and tying up five or six German divisions.

The Badoglio government, meanwhile, retains civil administration in certain areas and is co-operating well with Allied military authorities, though the situation naturally is chaotic because of war time conditions.

R.A.F. Officers Examine Wrecked Plane, Italy

This radio photo shows English Royal Air Force officers examining the wrecks of German JU 52 transport aircraft on the edge of a Taranto airfield. Taranto was seized by the British 5th Corps about a week after they began their assault on Italy proper.

Truck Hits Cow Wrecks Vehicle

BANCROFT, Sept. 29—(ENS)—A straying cow lost her own life and was the cause of charges being brought against her owner, Philip Golden of Maynooth, because of a collision Monday night.

The accident occurred east of Maynooth when a truck loaded with gravel hit and killed the cow, causing $150 damage to the truck. Owned by Henry Lee of Chalk River, the truck was driven by Alfred Farrell, also of Chalk River. Golden is charged with letting cattle out on the highway.

Provincial Traffic Officer O. S. Palmateer of Bancroft is investigating.

tacked a train and a small motor transport convoy, the communique said, while other Allied airmen continued to patrol the battle area. No Allied planes were lost.

(A German communique said continuous rains prevented major operations in southern Italy, but added vaguely that "movements of our own took their anticipated course.")

On the Adriatic coast the British 8th Army, of which the Canadian 1st Division is a part, kept up its hot pursuit of retreating German forces after capturing the big enemy air base at Foggia.

Repairs to the base and its 13 air fields were being rushed in preparation for an all-out air assault on Nazi targets in southern Germany, Italy and the turbulent Balkans.

The last of Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's rearguards was barely ousted from the Coronato Woods and the grain fields of the hot Foggia plains before engineering units arrived to patch the bomb-pocked runways and rehabilitate the shops and hangars.

To the west the Anglo-American 5th Army was slowly battling its way toward the ravished city of Naples. Bitter hand-to-hand combat in mountains around Salerno marked the progress toward the road and rail junction town of Nocera, 19 miles southeast of the port.

Use Booby Traps

On the right flank the British and American troops were in Liono and Castelnuovo, 46 and 57 miles respectively from the city.

Vast fires still raged unchecked in Naples as the Germans rushed the task of destroying everything which might be of value to the Allies, indicating the intent to withdraw to the north. Principal damage was in the port area, but Americans aboard warships operating off the coast saw two fires just inside the city which maps indicated were in the vicinity of the city's electric plant.

From refugees streaming into Allied positions officers learned that the Nazis have embarked upon a systematic mining program in Naples and have filled the buildings still remaining intact with booby traps.

Military spokesmen agreed that the capture of Foggia with comparatively few casualties on the part of the 8th Army was the most important victory thus far in the Italian campaign.

Not only does the city contain the largest and best equipped air base in Southern Italy, but it is the junction point for railways which run south to the east coast cities of Bari and Brindisi and the inland city of Potenza, all of which now are in Allied hands. Another electric railway cuts across the peninsula to Naples.

Daniel De Luce, Associated Press war correspondent with the 8th Army, said the capture of Foggia came after a speedy 80-mile drive up from Bari.

Not a Shot Fired.

The city itself was taken without a shot on Monday afternoon, he said, and the British armored columns rolled into a dead city hammered into a heap of rubble by successive Allied raids that started with the invasion of Sicily.

The German withdrawal was so hurried, De Luce declared, that the Germans did not have time to undertake the extensive demolitions and land mining encountered in other parts of the boot.

The Coronato Woods yielded large stocks of airplane parts and bombs and in the city's railway yards the British troops found 60 locomotives and considerable rolling stock only slightly damaged.

From Italian naval officers came word that the Germans have seized the big Italian liner Rex, but they said the Conte Di Savoia had been scuttled by her Italian crew. The twin motorships Vulcania and Saturnia, converted into training ships, attempted to flee the Nazis. The Vulcania was captured, but the Saturnia reached a port under Allied control, the Italians said.

Rev. Henry Cousens Named Moderator

MONTREAL, Sept. 29 (CP)—Rev. Henry Cousens of Brockville, Ont., last night was elected moderator of the synod of Montreal and Ottawa of the Presbyterian Church in Canada at the opening session of the annual meeting.

He succeeds Rev. Dr. Orr Mulligan of Montreal. Other nominees for the post of moderator were Rev. G. S. Lloyd of Cornwall, Ont., and Rev. Robert Good of Ottawa.

Dr. Mulligan said in an address that the church must fight against "the modern tendency in society which sees the individual count for less and less."

The sessions end today when an address will be given by Rt. Rev. H. B. Ketchen, moderator of the general assembly of the church.

which lies 200 miles to the south. The strength of the Soviet drive toward Mogilev and Orsha forced the Nazis to abandon "one position after another," the bulletin said.

Vitebsk was the main objective of this determined Red Army advance, and the Russians said 300 villages were taken during the day's gains of six to 12 miles in the direction of the city. Fall of Vitebsk would imperil German lines extending northward to Leningrad, as well as opening the way for a drive on the Baltic states. The Russian command apparently expects a determined German stand on that fortress.

In Headlong Flight

On the extreme southern end of the front remnants of the German forces in the Caucasus apparently were in headlong flight from the Taman peninsula across the Kerch Strait to join the Nazi Crimean garrisons, whose position likewise was becoming more and more precarious as the Russians extended their advance along the northern coast of the Sea of Azov to the gates of Melitopol.

Airmen of the Black Sea fleet, Moscow said, were blasting the retreating Germans. Two freight boats and several landing barges were declared sunk, 100 trucks destroyed, 10 Nazi planes shot out of the air and a battalion of troops wiped out.

German commentators, broadcasting over the Berlin radio, frankly recognized the peril to the German lines. Red Army troops were filtering across the Dnieper at widely scattered points, they acknowledged. Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, discussing what appeared to be preparations for a new German retreat west of the Dnieper, said:

"German armies will be established on a new front which has outstanding advantages for the defenders."

Italians In Reich

AT THE SWISS-ITALIAN FRONTIER, Sept. 29—(CP). — Italian soldiers disarmed by the Germans have been deported to Germany where they have been added to labor ranks working for the Reich, it was disclosed yesterday. Official notification of this procedure, reported frequently since the Italian capitulation, was given by La Gazette di Venezia.

MARMORA
Charles Dunlay Dies Suddenly At Neighbours

MARMORA, Sept. 29.—(ENS). — Calling at the home of a neighbour, Lingham Martin, on his way home from the village, Charles Dunlay suddenly fell back on the chair on which he was sitting and died before any assistance could be given him. Dr. H. Crawford was summoned, and pronounced life extinct.

The late Mr. Dunlay, who had celebrated his 79th birthday the day before, was about the village as usual and was planning to enter Belleville hospital for treatment to his right eye. Mr. Martin was at work at the time he made his call but he died in the presence of his own daughter, Mrs. Norma Sheppard, of Belleville and Mrs. Martin and children. On May 20 of this year, Mr. Dunlay was bereaved of his wife and a son in the double drowning tragedy on Crowe river.

He was a native of Frankford but had lived many years in this district, working as a teamster and also being employed for a period at the Royal Hotel. He was well known in the district for his jovial nature and sense of humor.

Surviving are eleven children, Ernest, Belleville; Charles, Madoc; James, Point Anne; Edna, Belleville; Bernice, Quebec; Richard and Gerard, overseas; Doreen and Lillie somewhere in Ontario and Dorothy, Shannonville.

The funeral will be held on Thursday morning, with Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell officiating. Interment will take place in Marmora Protestant cemetery.

Lost His Shirt

NEW YORK, Sept. 29 — (CP). — Crooner Frank Sinatra lost his shirt in the United States Third War Loan drive. They auctioned off his clothing, via mail, in a radio program, and the shirt went to a girl who bought a $500 bond. Other bond purchases: Shoestrings $100, necktie $275, wrist watch $10,000, key chain $1,500, shorts $1,000. It developed that he didn't wear an undershirt or garters.

LONDON, Sept. 29—(CP). — William Mabane, parliamentary secretary to the British Food Ministry, who has just returned from Canada and the United States, said in an address the "impact of war and in particular of the manpower draft on American domestic economy is likely to make surpluses of essential foodstuffs harder to come by."

St. James' Gets New Teachers

A supper meeting sponsored by the Sunday School management of St. James' United Church was held Tuesday night with a good attendance.

During the business session over which Mr. E. R. Frost presided he thanked those who had carried on the work in his enforced absence. The appointment of new teachers was confirmed and Mr. E. Kitney put in charge of the supply teachers. Several vacancies on the staff were filled. Les McLaren in charge of the lantern, C. Porter of attendance awards and Stan Leggitt of sports.

The report of the orchestra committee was received and plans made to hold and open temperance session with slides on the subject. It was decided to hold the Sunday School Christmas concert on December 17, with a white gift service on the 19th. The next meeting will be held November 1, with a committee in charge chosen from the junior and intermediate teachers.

The thanks of the board was extended to the primary teachers who were in charge of arrangements for the successful supper.

Promotions

This meeting was a continuation from the splendid rally held on Sunday by the whole school when a fine program was carried out with Mrs. H. F. Doig in charge of the music. Mr. Frost the superintendent gave the call to worship when all joined in a brief period of devotion with scripture read by W. K. Meredith.

The pastor told the story "Give of Your Best" and Mrs. R. C. Searles, A.T.C.M. sang a beautiful solo. A promotion service with a long list of promotions from junior to intermediate and from primary to junior was outstanding feature with prayer of consecration and benediction by Rev. Mr. Craik.

BANCROFT
Music Teacher Shears Off Verandah Post

BANCROFT, Sept. 29 —(ENS)— Miss Grace Duquette, music teacher from Maynooth, had a freak accident with the automobile which she was driving in Bancroft Saturday afternoon.

Having turned the corner at the Bancroft hotel and proceeding along Bridge street she was confronted by an oncoming car which pulled to the curb of the hotel on the wrong side. Thinking that she might collide she also turned her vehicle in towards the hotel but instead of stepping on the brake her foot accidently struck the accelerator and the vehicle leaped forward completely demolishing one of the huge brick verandah posts along with its upper wooden post. The verandah had to be later supported with temporary joists. Miss Duquette's car was somewhat damaged by the impact.

Garage Owner Badly Burned

BANCROFT, Sept. 29—(ENS)— Max Fitzgerald of Combermere, 40 miles from here, was rushed to Pembroke Hospital Monday suffering from burns to his arms and legs received in a garage fire.

Mr. Fitzgerald, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Fitzgerald of Maynouth, operates a garage at Combermere and was starting the engine of his Delco plant when it backfired and ignited gas and oil on the floor of the garage. Before he could get his record books from the office, the whole building was enveloped in flames. It was razed to the ground in a few minutes.

Mr. Fitzgerald's condition was serious when he was admitted to the hospital, but on Tuesday he was reported improved. The burns extended from his elbows to his hands, and from his knees to his feet.

ONE FAMOUS NAME SUCCEEDS ANOTHER

THE SPECTACULAR though steady rise in the demand for O'Keefe's has long indicated a need for vastly enlarged production facilities.

Now — with the completion of arrangements whereby Canada Bud Breweries Limited has become a wholly-owned unit of Canadian Breweries Limited — it is at last possible to devote extra space and equipment to the sorely-needed production of additional O'Keefe's products.

Effective October 1st, 1943, therefore, the present Canada Bud Brewery becomes an O'Keefe's Brewery, under the direct supervision of the O'Keefe brewing staff.

Canada Bud consequently is withdrawn from the market. Canada Bud's employees will become a part of O'Keefe's or of another division of Canadian Breweries Limited.

Britain's Wartime Economy Slashed Living Standards

By JAMES A. ROY

(This is the sixth in the series of articles, being written for The Examiner, by Prof. James A. Roy, of Queen's University, Kingston, on wartime conditions in Great Britain.)

In Britain private living standards have been slashed. The Income Tax and Surtax are very heavy. In Britain a single person earning £500 per annual now pays £150 of it away in income tax: if he earns £1,000 he pays over £380. On unearned income the tax is even higher. A married couple with two children and an unearned income of £100,000 have £5,830 left after taxation—94 per cent of their income gone.

Indirect taxation is also most stringent. Twenty cigarets now cost 2s in Britain; three-quarters of the price goes to the Exchequer in duty. A pint of ale of reduced strength costs 1s. The duty on a pound of tea, the staple drink of English working families costing 2s 6d, is 6d.

There is now no white bread in Britain, no bananas and no lemons. I have already explained about oranges for the children. In Glasgow a few travelling barrows displayed piles of hard-looking little apples for sale and the hawkers touted them as "Delicious eating apples." But one would need to have the digestion of an ostrich to tackle one of them. In London the street fruit situation is better. There are numerous barrows with all sorts of nice looking fruit—pears, grapes, peaches, apples, plums—principally plums. These fruits are controlled in price and have enormous sales. The chief drawback about buying fruit at a barrow is there is no paper to carry it away in. The country is saving a great volume of shipping space and inland transport by using milk and eggs in their dehydrated form.

Not only is no petrol allowed the ordinary man who cannot show urgent necessity for using his car, but the manufacture of private cars has stopped altogether, and the Government is requisitioning tires of laid-up cars for rubber reclamation.

One hears a great deal of talk here about "utility furniture"; specimens of this work are displayed in the furniture stores. Only standardized utility furniture may now be made. This economical furniture conforms to specified descriptions and measurements and as only three per cent of Britain's timber supply is now available for civilian and domestic consumption, there is only enough of it to supply urgent needs. Purchasing is by licence and priority is given to persons who have been bombed out, or who are setting up house for the first time.

I have touched on the question of clothes already. I find they are strictly rationed and are largely cut to standard patterns. Linen sheets are no longer made and the manufacture of quilts, bedspreads and tablecloths is forbidden. As a result, at auction sales sheets, blankets, etc. fetch exhorbitant prices.

As the quantity of paper available in Britain is about one-fifth the pre-war supply, newspapers have been cut accordingly. Evening papers are difficult to get and have shrunk in size. People stand in queues in the hope of getting a paper and many news vendors refuse to sell their papers except to regular customers. It is impossible to get a new subscription to such papers as The Times; even old subcribers whose subscription had lapsed for a year or so, have no chance of renewing it. It is only if an old subscriber dies or moves from the district or gives up his subscription that anyone has a chance of getting a paper at all. As only a limited number of th more popular papers are allotted to the bookstalls these are sold out in no time. Thanks to a casual remark of mine, the editor of The Observer put me down for a year's subscription for The Observer. Since the war began Britain has salvaged well over a million tons of waste paper.

Over and above all taxes and restrictions, the British are voluntarily saving or giving nearly every penny they can.

The British have made mistakes in the past; there have been muddles. But they are going all out to win. "Muddling through" like "safety first" is a thoroughly discredited slogan. There are, of course, shirkers in Britain, but these Quislings against the national war effort are rare. The people don't speak about their invincible will to victory. This is taken for granted. They just get on with the job. They are now in their fourth year of war with conscription, blackout, air raids, fire-watching, Home Guard national service, long hours, few holidays, nerve strain, food rationing, clothes rationing, restricted travel, no private petrol, taxes, war savings, salvage, austerity, the rigor of the game. War is a serious business in Britain. But both Scots and English retain their sense of humor. Even Bernard Shaw, whom I just missed meeting again is still able to make a Shavianism. This is one he cracked two days ago against the Scots:

James Bone asked Shaw why, unlike Shakespeare he had never immortalized a Scot in his work.

(Both he and his Scots interloctur had quite forgotten Dr. Rankins, the Scots missionary in Heatherbreak House, which I saw again this afternoon). Shaw stroked his beard for a few moments and then said: "Because the Irish have so many admirable qualities, and yet nobody like them, while the Scots have so many qualities that are neither admirable nor lovable and yet everybody loves them!" Shaw may be old but he has not lost his sardonic wit.

The people over here realize that they can never let up until this war is absolutely won. No more mistakes like the last time. They know that they have done a great deal but that it is still nothing like enough. They have suffered a great deal but nothing comparable to the agonies of their continental allies under the German terror. Even the bombed-out British realize that by comparison their trials have been light. They feel that the only way to put themselves right in their own eyes is to work selflessly as never before, to the achievement of total victory.

When the enemy was on top the British "took it" and did not squeal. Now he is handing it back to the enemy in no mean way—Italy lost to the Axis, Hitler squealing and rampaging among his bewildered generals and admirals and field marshals and Gestapo murderers and torturers. "That bloke's getting wots been comin' to him for a long time, and I 'ope 'e don't 'arf cop it," a bus conductor said to me yesterday. Let Hitler take it! Who cares?

Committed For Trial On 3 More Charges

Earl Barrie, 42, Rubidge street, who was committed for trial Tuesday on a charge of having indecently assaulted a young boy was this morning committed on three other similar charges.

Barrie who was defended by John A. Bradshaw elected trial by a higher court and he will be tried on all four counts before Judge S. L. Smoke in the county judge's criminal court on Thursday afternoon.

In each case this morning Barrie was committed by consent after one crown witness had been heard. The evidence was to the effect that the alleged offences had taken place during automobile rides in the country in Barrie's car.

Flower Expert Speaks Here; Prizes Awarded

Presentation of awards in the competitions of the Peterborough Horticultural Society was made on Tuesday night in the Sunday School at Murray Street Baptist Church, and an illustrated lecture on lilies and roses was given members of the society by John F. Clark of Toronto, of the Department of Horticulture and Agriculture.

A special honor was done S. T. Harris, 207 Perry Street, who received a diploma awarded by the Ontario Horticultural Society for outstanding service rendered the local organization in the course of 20 years' membership. Mr. Harris has held the post of president in past years, has for three years been a judge of rural schools competition, and recently has been associated with the beautification projects in the Wartime Housing areas.

For the second year in succession the G. K. Fraser trophy for the maintenance and improvement of grounds at rural schools was won by Stanley Cowling of Lakehurst, teacher of Harvey No. 3, and it was announced that Mr. Cowling had as well been second in the whole province of Ontario in his particular class, missing out on the first award by only a very small margin.

Wartime Homes.

Prefacing his lecture on the art of growing and caring for the different varieties of lilies and roses, Mr. Clark took the occasion to state that he was highly gratified at the excellent work being accomplished in the Wartime Housing areas in the way of improving and beautifying grounds. "This work of beautification will have its influence, will spread and make your city itself more beautiful," he said.

He commented also on the very worthwhile endeavor represented by the improvement work undertaken by rural schools, comparing the wholesome, pleasant appearance of schools today with the contrasting barrenness and untidiness that prevailed in former days.

Enlarging on the merits of gardening as a source of personal satisfaction, the lecturer said: "It is a healthy hobby that promotes restfulness and prolongs life, and it has the faculty of cementing friendships." It had other qualities too, he added, mentioning that on the formation of a society in Dundas juvenile delinquency disappeared; and that the governor of one of the largest prisons in Ontario had informed him that in 40 years he had never had a prisoner who had ever had a garden.

In addition to the awards of Mr. Harris and Mr. Cowling, prizes were won as follows:

Awards.

Class A—For the beest kept lawn and garden where professonal help is employed: Edward Riley, 624 Homewood avenue. Class B—For the best amateur lawn, garden and floral display (lot 40 feet and over)—Mrs. E. H. Crofts, 377 Mark street. Class C—For the best amateur lot under 40 feet—B. Lucas, 294 Reid street.

Class D—For the best rock garden: 1st George Benton, 782 Water street; 2nd J. A. Smith, 150 Benson; 3rd Ray Stabler, 541 Bethune.

Wartime Specials—No. 1—For the best floral bed: George Duncan, 90 Auburn. Wartime Specials, No. 2—For the best workingman's vegetable and flower garden: 1st, Mrs. Elmer Atchison, 232 Mark street, a new member of the society who has entered competition for the first time this year; 2nd, Harry Butler, 595 Chamberlain.

Class F— Scenic drive competition: Walter Rye, Monaghan Road. Juvenile Trophy for the outstanding display at the junior show: Marie Harris, King Edward school, a daughter of Mr. S. T. Harris. The Kiwanis trophy awarded the school having the most points in the unior show held on Sept. 11 was won by the Queen Alexandra school.

In the absence of the Horticultural Society's president, Mrs. G. K. Fraser, vice-president, occupied the chair.

HER FACE WAS RED.

Four girls from the Examiner were walking home from a house party shortly after eleven o'clock on Tuesday evening, when they saw a policeman trying the doors at Peck, Kerr and McElderry's office on Water street. One girl thinking she knew the officer said jokingly, "Stick im up officer." As the surprised man turned she saw to her astonishment it was another policeman, and her face reddened as she blurted out an explanation, but the only reaction of the man in blue was to break out laughing. A barrage of kidding during the day, has brought more blushes.

Canadian Legion Totals $1,546 For War Victims

Take a look at the headlines of this column for a second time, and then give a second thought to what it all means when one couples the name of the boys of the old brigade with the splendid help they have been giving to help the National cause, by working to raise such a nice sum of money to help the sufferers from air raids over Britain through the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund.

This means steady consistent work on the part of those members of the Peterborough Branch No. 52 of the Canadian Legion who week after week do the work at the Wednesday night Bingos, from which the fund has received a portion of the net proceeds ever since it first began to operate, in fulfilment of a pledge given by their president G. Gimblett at that time.

This donation to-day amounts to the fine sum of $72.79 and just how important a part it plays in the activities of the fund is best told when one adds that through it, the fund is now within $25.00 of completing another £500, which it is hoped can be sent this Friday to cheer those in need in Britain, and continue that steady flow of assistance which has gone to them from this city and district for the better part of almost three years.

Surpassed only by two other sources of income for the fund, both of which emanate from a very large group of people, the boys of the Canadian Legion stand in third place with their total of $1,546.63 in the total from any one activity to give help to the fund, an achievement of which they should be justifiably proud of.

From Joel and Peter Moldaver, young sons of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Moldaver comes a donation of $2.00 given "In memory of their grandfather, Philip Black" on the occasion of the Jewish New Year which commences this Wednesday night. These laddies have figured in a similar contribution in previous years, and undoubtedly from this they will learn much that will be of inestimable benefit to them in later life, and the memory of this act will give them many pleasant memories.

Young People Help

Five young children, Ronny Willas, Harold and Ruth Bulmer, Maureen Fletcher and Beverly Brooks, ranging in years from 2 to 9 years of age, held a small bazzaar at the corner of Aylmer and Dalhousie streets last Saturday, from which they raised $1.07 credited in their name today, and a permit has been issued to them to hold another next Saturday at the corner of Sherbrooke and Aylmer street at their own request, which shows just how much they enjoyed doing this work to help others, in which unknowingly they are doing something to build a character which should be all the richer for this experience.

Bingo This Thursday

The Ladies' South-end Conservative Association are holding a Bingo and draw to give aid to the fund this Thursday, September 30, in the Orange Hall on Brock street, commencing at 8 p.m. sharp. In addition to this, they are selling tickets for a draw on a four-piece hand-made crocheted set for a dining room table which would be an acquisition to the finest of homes. Tickets are now on sale for this, and they will be available at this social event as well, when the draw will be made.

VETERAN DIES.

CALGARY, Sept. 29.—(CP).—One of the original members of the Northwest Mounted Police, Robert McCutcheon, 90, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Ransom, here yesterday. Born in Cornwall, Ont., he joined the N.W.M.P. in 1874 and was the first white man to shake hands with the famous Indian warrior, Sitting Bull, who had crossed into Canada following the Custer massacre in 1878.

No Threshing On 80 P.C. Russell Farms

Milk production is above the average for this time of the year in Glengarry-Stormont counties as reported in the weekly review of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Durham says pastures have been good all season, and cattle will go into the stables in better than average condition, and Prince Edward adds a similar note that pastures are good.

Farmers across the province have all reached the end of September on just about even terms of industry and accomplishment. Most of the corn is cut and packed into the silos; the buckwheat crop is in stook, and much of it has been threshed with satisfactory returns; fall wheat acreage is larger than last year and "is making satisfactory growth" as Ed. Summers observes from Bowmanville.

Good Turnips

Frank Paterson mentions some excellent fields of turnips in Peterborough, and in Northumberland the corn and tomato crops have so far escaped frost. The orchardists are busy picking apples this week, "potato digging is still under way." Sales of sows is continuing above average in Frontenac.

Dairy farmers in Leeds were pleased by the recently announced subsidy on fluid milk especially those delivering to the cheese factories which will likely try to extend their season.

Prescott and Russell combine in a rather blue note. "Approximately 80 per cent of farmers will not thresh at all. Farmers are still unloading hogs due to shortage of home grain feed." This is a matter of cause and effect.

Renfrew says the grain crop was better than expected, but is considerably discolored.

A glance at Western Ontario finds the rural picture much the same as in the centre and east. In Simcoe, "buckwheat, corn and potato harvest is the main farm activity at present."

Carriers Seek Blood Donors

The Examiner's carrier boys, who one year ago secured 250 donors, to the Red Cross Blood Donors Clinic, are planning to repeat their canvass of the city this year. This is "National Newsboy Week" in America and the Examiner's boys are anxious to play some part in marking this event so this evening they are leaving in the homes of every reader a card asking for blood donors. They will call again on Friday and pick up all cards whether signed or not.

The demand for blood donors is just as great today as it was a year ago, in fact it has increased in this area for in recent months the area which serves the Peterborough Clinic has been considerably curtailed.

The carriers in Lakefield, Warsaw and Keene will also be distributing cards seeking blood donors from those villages.

Bombs Germany

Warrant Officer Donald Goodfellow of the R.C.A.F., was one of a group of Canadian fliers who took part in a large raid over Germany recently. He enlisted in August, 1941, and received his training as an observer at Montreal, Victoriaville, Ancienne Lorette, Mont Joli, and Rivers, Man. In November, 1942, WO. Goodfellow went overseas. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Goodfellow, Codrington.

7-Year-Old Youngster Sets New Record Takes Parked Truck, Drives It A Mile

There has been a lot heard and said about juvenile delinquency these days but Peterborough police believe that a new record was set this morning when a seven-year-old boy stole a truck and drove it a mile before stalling the machine.

The vehicle belonged to Archibald and Richmond, plumbers, and had been left outside a Murray Street house this morning. The little lad who lives in the Park street division of Wartime Housing was on his way to school when he noticed the parked truck and also noticed that the key was in the ignition.

He climbed in, started the machine, drove into the yard of St. Peter's School, turned the truck around there and then travelled west to Monaghan Road and north to Jackson Park. When he stopped the vehicle there with the key he couldn't get it started again. Meanwhile the caretaker of the park had telephoned the police.

When the officers arrived the seven-year-old took to his heels and there was a lively chase through the park before he was caught.

"My father showed me how to start a car," the little lad told the police when asked how he had known how to get the truck going and drive it.

War—25 Years Ago

SEPT. 29, 1918—The Canadians fought their way into the outskirts of Cambrai during an Allied advance between St. Quentin and Cambrai outflanking the German positions. Ten thousand Turks surrendered at Zara station, Palestine. Bulgaria surrendered unconditionally.

Elusive Males To Pay Poll Tax Now

Employers will be asked for further co-operation in the extraction of poll tax from some of the elusive lads whose aversion to that civic obligation seems to be balanced by the city hall determination to corral them before they get lost in more or less calculated shuffle.

That was the substance of a motion at the meeting of the legal committee of the council Tuesday afternoon. When the assessment department in its annual survey obtains information about men who are liable for poll tax, they make a list of them for the benefit of the tax collector, S. A. Couper.

If some of the boys ignore these notices they may be haled to court or the money may be collected from their wages, with the assistance of employers.

Industries Help

The city officials have generally found the industrial heads willing to lend a round up hand. Probably the intervention is distasteful to them, but on the other hand as citizens and taxpayers they share in the idea that the poll tax fraternity should at least contribute $5 for the benefit to them of all the municipal services which they use while living and working here.

However, it happens in some cases that after the assessors have passed by, some of the men on the poll tax list move from one factory to another, and the city hall loses trace of them and the worst of all the city treasury does not get the money. The legal committee is going to be asked for their help in following up such transfers.

Peterboro Sends 145 Farmers To Work In West

The campaign to find sufficient farm help in Eastern Canada to ensure the harvesting of grain crops in the Western provinces has met with definite success, and reports are to the effect that farmers in the great wheat belts are pleased and satisfied with the assistance which has been provided them.

This was revealed today at local offices of National Selective Service, which, in conjuction with the local representative of the Department of Agriculture, has had the responsibility of choosing and sending the men from this area who would go out West.

W. H. L. Mellis, local Selective Service Officer, said that a total of 145 farmers have gone from districts which comprise the local board and that the list is now complete. He revealed that nearly all, 130, were sent to Saskatchewan, the remainder going to Manitoba. The system provided for transportation to central distributing points in the provinces by rail from the East, and then from these central points allocation of the farm help to nearby districts where their assistance was most urgently required. In the case of the Peterborough office, Mr. Mellis said, 65 farmers had travelled to Regina, 38 to Assiniboine and 36 to Estevan.

Friendship Cemented

From the whole province of Ontario, it was added, 595 farmers have gone out to the West and are now helping in the harvesting of crops.

Very favorable comments have been received by National Selective Service from Eastern farmers who enjoyed the benefits of Western help in the earlier harvesting of their crops, the labor officer stated. In numerous cases close ties of friendship had been formed during the period of working at the same important job together on the same farm, and it was hoped that a similar reaction would be the experience in the present job.

Farm help from the East will remain in the Western provinces until the end of October, travelling home by rail during the period from Nov. 1 to Nov. 16.

CAMPBELLFORD

Entries Lower At Opening Of Seymour Fair

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 29 (ENS) —The Seymour Agriculture Society's fifth wartime fair opened here on Tuesday, as exhibitors began to place their displays in the various buildings on the grounds, and preliminary estimates were that exhibits, in most classes, with the exception of horses and cattle, would again be lowered.

As had been indicated in the two preceding years since rationing began to take its toll on many annual displays of domestic cookery, jams and jellies, evidence on the opening day pointed strongly to a further diminished representation in these classes. Officials were confident, that providing weather conditions were favorable, they could put the fair across with an even higher attendance than in 1942.

Their chief drawing card was the record display of art work and project work by both rural and urban school pupils, together with a special exhibit from the domestic science and manual training departments at the local high school. This latter display monopolized the space which once had been filled with cooking displays. The exhibition showed clearly that pupils at the local high school were not receiving merely an academic education but were learning as well to use their hands as tools. The second item destined to attract attention was the "win the war section" in which countless items made both by individuals and local organizations such as the Red Cross, I.O.D.E. and Institutes are shown. These were the quilts, helmets, socks, turtle neck sweaters, ditty bags, mitts and other such requisites as are needed by the armed forces.

Officials were also looking forward to one of the biggest horse racing events ever staged locally. Convinced a year ago that the surest way of having good races was to offer big prize money. The society boosted its usual prizes for this by an even $200 to make $450 as the total pay-off to horse owners.

Five Boys Win Prizes At Belleville Fair

COBOURG, Sept. 29 (ENS) — Northumberland County boys took the first five prizes in the club members livestock judging competition at Belleville Fair. There were 38 competitors. The first five winners were Sam Davidson, Cobourg; Ross McMaster of Wooler; William Moore, Cobourg; William Curle, Campbellford and Morely Bright, Campbellford.

Others winning prizes were Earl Nelson and Glen Fairman of Campbellford; Alfred Gooding of Hilton; Eugene Bright, Billy Parr and Alex Hume, all of Campbellford. All these boys received training in calf and foal clubs under the direction of the agricutural representative, R. C. Banbury.

In the girls' work, a system of grouping according to proficiency was used. Among the homemakers who completed three projects, attained 80% and attended 75% of the meetings, were Enid Hay, Mrs. Fred Thompson and Thelma Wallace of Campbellford, and Mrs. S. VanHorne of Wooler. In the second group, who attained 70% and completed two projects and attended 60% of the meetings were Dorothy Eagleson of Campbellford, Mae Telford and Kathleen McIntosh of Vernonville. The third prize group, who attained 60% and for completing one homemaking club and attending 60% of the meetings, included Muriel Todd and Marjory Wallace of Campbellford; Ruth Mann, Ruth Haynes and Mildren Welton of Castleton; Helen Whitney and Vera Lawson of Wooler. CAMPBELLFORD

Principal Finds High School Attendance Up

CAMPBELLFORD Sept. 29. — (ENS).— One surprise awaited members of the local Board of Education when they gathered for their September meeting on Monday evening. It was the announcement by High School Principal E. H. Greig that attendance for the current term was above the 1942-43 period.

Mr. Greig told members the total enrolment to date was 145 pupils with prospects of several more coming in before the term had advanced much further. Of the present enrolment, 75 are listed as local residents and the remainder are classified as county pupils. Mr. Greig made the customary requisition for money to purchase books for the school library and on motion the usual grant of $100 for this purpose was made.

He suggested that a second metal lathe for use in the manual training room would be an advantage since work on this machine was slow according to Mr. E. Darling, who is in charge of the department. The Board was of the opinion that it was a poor time to purchase a lathe of this type and doubted if one would be obtainable at all. However, on motion Chairman R. J. Locke was authorized to make enquiries as to the possibilities of procuring such a lathe.

New Uniforms.

For the benefit of members Principal Greig explained the new setup with regard to cadet training which he said had been "entirely changed." One new regulation was that the new type of uniform, tunic, wedge cap, long trousers, anklets, boots, shirt and tie, could now be purchased for both junior and senior cadets instead of only those in the senior category as announced a year ago. This meant the Board could now add a dozen uniforms to the fifty already ordered.

A sample of the new uniforms was displayed to members who were told that old tunics now discarded by the boys of the corps would be worn by girl cadets of the school in combination with blue skirts and khaki caps when they appeared on a dress parade with boys of the school in the near future. Mr. Greig outlined the new course of training explaining the various elements of instruction and the system of awarding chevrons for merit as an incentive.

Speaking of what he termed had been an 'ideal cadet cafp' at Wellington last summer, where senior cadets spent fourteen days, Mr. Greig said he could heartily recommend attendance at such a camp to the parents of any youth. He also outlined some of the new items of equipment which were to be made available for cadet training such as respirators, anti-gas equipment, steel helmets, cooey guns, etc.

Correspondence read by the secretary included an application for the position of music teacher on the public school staff from Mrs. Charles Howey. The Board decided that since music was not obligatory on the curriculum they would not employ such a teacher.

Baseball Draws Larger Crowds

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 29—(AP)—all clubs of the American Association played to 1,350,059 persons this year, more than one-third of them men and women of the armed forces.

Attendance for the 1943 season was 8.2 per cent above last year, Association President George M. Trautman announced today, making the loop one of the few to register an increase.

Of the total attendance, 967,746 were paid adult admissions. The majority of the remainder were service men and women, guests of the clubs.

The players' pool, composed of one-cent deductions from each adult paid admission, netted the winners and runners-up of the regular season and the play-offs a total of $9,-77.

Halifax has made a similar claim.

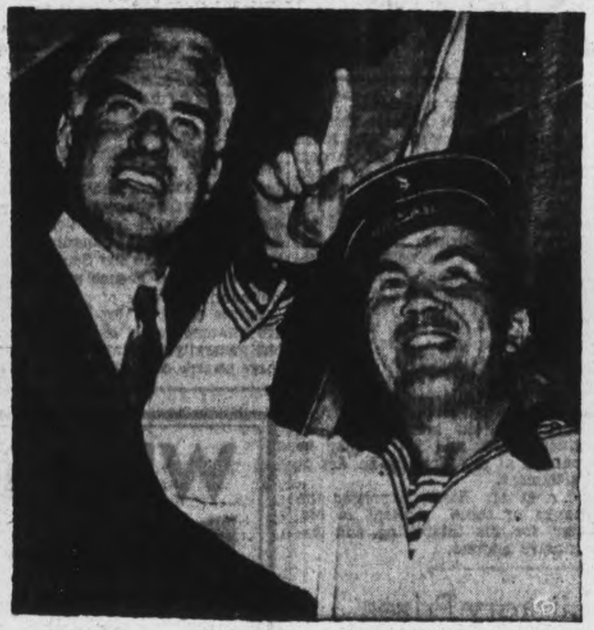
New U.S. Undersecretary Of State



This picture, made recently, takes on new value with the news that Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., former U.S. lend lease administrator, had been appointed new U.S. undersecretary of state to succeed Sumner Welles, who resigned. Stettinius is pictured with a Russian marine on a Soviet freighter. The marine is pointing to military supplies being hoisted aboard at a U.S. port. It was made during a recent visit by Stettinius during a tour of lend lease operations. Observers say the appointment of Stettinius is a move to prepare American diplomacy for forthcoming meetings with Russia and Britain.

Mess Room Chatter

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WITH THE R. C. A. F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Sept. 29—(CP). — Flight Leader in a Mitchell Bomber squadron is Flt. Lt. J. R. MacDonald, 25-year-old pilot of 10,532 128th Ave., Edmonton. Mac used to be a professional golfer with the Highland Golf Club and has completed more than 15 operational sorties against airfields and rail targets in France.

Sometimes you can see his outfit roaring out from their English base in the early morning, before breakfast, headed for occupational territory. In his formation are PO. Fred Carmichael, 31-year-old navigator of 189 Worthington Crescent, Sudbury, Ont., PO. J. C. Day 33-year-old navigator from Galt, Ont., and Flt. Sgt. T. F. Rothery, 24-year-old navigator of 1612 8th Avenue, Vancouver.

"That's Smithy," said Blair. "What's he doing over here?" commented Ramsden.

A telephone call to Smith brought forth: "I thought you guys were in Africa." A reunion was arranged for the next week-end.

Smith, a Newfoundlander who used to work on Ottawa and Calgary newspapers, and Blair and Ramsden trained together as air gunners. They became separated in 1940 in England and Smith returned to Canada, and a job with army public relations, after leaving the airforce on health grounds. He came overseas again last spring.

In the meantime Blair and Ramsden, with a dozen or so operational flights from England under their belts — and Blair with a German night fighter to his credit —moved to Egypt to help bomb the Germans and Italians out of Africa.

They returned to Britain early in the year and at present are gunnery instructors at a training centre.

One R. A. F. medium bomber squadron now based in Sicily and busy hammering Italian targets includes a good smattering of Canadians.

Among them are PO. James McWilliam of 919 Summerset Avenue, Winnipeg, formerly of Toronto; FO. Peter Macdonnell of 87 Forest Hill Road, Toronto; PO. Ronald Stringer of Davyroyd Willows, Sask.; Sgt. Don Ashby of Lethbridge, Alta.; A. J. C. Mower of 185 Main street, Port Dalhousie, Ont.; Flt. Sgt. Jack Riddell of 334 Bay street, Port Arthur, Ont.; and Sgt. William Nelson of South Windermere Avenue, Port Arthur. All are veterans of the African campaign.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29 — (AP). —Publicity item from the local racing associations says that Saturday's "Back the Attack" day at Belmont Park will feature a $10,000 special for "the speediest older horses not in training" . . . but all typographical errors aside, this is once when the hoss race customers really will get their money's worth (providing they don't lose too many bets) . . . They'll get the Futurity and the Jockey Club Gold Cup which cost the track $25,000 apiece in purse money, a $10,000 race for juveniles like Bee Mac and Alorter that Argen's eligible for the Futurity and the race mentioned above — and war bonds instead of torn - up mutuel tickets for souvenirs.

All A Loan

When Cpl. Martin Furgol of Fort Hancock, N. J., former Miami Beach golf pro, won the greater New York army and navy tournament at Bethpage Park, L. I., last week, he wore golf shoes borrowed from Bill Forbes, Fort Hancock Y.M.C.A. physical director, played with clubs belonging to Maj. Robert F. Spottswood, post special service officer, and with a 1941 ball (unused) borrowed from Frank Robbins of the Fort Hamilton Y.M.C.A. He hitch-hiked from Fort Hancock to New York and lugged his clubs around the course himself while he shot a nifty 74.

You Pick 'Em

(Asking the big question of the "if" men of the World Series pitching staffs).

Yankees: Charley Wensloff, a rookie who doesn't act like one; may get a starting assignment over Bonham or Borowy; not likely to be upset by Cards' base running; makes a habit of pitching complete games. Marius Russo the Yanks' only southpaw threat; had a sore arm most of the season but you'd never know it now; allowed six hits in his last two starts.

Cardinals: Alpha Brazle: Alpha's a good bet—if his draft board doesn't declare it off; received his summons last week but hopes to get a crack at the Yanks before donning uniform; came up from Sacramento in July and has won seven games since then. Ernie White: recovered from a sore arm just in time for last year's series and blanked the Yanks with six hits; may repeat, for his frail flipper seems to be about ready for action.

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press

Mel Harder, Indians: Only Cleveland pitcher to win at Yankee Stadium this year, repeated stunt by halting American League champs, 11 to 3.

Tommy Holmes, Braves and Max Lanier, Cards: Former singled with bases filled to give mates 6-to-5 decision over Cards in 13 inning opener; latter scattered six hits in 7 to 1 nightcap triumph.

Ray Starr and Joe Beggs, Reds: Pair unfurled two good pitching jobs as club ran victory to nine straight and clinched second place.

Elbie Fletcher, Pirates: Pounded out three hits, two of them doubles, in five trips to plate as Bucs took twin bill from Dodgers.

Ed Sauer and Ival Goodman, Cubs: Sauer, rookie outfielder, singled with bases loaded in tenth for 3 to 2 victory over Giants and Goodman got similar blow in ninth with bases again jammed for 2 to 1 triump in second.

George Woods, Red Sox: Red Sox pitching recruit hurled and batted club to 6 to 1 verdict over Detroit, driving in three runs, scoring another and cracking three hits.

Here and There in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Two Winnipeg teams, United Services and R.C.A.F. Bombers, clash tonight for the second scheduled fixture of the Western Canada Football Conference and the United Services, tutored by Bert Warwick, understudy to Reg Threlfall of the Blue Bombers in recent years, is being touted as the surprise grid team in Dominion circles for 1943.

Starring in the backfield for the services are two former American college stars, Lt. Lee Sherman, previously centre half with Union College of Schnectady, N.Y., and Cpl. Paul Gates, left half of Northwest Missouri Teachers College. Both are stationed in Winnipeg with the United States Army. Prominent on the line is LS. Moe Smovitch who played snap for the Blue Bombers for three seasons and Bill Ceretti who is making a comeback to the gridiron after a two-year layoff.

Coach Threlfall of the Bombers said it was doubtful if the R.C.A.F. team would have the services of Cpl. Don Durno, last year with Toronto Hurricanes, Dominion champions, because of injuries sustained in the game at Regina last Saturday.

Infield Cripples

The St. Louis Browns will have an "all cripples infield" next season, if there is baseball. The lineup of rejects was completed last night with word that Second Baseman Don Gutteridge had been refused for Army service because of a bad knee. Previously First Baseman George McQuinn, Shortstop Vernon Stephens and Third Baseman Ellis Clary had been turned down for physical defects.

Thanks to God.

The rector, Rev. W. J. Lennox, delivered the evening address. The privilege of thanking God for His faithfulness, the value of common things in everyday life, and the need for a church live to its present and post war responsibilities, were the main points developed in Mr. Lennox's address.

LET'S ALL DO MORE TO WIN THE WAR

BEFORE THE WAR: George didn't care how much coal he used or wasted—there was plenty of it. He never sifted ashes—always kept his home like a hot-house.

TODAY: Coal is precious. It is needed to keep our war industries working at top speed. George is helping by using less coal at home.

THE MORE WE'RE IN IT THE QUICKER WE'LL WIN IT!

It is our duty to save coal. There are several ways we can do it. Clean stove pipes and furnaces thoroughly—weather-strip windows and doors—sift ashes carefully—keep the house cooler—don't neglect the fire, lighting and relighting wastes coal. Sacrifice a little comfort—our boys overseas are sacrificing plenty. Every shovelful of coal we save makes it hotter for Hitler!

CWL Diocesan Covention Held At Lyceum Hall

The Diocesan Convention of the Catholic Women's League was held Tuesday afternoon at the Lyceum Hall, with the president, Mrs. F. J. Lynch in the chair, and Mrs. J. F. McGarry, of Kitchener, national president, as guest speaker.

Mrs. McGarry said that the league faced greater problems today, than had ever been faced by it before. "In other times," she said, "certain conditions were stable. Men went to work in the field and the factory, and the women's place was in the home." She said that now that young women and girls had to go and take men's jobs in factories, women were faced with problems of preserving the ideal of the Christian family, both for the girls, now doing men's work, who would be the mothers of tomorrow's children, and for the men returning from the war and expecting to find the home life they had left behind.

"The wounds of war," said the speaker, "will not merely be those of shattered bodies. There will be the wounds that penetrate far into the moral fibre, and we must begin tc build a bulwark against those wounds, not in the peace that is to come, but now."

Bishop Urges Study

His Excellency Bishop MacDonald was present at the afternoon session, and after expressing his pleasure at Mrs. McGarry's address, he went on to say that he had every confidence in the sanity, and judgment of the ordinary people of Canada, and his fear was that they might show a tendency to leave the solving of the problems to a few. He urged the women to know and study post-war problems, saying that there were certain things that caused wars, and want and disruptions, and that by the study of these causes in the past the solution might be found for them in the future.

The convention opened in the morning with the celebration of Mass at St. Peter's Cathedral by His Excellency, Bishop MacDonald, who also preached the sermon. In his address, the Bishop said that the C.W.L. was good for church and state. He stressed the importance of family life, saying that the good of the family was the restoration of the world, and praised the work of the C.W.L. in helping the needy, in the encouragement of good literature, and in war servicees. The Bishop was assisted during the service by Father Malane and Father Wolft.

Mrs. Peter Heenan, convener of the C.W.L. magazine, Canadian League, on the National Council, gave a short talk urging the members to subscribe to the magazine. Eminently satisfactory reports on the year's work of the various subdivisions were read by their representatives at the convention. The following sub-divisions were represented, Bowmanville, Campbellford, Cobourg, Douro, Downeyville, Grafton, Hastings, Immaculate Conception, Kinmount, Kirkfield, Lakefield, Lindsay, Norwood, Parry Sound, Sacred Heart, St. Peter's and Trout Creek.

Committee Reports

Excellent reports on the work of the diocesan committees, magazine, Girl Guides, publicity, lay retreats citizenship and infamous literature and letter was read by Mrs. Lynch from Fr. George E. Hooper, in North Africa, requesting that, if it were possible a supply of medals, books and rosaries, should be sent to him, as they were unobtainable there and his supplies were getting low. Members were told to send contributions to Mrs. E. V. Sullivan, National War Service Convener, C.W.L., 21 Manawagonish Road, Fairville, New Brunswick. Miss Kennedy, convener of education, presented essay prizes to Theresa Lucas of Emily, and Mary Farley of Sacred Heart School. Resolution were passed concerning the closing of women's beverage rooms, a curfew to keep small children off the streets at night, and the control of comic strips and infamous literature.

Mrs. Lynch gave an interesting report on the war work of the diocese: Money for war work has been obtained from tag days, teas, social gatherings, entertainment in private homes, picnic, lawn socials. Cigarettes, Christmas boxes and ditty bags have been sent to men in the forces. Masses have been offered for men in uniform, and about 800 communion breakfasts have been served by C.W.L. members. Help has been given in canteens and soldiers in the military hospitals have been visited. Rosaries and prayer-books, and Catholic and secular magazines have been sent to men overseas and $150 was sent to the overseas C.W.L. and $150 to the adopted Chaplain, Fr. McCarney. C.W.L. women have helped in Red Cross work at the sewing room. Many articles are made for the soldiers. Five members taught home nursing each week in the normal, high and secondary schools.

At noon the delegates attended luncheon at the Empress Hotel, where a toast was proposed to Monsignor O'Sullivan by Mrs. T. Begley, who congratulated him on his recent appointment to the high office of Vicar-General of the diocese of Peterborough.

Mrs. Burke, convener of the nominations committee, conducted the election of officers and the following is the slate for the coming year: President, Mrs. F. J. Lynch; vice presidents, Mrs. T. P. Fox, Miss M. R. Baker, Mrs. G. Torpey; recording secretary, Miss L. Hurley; corresponding secretary, Miss L. Hurley; treasurer, Mrs. T. J. Begley.

Price Control and Rationing News

The Women's Regional Advisory Committee, Consumer Branch, Central Ontario, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, answers questions put to this paper regarding price control and ration regulations.

Q — Last October my dentist charged $1.00 for extracting a tooth. This year his price is $1.50. Is a dentist allowed to increase his rates?

A — Charges for dental services do not come under Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulations.

Q — How can I arrange to get extra "D" coupons to buy corn syrup for my baby.

A — You should go to your local ration board office where you may exchange sugar coupons from the baby's ration book for "D" coupons. Each sugar coupon may be exchanged for two "D" coupons for babies under two years.

Q — Is a storekeeper allowed to let meat go without collecting coupons?

A — Definitely not! Black Market is not a place, but a transaction. Both the storekeeper and the customer are blacketeers when no coupons are surrendered for rationed commodities. They are both equally guilty. Such actions constitute sabotage of Canada's war effort. . .Thank you for giving us the name of a storekeeper whom you believe is doing this. We have turned the information over to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board investigation department for immediate attention. They will report their findings to you direct. This kind of dealing must be stopped.

Q — In June, 1942, I rented a blanket on a steamship for 25c. Yesterday on the same boat I was charged 50c. Is this price increase legal?

A — Rental of blankets on ships does not come under Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulations.

Q—Do I need to take my ration book to the hospital if I expect to be there less than two weeks? What coupons, if any, will be taken from my book for a little over one week?

A—Unless you expect to stay in the hospital for a continuous period of two weeks, you will not have to give your ration book to the hospital authorities. . .At the end of the second and of each succeeding two weeks, the management must detach the following ration coupons for each full two weeks of residence: one sugar coupon, one tea or coffee coupon, two butter coupons, four meat coupons and one preserves coupon.

Q—May a market gardener use his own truck to get wood for his own wood stove? I can get wood in the country about 45 or 50 miles away. Would I be able to get a permit to go beyond the 35-mile limit and if so, where should I apply?

A—More particulars are required to answer your question definitely. You should apply for a pemit giving specific information to the nearest regional office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. As you live in the Toronto region, you should apply to the Board office at 330 Bay St., Toronto.

Q—My son paid $1.50 per person cover charge at a night club. He was also charged 84 cents for two small bottles of ginger ale. Does the price ceiling of 7 cents bottle not apply to these placse?

A—Ceiling price for a small bottle (6-13 fluid oz) is 7 cents. But restaurants may still charge basic period price plus excise tax as long as the total is not more than 12 cents small bottle and if they have specific permission from the administrator of soft drinks. . .Basic period prices (however high they are) may be charged in cabarets or night clubs . . .Thank you for reporting paticulars in this case. Soft drink prices at this club will be looked into.

Please send your questions or your request for the pamphlet "Consumer News" or the Blue Book (the book in which you keep track of your ceiling prices) mentioning the name of this paper to: Wartime Prices and Trade Board, 406 Metropolitan Bldg., Toronto.

For Thursday, September 30

INITIATIVE, enterprise, push and concentrated marshalling of the forces and faculties should move affairs, both business and private into the realm of a "new high" in the way of achievement and enduring stability of resources and opportunity, for reaching cherished goals. This bold and clever effort toward important objetives, probably in new fields of endeavor. must be sustained by clear thinking, sound constructive ability, and progressive ideals. Similar conditions apply to the social, affectional and emotional life and its successful and happy fruitions.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be on the threshold of a year of splendid opportunity, for doing large things in a "big way," with enterprise, initiative, and the creative forces and mental faculties all under high stimuli for outstanding productiveness and progress. Especially are new and bold ventures encouraged, with practical ways and means, at hand, although possibly menaced by some sort of sordid or trecherous temptations. Keen insight, aggressiveness and straightforwardness win, in the end. Finanial, domestic and romantic affiliations should also be pushed to gratifying objectives, although with restraint.

A child born on this day may be aggressive. energetic, have much constructive ability, assuring decisive success, although it may be subject to erratic emotional urges or some form of excess or extravagance with funds or energies.

MEDALS URGED FOR APPEASERS WHO KEEP MARRIAGES HAPPY

Husband, Wife, Knowing Each Other's Preferences, Should Try to Avoid Sore Spots.

"APPEASE" is considered a weasel word, and those who practice the gentle art of evading trouble instead of rushing into it are looked upon with more or less contempt as weaklings, and as lacking the courage of those who are always spoiling for a fight and ready to go to the mat with anyone who differs with them.

It has always seemed to me that this is a very lopsided way to look at the subject, and that instead of regarding the appeasers with disdain we should pin medals on their breasts, for they are the ones who make social intercourse with our fellow creatures possible, and keep marriage a going concern. Also, they show more intelligence in dealing with the difficult problems in life than do the scrappers, for there is little sense in battering yourself black and blue against a stone wall when you could easily walk around it.

Manner Expresses More Than Words

All of us know from personal experience that it isn't what people do and say to us that makes us love them or hate them. It is the way they do and say it. It is their manner, their way of putting it that turns what would be the fighting word into flattery. "Smile when you say that to me" says the hero of a once famous Wild West story, as he toys with his six shooter.

And wise old Benjamin Franklin said that one of the most important lessons he ever learned in life was never to flatly contradict anyone with whom he was discussing a subject and tell them that they were idiots to hold such opinions. On the contrary, he said he made it a rule to always put his point of view deferentially before them by saying: "Don't you think so and so " And their egotism thus appeased, he generally brought them to his way of thinking.

If appeasement is worth so much in the outside world, it is even more valuable in the home, and one of the stupidities of humanity over which the angels must weep is the spectacle of so many husbands and wives who make their marriage a veritable hell on earth, when it should be so happy, by their failure to appease each other.

Soft Soap Will Often Clean Up Unhappy Home

Being human, and male and female, to boot, they inevitably have different points of view, different habits and tastes and opinions. Also, they have their full quota of faults and weaknesses and fussy little ways that provide plenty of material for the daily quarrels that leave the wife in tears and make the husband bang the front door behind him, and go out and get drunk.

Both the husband and wife are miserable. They are bitterly disappointed in their marriage. And when they look at their frightened little children, who are the witnesses of their cruel fights, they know that they are practically slaying the innocents. But apparently it never occurs to them that they can clean up the whole sorry mess by the use of a little soft soap.

No husband and wife, unless they are congenital idiots, can possibly live together for six months without having a good working diagram of each other's dispositions and characters. No man has to be an FBI to know what are his wife's pet peeves and vanities, what line of jolly she falls for, and what subjects it is like playing with TNT to even mention. No wife so dumb but who could play a peace anthem on her husband's peculiarities, as upon a harp of a thousand strings, if she would only take the trouble to do so.

Compliments Win Wife's Respect

But instead of using this inside information to enable them to walk high, wide and handsome around each other's sore spots, they barge right into them. A man can bat his wife a million times about going sloppy around the house, and demand to know why she doesn't keep herself spick and span like the girls in his office do, and she will come down to breakfast with cold cream on her face and in a housecoat that looks as if she had salvaged it out of the garbage can. But let him notice her hair-do, and compliment her new dress, and tell her that she has Hedy LaMarr backed off the board as a glamor girl, and he will never have to look at a frowsy woman across the breakfast table.

A wife may berate her husband for not staying at home of evenings. She may read him a certain lecture every time he touches a highball. She may weep and wail over being a neglected wife who is no longer treated as a Lady Love. And she will get nowhere beyond making a scene that he ducks if he can. But let her put honey on her lips and be ever ready to pour the oil of flattery over the wounds the world has dealt his vanity; let her laugh at his jokes and encore his stories; let her show him that she considers him the most fascinating man in the world, and she will have a fireside companion that wild horses couldn't drag from his own hearthstone.

Great are the rewards of the appeaser. Try it out on your own piano.

H P RATION-GRAM

Lamb Stuing

In Norway it's "STUING" . . . in Canada it's "stew". But regardless of its name, it's delicious, when made according to this new wartime recipe.

Brown 3 cups of cooked lamb, cut in pieces, in 1 tablespoon of fat and place in a greased baking dish. Add 1 cup of cooked, cubed carrots, 1 cup of cooked potato balls and 8 small, cooked onions. Mix 1 tablespoon of H. P. Sauce with leftover gravy and combine with meat and vegetables. Add enough hot water to moisten. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover and bake in a hot oven about 400 degrees for about 25 minutes.

Buy a bottle of H. P. Sauce today and try this recipe. H.P., that grand, English type sauce, adds a wonderful flavour also to meats, fish, salads, fowl and sandwiches.

LAWN BOWLING

Taking advantage of the fine weather our bowlers put their best foot forward Monday afternoon and evening and played the final games in all three singles competitions.

In the afternoon Miss P. Coleman met and defeated Miss L. Allan for the ladies' championship. Taking the lead on the first end the younger member of the famous Coleman family (all bowlers) was never headed and finished the 18 points well ahead. It is no small feat to win your way into the finals and both the ladies deserve great credit.

At night, H. Freeman, probably one of the oldest bowlers of our club, and certainly one that might be classed as a veteran, had no trouble with R. Herman in the final game of the men's singles competition. Both these boys have come a long way in this competition and have earned their laurels.

In the novice singles W. S. Hill and R. Gamble fought it out over the regulation route with Mr. Hill getting the verdict. And so we say to winners and losers in all these events: "Well done." No doubt at the annual meetings to be held next month all these players will receive their just rewards.

The only game that we know of for tonight is a challenge game between H. Freeman and G. Gimblett. We don't know all the particulars but we hear, on the side, that it is a kind of a grudge affair. However if you bowlers have an off night come around. The chatter will be well worth hearing.

Results:

Men's Club Singles
H. Freeman, first; R. Herman, second.

Ladies' Club Singles
Miss P. Coleman, first; Miss L. Allan, second.

Novice Singles
W. S. Hill, first; R. Gamble, second.

Fashion Drawing Has Become an Attractive Profession

BE A FASHION ILLUSTRATOR

As you glance through a pile of magazines and papers you can't help noticing the great amount of attractive fashion drawings. Easily to see that it is indeed a money-making profession.

For anyone skilled in the art and with a definite flair for the original in dress designing, the field of fashion illustration should hold great interest.

Of course if you want to be a successful fashion illustrator you must have an observant mind, good memory, active imagination, good taste, respect for accuracy, a sense of proportion and balance, plus a strong ambition to succeed.

These fundamentals are not as binding as they seem because if you are at all enthusiastic, every-thing will fall in quite simply.

Our 32-page booklet not only describes how to draw the fashion figure but also gives pointers on various other angles—for example, how to picture furs and fabrics accurately. It is full of helpful suggestions for the novice.

For your copy of FASHION DRAWING MADE EASY send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

TAKING YOUR PREFERENCE

Which would you rather do—play a hand in such a way that you are sure to be set one, or try a practically even chance which will either make your contract or cause you to be set two? The answer to this question has nothing to do with your gameness. It is pure common sense to make the try, if it is a game contract or not, as the value of a part-score makes you stand to gain more by success than you would lose by failure. That is so even if you are vulnerable, in rubber bridge. In duplicate match point play, the chance usually should be at least even for you to try it.

West	North / South	East
	♠ A 7 6 2 ♥ A 4 ♦ 6 5 4 ♣ Q 10 5 3
♠ J 8 3 ♥ K Q J 6 ♦ Q 10 ♣ J 9 7 2	N / W E / S	♠ 9 ♥ 8 7 3 2 ♦ K J 8 3 2 ♣ A 8 6
	♠ K Q 10 5 4 ♥ 10 9 5 ♦ A 9 7 ♣ K 4

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

It was easy to play this hand for down one, after West led the heart K to the A. But doing that would have been silly bridge in rubber play, when there was a simple chance for the game. Yet just such things are plays which you see missed every day.

The declarer took three top spades, then led the club K from his own hand. After East played low on this he led the club 4 to the Q, which the A killed. There was now no way at all for South to keep from losing two tricks in diamonds and a trick in hearts.

Nothing was needed but a simple finesse of the club 10 on the second round, in the hope that West had the J. You can be virtually sure he has not the A, as if he held it up on the K lead, certainly he would not repeat that on the second club lead. The sole reasonable chance was to have the 10 force the A, so that then the Q would furnish a discard of one of the two losing diamonds. South, however, played it the other way, and was set. His explanation for the Q play was that he thought West was holding up the A, which he was very unlikely to do. Even if he was doing it, the 10 was still a good chance.

MILLBROOK

St. Andrew's Has Rally Service

MILLBROOK, Sept. 29 (ENS).— The annual Rally Day service of St. Andrew's Sunday School was held in connection with the regular morning church service on Sunday, the superintendent, W. F. Fallis, leading in the opening responsive prayers, and call to worship, and the pastor, Rev. A. L. Sisco, taking charge of the final half of the program, the theme for which was: "Giving Our Best."

Two of the pupils, Gary Charlebois and Mary Sanderson, took part with readings, and one teacher, Miss Jean Burnham, illustrated the day's theme with the story, "The Little Old Lady." The special offering was in aid of Sunday School and Young People's work in all parts of the country, and the minister preached from Exodus 35:21, illustrating the willingness with which the Israelites gave for the building of the tabernacle, and the like readiness with which God's people today should bring gifts to carry on His work, particularly bravery, liberty and loyalty, the meaning of the red, white and blue on the flag, respectively, he said.

Indian Missionary.

Rev. H. M. Conkel, of Toronto, secretary of the Canadian Missions to India, brought an informative message to the congregation of Grace Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening. Owing to the guest speaker, the annual Rally Day in the Sunday School was put off until Sunday, October 3, when it will be a feature of the joint service of congregation and school.

Russian Wheat Again A Prize Of Battle

The wheat fields of the Russian Ukraine again are the great prize for which mighty armies fight. The Red Army is now pressing its great offensive into the Ukraine and the Germans are fleeing, taking what they can with them. ABOVE are two photos made while the great wheat belt was in possession of the Germans. At TOP, anti-aircraft guns set up in a wheat field while Russian peasants are forced to harvest the grain for the Nazis. BELOW, slave labor harvesting the wheat of the Ukraine under the watchful eyes of a German guard.

KEENE

Young People Arrange For Winter Activities

KEENE, Sept. 29 — (ENS). — Rally Day was observed at Keene United Church Sunday with a large attendance. A special program was given at Sunday School when several took part including Mrs. Bruce of Coldsprings who gave an interesting and inspiring address. At the Church service the theme "Service and Sacrifice" was the topic of the sermon. The music at both services was very appropriate.

Last week the Young People's executive of the United Church met at the Manse to make definite arrangements for the Fall and Winter meetings. Many activities were considered with a social evening — a scrambled fry — on Friday, October 1. Owing to some of the young people enlisting in the Armed Forces their places on the executive were filled by others.

The committees are as follows:— Missions, Alan Drummond, Lenore Mather and Tom Mather; Culture, Tom Gall, Jean Drummond and Jack Wright; Citizenship, Tom Weir, Lois Humphries and Harold Kempt; Fellowship, Mary Miller, Stella Plunkett and Roy Stewart; Recreation, Mrs. R. McIntyre, Donald McFarlane, Percy Adamson and W. McIntyre.

On Sunday evening the Y.P.S. met with the president Tom Gall in the chair and Miss Mary Miller's group in charge of the program which was interesting. Owing to the Anniversary at Bethel United Church next Sunday at 7:30 it was decided to attend this service.

OMEMEE

United Church Holds Rally Day Services

OMEMEE, Sept. 29 — (ENS).— Rally Day services were observed in the United church on Sunday morning, when the teachers, officers and pupils of the Sunday school attended.

The church was decorated with autumn flowers. The program, as outlined by the Board of Religious Education, was in charge of the superintendent, Mr. Johnson, assisted by the pastor, Rev. R. M. Patterson, and the assistant superintendent, Mr. William Weir. Readings were given by David Weir, Jr., Merle Clifford and Marion Fisher. Hazel Wilson told the story of the little old lady who gave her beautiful apples to 20 little children which made them all hapy.

Prizes were awarded to the pupils who had attended Sunday school for at least 50 Sundays in the year. The pupils receiving gifts were Barbara and David Weir, Stella Linsdell, Donna and Shirley Clifford.

CAVAN

Society Loses Three Officers

CAVAN, Sept. 29 (ENS). — The Cavan Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Carl Porteous last week. A number of officers have resigned and they are Mrs. Mervyn Smith, president, who is teaching school at Franklin; Mrs. Ralph Staples, first vice-president, has moved to Toronto; Mrs. Milton Carr, second vice-president is moving to Lindsay. Therefore, the meeting opened with Mrs. R. S. Staples, past president, in the chair, and Mrs. Alex Millar, secretary.

There were not enough members present to elect the required new officers. It was voted that Mrs. Alex Millar ask Mrs. William Howden to fill the chair for the remainder of the term.

The Institute has sent six boxes to Cavan overseas boys, Manson Cathcart, Wally Scott, Frank and Neil Braithwaite in England, George Foster (in hospital) and Melville Perrin, both in Sicily, preparation is being made for more boxes.

The October meeting will be held on the third Thursday at 2:30 p.m., place to be announced later, under Mrs. Wilf Reynold's group. Roll call will be "A Joke."

Mrs. C. Smith spoke on rationing, Mrs. Alex Millar reported the health meeting, held at Cavan a few weeks ago, and an old-fashioned spelling bee, Mrs. R. S. Staples winning on the word "kerosene" took place. A social hour was held when lunch was served by Mrs. Charles Smith's group.

Reds Capture Suburbs Of Kiev City

Troops Crossing Dnieper River At Other Points

B. EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Sept. 30—(AP)—Red Army guns shelled the Germans on the high cliffs of Kiev from numerous positions in the suburbs of the eastern bank of the Dnieper today.

The Russians were in possession of the eastern suburbs of the city, some of which lies less than 100 yards across the river. They were at the railway and highway bridges on the eastern side of the villages of Posinyaky, Predmostnaya Sloboda and Trukanhov Island, all in Kiev's front yard.

These are just across the river and actually are not villages but subdivisions of the city.

Russian troops are so close to the city that in many places they are able to rake the cliffs with machine-guns, and snipers are busy picking off unwary Germans.

Fire From Caves.

Soviet forces which pushed into the suburbs on the eastern bank of the river are exposed to heavy fire from natural fortifications along the towering west bank where ancient cells of monks hewn into the high cliff afford excellent machine-gun and light gun nests for the Germans.

(The Berlin radio said that Soviet forces are continuing big-scale crossing thrusts along the central Dnieper without revealing the success of the assaults. It added that Russian reinforcements were being thrown against German defences near Zaporozche, on the river south of Dnepropetrovsk, and Soviet forces "are still attacking with powerful forces in the Kuban.")

With the capture of Rudnya, important comunications centre midway between Smolensk and Vitebsk, Red Army forces today were plunging ahead toward the northern borders of White Russia, less than 10 miles away.

The swift advance constituted a potential threat to German-held Poland, 100 miles further west, and Riga, capital and chief city of Latvia on the shores of the Baltic Sea.

The Red Army forces were reported rapidly advancing beyond Bolshe Nemki, 32 miles east of Zhlobin, where the drive towards Minsk apparently began. Minsk is approximately 175 miles northwest of Gomel and 20 miles from the old polish border.

Vitebsk was but 40 miles from the spearhead of the advancing Soviet columns, and capture of that northern German bastion would open the way for a possible drive down the main railroad route to Riga, 300 miles to the northwest.

24 Boats Built In One Shipyard

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 30—(AP).—Weary, tin-hatted men and women at the Oregon Shipbuilding Corporation stood by today to watch their 24th Liberty freighter of the month slide into the Columbia River — a United States record they figure will stand for the duration.

They gave up vacations, home life and sleep to set this record. Many of them worked seven days a week throughout the month. At times, some worked up to 36 hours without stopping.

The previous record was 18 ships in one month from the yard's 11 ways. The goal for the record try was 22.

Instead, 24 poured out.

Five American Reporters Miss Death In Italian Town

By RELMAN MORIN—Associated Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 5TH ARMY IN ITALY, Sept. 28—(Delayed)—(AP).—The German Army, finally hurled from its mountain strongholds, was in the plains of Naples tonight, half a step ahead of Allied troops who had won their greatest victory since the battle of Italy began.

It was a triumphant and at the same time a completely crazy day. Five American correspondents, in blissful ignorance of their position, 'captured' one town a half-hour before British patrols arrived.

In the morning we were ducking garlands of flowers, branches of oleanders and flying lemons and persimmons with which we were greeted by the Italians. Before the afternoon ended we were huddled in doorways, caught between shells from German and British tanks.

We left headquarters early in the morning intending to visit mountain sectors where British troops for five days previously had been hammering German defences beautifully chosen to hold passes commanding the entrance to the Naples plain.

Guns Dug In.

The Germans had made good use of the natural advantages of the terrain and apparently expected to hold their line for some time. The British guns had pounded them unmercifully, but nobody expected the break that came so suddenly today.

We had expected to stop at the ruined hamlet of Camerelle, but when we arrived there we saw a convoy winding through the mountains ahead. Somewhat to our surprise we reached the majority city of Nocera.

A few British reconnaissance vehicles were pushing along the road beyond.

We decided to push on and raced down the road in our jeeps.

Italians lining the road were wild with joy and threw fruit and flowers at us. Some of them finally flagged us down and told us that five Germans with two machine-guns were still hidden in building ahead. We decided to wait

Three Reporters Die Near Naples

LONDON, Sept. 30 (CP)—Three British war correspondents with the Anglo-American 5th Army have been killed near Naples, it was announced today.

They are A. B. Austin of the London Daily Herald, Stewart G. Sale of Reuters News Agency and William J. Munday of the London News Chronicle and the Sydney, Australia, Morning Herald.

The correspondents were with leading units of the 5th Army's armored columns advancing beyond Nocera and it was after they had seen enemy opposition wiped out on the outskirts of that town that they were killed.

Basil Gingell, Exchange Telegraph correspondent, said the three were killed by a German shell.

He said he and the trio had been met with such enthusiasm by villagers and peasants that "warning shots as we crossed a bridge seemed no more than a dying flicker from a past enemy; but it was

Night Raid Shatters Bochum City

Steel Plants In Ruhr Heavily Bombed 8 Bombers Missing

LONDON, Sept. 30 (CP)—R.A.F. bombers returned to Germany last night after a one-night lull in their aerial offensive to attack Bochum and other objectives in the industrial Ruhr Valley it was announced here today.

It was the iron city of Bochum's fifth heavy pounding of the year.

The attack was officially described as "heavy." Eight bombers failed to return from the raid.

Squadrons from the Canadian bomber group participated in the heavy attack, R.C.A.F. headquarters said, and three of the missing aircraft were Canadian.

Bochum, where the coke and steel industry of the Ruhr Valley coal basin in concentrated, was last attacked on June 25. A previous attack, on the night of June 12, levelled some 150 acres in the centre of the city whose three steel works constitute one of the most important steel producing units of the famous Vereinigte Stahlwerke combine.

The city has a population of 320,000.

The Air Ministry communique said other objectives in the Ruhr Valley were also bombed and that mines were laid in enemy waters during the night.

Intruder patrols were also carried out over occupied Europe, the communique added, and one enemy plane was destroyed by an aircraft of the fighter command over Holland.

Three large steel works, including branches of the Krupp combine, are situated at Bochum, as well as many important coke, coal, iron, tin, zinc and chemical works.

The attack represented the third blow this week at the Nazis' great industry artery, the Dortmund-Ems Canal.

Berlin broadcast a Stockholm dispatch reporting foreign airplanes passed over southern Sweden in the night, flying in a southerly direction. What connection this had with the attack on the Ruhr was problematical, unless the British squadrons followed a circle route to avoid the heavy anti-aircraft defences concentrated along the Channel coasts.

EXTRA!

STOCKHOLM — The Germans have evacuated Naples after destroying harbor installations, a Berlin dispatch to the newspaper Aftonbladet said today.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. — Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau announced here today the United States third War Loan drive goal of $15,000,000,000 had been met.

LONDON — The German-controlled Fascist radio announced in mid-afternoon today that "at this moment the British fleet is bombarding Naples." There was no confirmation of the report from any quarter.

ST. CATHARINES—Two airmen from No. 6 School, R.C.A.F., at Dunnville, Ont., were killed today when their Harvard training plane crashed.

Allies Pass Mount Vesuvius Reach Outskirts of Naples

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 30 — (AP). — General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean theatre, conferred with Italian Marshal Pietro Badoglio on military co-operation aboard a warship at Malta yesterday, an official announcement said today. Accompanying Eisenhower were Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Allied ground commander, admiral of the fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham, commander of Allied naval forces in the Mediterranean, Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, the Mediterranean air commander; Harold MacMillan, British Minister in North Africa, and Robert Murphy, United States Minister in North Africa.

"The principal topic of discussion was the method for making the most effective Italian military effort against the common enemy, Germany," said the official announcement.

The Anglo-American 5th Army rolled across the coastal plain at the foot of Vesuvius today toward the towers of smoke and flame that marked the city of Naples, Italy's second greatest port.

On Last Lap.

Overrunning Pompei, the modern town of 4,000 people built on the ashes of its ancient namesake that was destroyed in 79 A.D., troops of Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark drove to the southern slopes of 3,900-foot Vesuvius and began the last stages of their approach around the base of the volcano.

The Allied communique announced the capture of both Pompei, 10 miles along the coast from Naples, and Mercato San Severino, 22 miles southeast of the big port which has been shaken and swept for a week by the explosions and fires set by German demolition crews, and ridden by vengeful machine-gun squads reported to have instituted a reign of terror among the people.

But it was probable the troops were further ahead than disclosed by the communique which usually contains no information of operations later than 6 p.m. of the preceding day.

Hitting On 2 Sides

(The Cairo radio said the 5th Army was rapidly investing the city from the south and southeast.

(The German communique broadcast from Berlin, said harbor installations had been destroyed in an effort to prevent Allied landings and that "very severe measures were taken against Communist riots which are flaring up.")

While Clark's army continued its unbroken advance, Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's British 8th Army along the Adriatic continued to consolidate the newly-won air bases at Foggia, 160 miles from Rome, and branched out to reach Manfredonia on the coast in a 20-mile advance from Zapponeto.

The weather turned from rain and wind to warm as tanks of the 5th Army rumbled past Pompei to the outskirts of Torre Annunziata, beating down rearguard opposition and pressing on despite extensive minefields and demolitions which had ruined roads and bridges.

The bulk of the German defenders apparently had fled into Naples and then on to the north, according to an Air Force announcement which told of bombarding Nazi truck columns to the northeast of the city.

The fierce rush of Gen. Clark's troops through the mountain ring had cost dearly, however.

5,211 Casualties

A military spokesman announced that British Divisions of the 5th Army suffered 5,211 casualties from Sept. 9, the beginning of the battle of Salerno, to Sept. 20. This was a high proportion of casualties considering the number of troops involved.

Success Of British Long Range Planning On Post War Policies Irks U.S. Board

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30—(AP).—A critical report on British commercial and diplomatic activities may be laid before the United States Senate in executive session by members of a five-man inspection committee which just returned from a 40,000-mile trip to the world's battlefronts.

The gist of committee members' complaints, it was said authoritatively, was that British post-war policies already are functioning in a practical way while American representatives are at a loss to know what the attitude of the United States will be on many important world questions when the fighting is over.

As a result, the committee members were said to have found that Britain stands to reap post-war benefits from many United States lend-lease contributions to other countries.

Some indication of this repressed irritation at British activities was given by Chairman Richard Russell (Dem. Ga.) when he told a press conference yesterday that the news of American military activities was being played down by British news services and the British radio.

Milk Supplies At New Low Cheese Situation Difficult

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30—(CP).—Increased milk consumption has posed a supply problem for Canada and further increases will have to be checked although rationing is looked on as "a last resort," J. P. Nadeau, deputy administrator of dairy products for the Prices Board, said today.

In an address prepared for delivery to the annual convention of the International Association of Milk Control Agencies, Mr. Nadeau said he could not say definitely what action would be taken in Canada.

Steps were necessary to "control and guide the diversion of milk and possibly concentrate the diversion to a few country plants around each market rather than leave distributors free to obtain supplies from individual shippers who now are sending their milk to several country plants.

"This problem is very difficult to deal with as conditions vary from one market to another," he said. "However, the action taken will be determined by the need of the market and the local conditions in the area in which it is located.

"Personally, I feel that emergency milk supplies should come from country plants and that distributors should not be permitted to take on a large number of new shippers and disorganize a large number of country plants for a few months each year.

No Restrictions.

"Controller diversion from country plants should achieve the required results and at the same time eliminate the necessity of any regulation which would restrict the freedom of the producer in the sale of his milk."

Mr. Nadeau said the rapid increase in milk consumption in larger markets, and the efforts made by distributors to obtain their required supply, has resulted in a condition where production of essential dairy products is threatened with disorganization and secondary fluid markets are in danger of being left without adequate supply.

Foreign Labor Threat To Nazi

MONTREAL, Sept. 30—(CP)—The use to which Germany is putting foreign workers, civilian or prisoners of war, to maintain her capacity to fight, a capacity now under the onslaught of Allied air battering, is described in a report issued here today by the International Labor Office.

The report estimates that there were 6,500,000 foreign workers in Germany at the beginning of 1943, and in addition many others were being used in occupied territories.

The presence of this great body of people has been cited as one of her points of peril in the event of an Allied invasion, but of its past and present part in the German economy, the I.L.O. report says:

"The main and ever-growing stream of foreign workers flows into the Reich, providing the economic and technical basis of the German armies. Today a host of foreigners unprecedented in number and unparalleled in character of living and working in Germany; like a gigantic pump, the German Reich is sucking in all the resources of Europe and masses of Europe's working population.

Of interest in Italy's pre-surrender dilemma is the report's comment:

"Among the Allied and neutral countries which have provided Germany with manpower, Italy takes first place.... In the spring of 1942 it was stated that Italy had provided Germany with 300,000 workers and that this number would soon reach 350,000."

Rental Laws Effective October 1st

Revised Rules Bring In 6 Months' Notice

OTTAWA, Sept. 30 (CP)—Revised rentals regulations go into effect tomorrow across Canada in a move by the Prices Board to maintain the rentals ceiling but make easier the part of tenants and landlords in administration of the control system and "give greater certainty of position to each."

The changes were announced by the Board last Aug. 13 but application was delayed until Oct. 1.

Provided, among other things, is a regulation that six months' notice, instead of a year's notice, will be required if landlords want to live in tenanted accommodation purchased by them since last Dec. 10.

Applications for increase in rent will be more generally limited to situations where the tenant is receiving more value for his rent than he did formerly. Appointment of local rentals appraisers to deal with applications for changes in rent is authorized.

Hits Roomers Too

Persons on a weekly tenancy of self-contained units are given the same protection as those on monthly or yearly tenancies under the new regulations, and roomers and boarders are brought under the price ceiling under a special section known as "shared accommodation."

The revised order provides for an increase of 10 per cent in the maximum rental if a tenant is sub-letting more than two rooms.

Applications for increases also may be made if the rental of any unit in a multiple-family dwelling is less than the rental generally prevailing for similar units in the same building, or if the landlord

Norwegian Ship Sank Tugboat

OTTAWA, Sept. 30.—(CP).—Sinking of the tugboat Erg in Halifax harbor last July 6 with loss of 19 lives was caused by "the omissions of duty, negligence and want of care and caution and poor seamanship" on the part of those charged with the responsibility of the conduct of the Norwegian ship Noreig, it was stated in the formal court of investigation made public to-day by Transport Minister Michaud.

"As a result the Minister has ordered the suspension for a period of six months of the license of the Canadian pilot aboard the Noreig, and a copy of the report of the formal investigation has been officially referred to the Norwegian authorities for appropriate action," said Mr. Michaud's statement.

The report of the Court of Investigation, headed by Judge John A. Barry of Saint John, N.B., found that the captain and others aboard the Erg "did not in any way cause or contribute to the accident," said the statement.

The court did report, however, thta "the Erg had many more persons on board than she had a right to have under the regulations governing her, but that fact was not the approximate cause or a contributing cause to the collision."

Mr. Michaud's statement said: "The Erg was only licensed to carry a crew of three as well as eight passengers, a total of 11; whereas 24 persons were on board at the time of the collision. The Department of Transport is investigating this reported breach of regulations."

Allied Gains Keep Hitler In Turmoil

Balkan Countries Use Supplies To Harass German Forces On Duty

B D.WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The Balkan thorn is being pressed steadily and dangerously deeper into Feuhrer Hitler's side by the business-like progress of the Allies in the conquest of Italy, as marked today by the reported investment of the strategic port of Naples.

One of Hitler's chief reasons for defending Italy is to protect his hold on the explosive Balkans, just across the Adriatic. Each day of success on the Italian peninsula add to the Allied ability to rake the Balkans from the air, and it also is bound to increase German fears of invasion. The situation in Europe is indeed a thorn in Hitler's side, for it is a terrible menace to the right flank of his badly manhandled battle-front in Russia.

The Fuehrer's fears of invasion of the Balkan's doesn't necessarily mean that the Allies have decided on such an operation. They are in the enviable position of being under no pressure at this time to undertake it, whereas the unhappy Nazi chief is compelled to maintain an army in that theatre, to guard against invasion and to keep the lid on the unpredicable Balkan peoples.

Not only are all his small satellites--Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary — trying to break away from him, but the Occupied countries are smiting him hip and thigh. Today for instance, a patriot communique from Jugoslavia records that Jugoslav troops have forced the Germans to retreat at many places in the northeastern part of country, there is heavy fighting on the Dalmation coast.

Thus all the Balkans both friend and foe, are serving the Allied cause well, either by design or by United Nations need do to keep the pot boiling is to continue to support their friends with all aid short of invasion, meantime tossing bombs and moral ferment among the little Axis states, the Balkans will do the rest themselves until such time as either Russia or

Guerilla Opposition Routs S.S. Troops

By LEWIS HAWKINS
Associated Press Staff Writer.

The German radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, told yesterday of German SS. troops being supported by the regular army in Dalmatia—an apparent confirmation that the operations of Yugoslav patriots had compelled Hitler to send top grade troops into the area. This broadcast said the Italian city of Gorizia, 20 miles north-west of Trieste, as well as Split, were recaptured by the Germans.

A Budapest dispatch to the Swiss Gazette de Lausanne said that Hungary, now playing an increasingly isolated role in the Balkans, had refused to recognize Benito Mussolini's "Fascist - Republican" government of Italy.

However, a D.N.B. dispatch broadcast last night by the Berlin radio asserted the Budapest government had extended such recognition yesterday.

From France came fresh evidence of increasing violence against Chief of Government Pierre Laval and his Nazi masters, with desperate collaborationists urging still harsher repressive measures against patriots scenting early freedom and trying to prepare the way for their liberators.

U.S. Ready To Draft Fathers

Many States Begin Inducting Family Heads

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30—(AP)—With Congress still debating the wisdom of it, the draft of fathers in the United States for military service starts tomorrow and an Associated Press survey indicates an overwhelming majority of States will start inducting family heads immediately in order to meet their quotas.

Local boards have been under order to avoid, insofar as possible, induction of men who were fathers prior to Dec. 7, 1941, until Oct. 1. Selective Service authorities contend 446,000 fathers must go into uniform between now and the first of the year to meet the demands of the United States Army force.

Draft officials of 24 States said they definitely expect to call fathers in October. Only 10 States reported that they could postpone it until after Nov. 1.

In Canada all men from 18 to 30, inclusive, are subject to military service within the Dominion, regardless of family status.)

The United States War Department, which has insisted that there should be no blanket deferments for any group such as fathers, indicated a willingness to act on criticisms of lawmakers who have bucked the father draft idea.

Each board is supposed to induct fathers only after it has exhausted the supply of childless men.

BRITISH LINER QUEEN MARY RUNS GAMUT OF SUBMARINE PACKS

Troop Carrier Has Narrow Escape

LONDON, Sept. 30 —(CP)—The British liner Queen Mary carried tens of thousands of troops to fighting fronts around the world in 1942, it may now be disclosed.

The role played by the great gray liner as a troop transport was revealed after publication of a report telling how a German plot to sink her with 10,000 United States troops aboard was foiled with discovery of a German radio transmitter at Sao Paulo, Brazil.

Early in the summer of 1942 the Queen Mary played an important part in saving Britain's desperate position at El Alamein, the Daily Mail's naval correspondent wrote.

"Once she steamed right through a pack of submarines estimated to number about 25," he added, "and not one had time to get a torpedo trained on her.

Tenants may be dispossessed for three reasons — personal occupancy by the landlord or members of his immediate family; a division of the accommodation so it will house more people; and what the Prices Board terms "obnoxious behavior" by tenants or sub-tenants.

Ill-behaved tenants lose all the special rights of tenure and their leases become governed by Provincial law. The rentals order lists 13 specified circumstances permitting a landlord to proceed in eviction under Provincial law.

If a landlord desires accommodation as a home for at least a year for himself, his father, mother, son, daughter or daughter-in-law — the last included because of the number of women whose husbands are overseas— he must give his tenant a minimum of six months' notice to vacate.

But the Board said in its August announcement that eviction cannot take place in the winter in the case of a monthly lease. Special forms are to be provided by the Board for these notices to vacate and the accommodation must not be sold or rented for one year without the rentals appraiser's permission.

Huge Stores Of Shells Lost At Wewak

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Sept. 30—(AP)—A huge store of ammunition which the Japanese painstakingly had transported overseas for use against advancing Allied troops in New Guinea was exploded Tuesday at Wewak by four-engined bombers in the greatest pyrotechnic display ever seen in the southwest Pacific.

This new blow, following by a day the destruction of more than 60 enemy planes and seven ships at Wewak, was reported today in a communique which also announced that hard-fighting Australians have inched through bitter Japanese resistance to within 600 yards of the main jetty at Finschhafen.

The Japanese utilized 40 fighter planes and concentrated batteries of anti-tank guns in an effort to prevent further destruction at Wewak, where approximately 500 of their aircraft have been wiped out in little more than a month.

Blast 8 Planes

But the raiders shot down eight interceptors, added 145 tons of bombs to the 106 tons dropped Monday and departed intact while smoke from the munitions blast covered the whole Wewak peninsula.

The resultant flames after the storage depot was hit could be seen for 60 miles. A large fuel dump and several supply dumps also were destroyed.

Nearer the ground fighting at Finschhafen, other heavy bombers caused landslide obstructions with 1,000-pound bombs on the coastal road south of Madang.

The Finschhafen garrison, in addition to falling back from some prepared positions scattered through plantation and jungle also were menaced by a force which crossed

Old Stone Mason Reaches 93 Carries On In Monument Works

LINDSAY, Sept. 30 — (ENS).—George Allan, one of Lindsay's oldest citizens will celebrate his 93rd birthday today by doing a full days' work as a stone cutter and polisher in the Lindsay Monumental Works a business operated by his two sons, George and Charlie, where he is still steadily engaged in his trade and has rarely missed a day's work in his long, active career.

George Allan has been a resident of Lindsay since coming to Canada in 1920. He was born in Banffshire, Scotland, and at an early age served his apprenticeship as a stone mason. He helped construct some of the largest buildings in Aberdeen, including many churches and the Grand Hotel. He was the oldest person travelling to Canada on the boat that brought him from his beloved Scotland, but on his arrival in Lindsay commenced work immediately.

Hard work and regular hours are George Allan's prescription for longevity. "I've smoked ever since I was a wee lad," he says, "and I am not adverse to a drink now and then if the occasion warrants. But a peaceful mind is just as important to good health as your most powerful medicine and a mind can never be at rest unless you have some job to occupy your attention. They asked me to retire over 20 years ago, but if I had, I don't think I would be here now."

and other great leaders were spoken of by the aged Scotsman in the same breath as Churchill. He remembers each great battle England has won during the past century and is unshaken in his faith of Churchill to pull a surprise that will mark a quick finish of the war.

A skilled tradesman of the old school, he is scornful of machinery and its ability to duplicate hand carving in stone work as seen in many of the older buildings in England and Scotland. Two of his sons, George and Charlie, followed their father's trade as stone masons, and their work is known for its perfection throughout the province.

Bracken Ready To Criticise When Necessary

OTTAWA, Sept. 30 - (CP) - In a prepared statement issued in reply to Prime Minister Mackenzie King's address to the National Advisory Council of the National Liberal Federation Monday night, John Bracken, National Progressive Conservative Leader, said last night that Mr. King had left the way open for calling an election as soon as he was faced with substantial criticism in the House of Commons.

"While claiming to place human values and the high purpose of the war above political consideration, Mr. King then puts himself in a position for political action upon the slightest pretence," Mr. Bracken said.

"He seeks to convel the impression that there will be no election until 1945 while imposing a set of conditions which make it possible for him to call an election so soon after the opening of the House of Commons as any man raises his voice in what Mr. King may interpret to be substantial criticism. He approaches his political opponenst with a cloak over his sword."

Mr. Bracken said that "never in the history of Canada has a political leader been guilty of such arrogant aand pretence as was Mr. King on Monday night."

While seeking "by this arrogant and dictatorial position "to impose silence on his political opponents Mr. King was active in organizing a committee for political action.

In reply to Mr. King's suggestion of a possibility, which he did not consider likely, that differences, might arise within his own party which it would be impossible to reconcile, Mr. Bracken said this had already happened in the action of Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, former Transport Minister and member of the Bloc Populaire in leaving government ranks.

Voiced Criticism Once

Referring to his recent Dominion tour, which Mr. King had spoken of as being made in the interests of the Progressive Conservative party, Mr. Bracken said the trip was made to gain acquaintance with "the thinking people of Canada" and only on one occasion had he, during the tour, voiced criticism of the government.

On that occasion he spoke of the "political cowardice" and "the hoax of the home defence army." The accuracy of this criticism had later been borne out by piece-meal attempts to deal with manpower problems and the disbandment of the 6th, 7th and 8th Divisions "which never at any time were operational divisions but were, in fact, part of the hoax to which I referred."

Mr. Bracken said the prime minister's criticism of other parties came with ill-grace from the head of a party which had assumed full responsibility for the war effort, and his statement that there had been no political activity by his own party was "unjust."

He spoke of Mr. King as the leader of a government which had "deluged and has virtually monopolized the radio since the war began with self-adulation of the most extravagant kind" and which had "overwhelmed the mails and filled the waste-baskets of the Dominion with propaganda reeking with speeches of cabinet ministers and highly paid literary productions of a whole army of government employees."

The Progressive Conservative leader took issue also with Mr. King's claim to continuing public support. He said the Gallup poll, to which Mr. King had made reference, showed that he now had only half the support he enjoyed in the last general election.

"For my part, as leader of the Progressive Conservative party in Canada, no threats, no matter how arrogant, will deter me from my course of co-operation with the government, reserving the right to criticize as I and my associates deem it necessary in the interests of the people of Canada," Mr. Bracken said.

Milk Supplies

Mr. Nadeau said it was estimated that during 1943 fluid milk sales to civilians would exceed those of 1942 by nine per cent. The cheese situation would be "most difficult" in the present year and domestic stocks would be greatly depleted.

Situation Tight.

The whole dairy situation was tight, but with the exception of cheese it would be possible to meet nearly all civilian demands, because of the butter ration program, a proposed evaporated milk ration program, and the depletion of reserve stocks of other products.

Canada would enter 1944 with "very low" dairy products stocks, production at its peak under present prices, labor and associated factors, and with demands continuing to expand. The 1944 program would call for all-out milk production.

No Prisoners Taken

Milijoi Gavrilovic, Yugoslav Embassy councillor, said in London that the Nazis, tacitly admitting the fierceness of the fighting in northeastern Italy, had directed their forces to take no more prisoners.

"German war criminals must answer individually if they flout the rules of war and slaughter prisoners of a duly-constituted army," the government spokesman warned.

Referring to differences between "Tito" and Mihailovic, he said he was more optimistic, as a result of the general Yugoslav opposition to the Germans, that the leaders of Yugoslav forces eventually would join under a common banner.

The Berlin radio, in a further acknowledgement of Yugoslav opposition in northern Italy, said that Nazi forces mopping up "Slovenian and Communist bands" in the area east of Gorizia, in northeastern Italy, were "progressing."

(The BBC heard by CBS, said an Allied warship "has brought arms to Yugoslav partisans along the Dalmatian coast.)

Faculty Motion Referred Back

MONTREAL, Sept. 30—(CP). — The question of creation of a Faculty of Theology at McGill University to replace the Presbyterian College, amalgamated with Knox College, Toronto, last term, was referred back to Presbyteries for discussion, when the subject was raised at to-day's session of the Montreal and Ottawa Synod. The Presbyteries will be asked to report directly to the General Assembly of the Church.

Rev. G. S. Lloyd of Cornwall, moved the matter be left to the Presbyteries, after delegates agreed they were not fully informed as to the details of the proposal.

The motion was supported by Dr. W. Orr Mulligan of Montreal.

C. M. Pitts of Ottawa objected to a motion by Dr. A. S. Reid of Montreal that the matter be left until two years after the war and the motion was defeated.

Mr. Pitts was elected convener of a committee to study post-war problems.

not so.

"The enemy was still in force on the outskirts of the town," he continued, "and after our troops had knocked out an anti-tank gun and had knocked out at bayonet point a machine-gun post that fired from a well hidden farm cart, the strength of resistance was made known.

"I had left my jeep and had walked down the road with my three friends.

"We stood in a knot by a street corner watching an assembly of armor when there as a blinding flash and a terrific explosion shook the ground.

"I was flung a great distance and was buried by falling debris. When I was able to look around I saw that my companions were dead.

Gingell suffered only scratches.

Ironically, news the correspondents had been killed reached London only a few hours after a prophetic story by Austin appeared in today's Daily Herald under the headline: "On the Road to Death."

"Along the road of death we were driving to the plain of Naples," the dispatch began.

"The worst is over," Austin wrote, "We have captured Camarelle... and are heading due east for Vesuvius and Naples.

"For the past five days of bitter fighting I have seen a mile added to the road of death each day."

These three deaths brought war casualties among British newspapermen to eight killed, 12 wounded, four missing and eight prisoners of war or interned.

(Two Canadian newspapermen have died in the war. Sam Robertson, London bureau superintendent of The Canadian Press, was drowned in 1941 when his ship was torpedoed off Eire while he was returning from a vacation in Canada. Edouard Baudry, CBC news broadcaster, died of wounds received when an aircraft carrying newsmen to Casablanca Churchill - Roosevelt conference flew over Spanish Morocco and came under Spanish anti-aircraft fire.

(In New York the magazine editor and publisher said 13 American war correspondents have been killed on far-flung fronts, three are missing, presumed dead, and 67 have been wounded.)

Was At Dieppe.

Austin served in the Battle of Britain as wing commander in charge of the press section of the R.A.F. fighter command. Returning to the Herald, he went on the Canadian-spearheaded Dieppe raid in August, 1942, then joined the British 1st Army as correspondent, going through the whole of the Tunisian campaign. He joined the 5th Army for the landing at Salerno.

Aged about 40, Austin had written three books, "We Landed at Dawn" —a story of Dieppe—"The Birth of an Army" and the government-sponsored "Fighter Command." Mrs. Austin survives with three daughters.

Mundy, aged 33, started newspaper work in Sydney, Australia, but soon came to London.

In 1941 he was sent to the east with the Australian Imperial forces, going through the Burma campaign. Last year he joined the British 8th Army for the North African and Tunisian campaigns.

Sale, 38, wrote "I Saw Berlin Burn" as the first phase in his description of a flight over Berlin last January 16 in a heavy British bomber. His chronicle of the bombing was so highly regarded he later lectured to many R.A.F. personnel on his experience in the raid.

Fuel Dealers Suggest Using Subsidy

Seeking an effective means of helping the local wood fuel trade to get back into operations, including production, R. H. Candy of the office of the Wood Fuel Controller, Ottawa, discussed with them the price structure which drove them out of that phase of their established business, at a meeting in the city hall this morning.

The session adjourned at one o'clock in the hope of reaching some definite understanding this afternoon. Peterborough and Lakefield fuel dealers and fuel wood operator-dealers were represented, with Mayor Hamilton presiding, and Harold R. Scott, M.P.P., and Reeve M. H. Johnston of North Monaghan present.

One of the proposals from the trade standpoint suggested that the problem of wood supply be left to the municipal fuel committee.

"We've got to have the dealers in on it," Mayor Hamilton replied. "The city cannot handle 35,000 cords of wood."

Mr. Candy reminded the meeting that the city council's participation was limited in scope by the Ontario Municipal Act.

Vindicate Prices

Several of the dealers pointed out that the present discussion of basic prices was a vindication of their trade in so far as it focussed at this stage attention on costs which had forced them out of action last winter and spring. One of the comments was that if Mr. Candy had been available early in the year the established fuel business here would have been able to meet conditions as they developed at that time, and the net result would probably have been an adequate supply of fuel wood for this community.

The public, it was said, had not been informed of basic prices which prevented the trade from continuing this year the operations they had planned. Dealers and other producers had been forced out of business by ceiling prices which left them with the alternative of financial loss, and the existing state of reduced supply was predicted by the trade when they urged the city months ago to "get into the wood business."

One of the statements of comparative prices was to the effect that slab wood was selling at $8 a cord in Lindsay as compared with $7 in Peterborough.

Selfless Interest

"I know the dealers here were the first to ask us to go into the wood business," said Mayor Hamilton. "I know they have been worried, and I can assure Mr. Candy that there is nothing selfish in their attitude."

Reeve Johnston expressed the wish that the suburban part of the township be considered on the same terms as the city in regard to fuel supply.

A suggestion of transportation subsidy was put forth by Mr. Candy as the most convenient solution to Peterborough's immediate problem, but nothing definite was determined at the noon recess.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 30 — (CP). — Rye the only grain trading freely on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, reached its highest levels since July, 1937, yesterday in a moderately active session.

Advances of more than 2 cents were registered as traders continued to focus their attention on this commodity following Tuesday's announcement that the Federal Government had suspended the wheat trading on the Exchange. Closing values were 1 to 1⅝ cents a bushel higher.

Cash wheat trade was at a standstill with the exception of a few adjustment transactions in top grades.

A few miutes later a British patrol arrived and went slowly up the street to the first corner and instantly the rattle of a German machine-gun broke the stillness. Then came the crack of an anti-tank gun

Flanked Outpost.

While we lay low British infantry, led by townspeople, slipped through gardens and over walls to flank the position, and it was finally silenced, with some prisoners taken.

This town was full of crazy people literally insane with joy. They were so happy they were forcing cigarettes on all of us instead of begging them.

Meanwhile the bells were ringing and it was like a fete day, with the war far away.

Road Blocked.

That didn't last long. On the road leading from the town to Pompei a German tank and two self-propelled artillery pieces boldly emerged. The tank planted itself squarely in the centre of the rad. Its big gun was poitned at the turn in the street. Nothing could come around the turn, not even a big British tank, without the Germans getting the first shot and it would prove fatal at that short range.

For a few moments we stood on that corner, practically looking down the barrel of the tank's big gun. It was utterly silent and seemingly dead there in the road. We saw British mortar shells exploding all around it and still there was no sign of life anywhere in or around the tank.

A British tank and a reconnaissance vehicle clattered up behind us Suddenly there was a crash that seemed to shake the world.

Like Blast Furnace

What felt like a blast furnace shot past us. A massive stone house trembled from the concussion and the street was suddenly filled with dust and smoke. It happened too swiftly for realization. We felt only the heat and the shock. Then I looked back over my shoulder.

The corner of the building where we had been standing 10 seconds before was blown to bits. Two figures, terribly still, lay beneath in a hole where the shell struck. They were Tommies with whom we had been talking. One had borrowed a match from us.

The British soldiers returned the fire and for a few sickening moments we pressed ourselves against a stone wall with shells passing in both directions. During a brief lull we escaped back down the street. The dancing Italians had all vanished. There was nobody in the streets but Tommies lying flat on the sidewalks.

Allies Pass

announced last Saturday that American casualties at Salerno, up to Sept. 15, totalled 3,497.)

The capture of Torre Annunziata would place the 5th Army nine miles from Naples' city limits along the flat plain bordering the Gulf.

Even if the Germans planned a temporary stand on the western slope of Vesuvius, it was probably the entry into Naples would be within a day or two.

In capturing Mercato San Severino the Allies continued to develop their flanking movement against the city. The town is eight miles northeast of Nocera, capture of which was announced yesterday, and about 12 miles southwest of Avellino, the communications centre east of Naples.

The capture of Naples will complement perfectly the earlier seizure of the Foggia air centre.

Naples' great harbor is big enough to accommodate a tremendous marshalling of force and may become the main fleet, supply and ground force base for a drive up the peninsula or into the Balkans.

Meanwhile, the slow pressure against the Germans promised to give to the Allies soon the substantial island base of Corsica. From there and from Sardina they can threaten the seaward flank of the enemy.

Gen. Montgomery's thrust northward along the Adriatic also poised a flanking threat to the Germans' next possible defence position along the Volturno river, some 20 miles north of Naples.

The 8th Army was not encountering any resistance worthy of the name and was expanding rapidly in the plain of Foggia which was now almost entirely under Allied domination.

The steady and studied development of invasion bases across the Adriatic from the Balkans was illustrated by the capture of Manfredonia on the spur of the boot, a fairly important seaport.

After being grounded several days by bad weather Allied air forces yesterday attacked rail and highway bridges heavily within a 25-mile radius east, northeast and north of Naples.

The approaches to the bottleneck bridge at Castelvenere on the Naples-Benevento road were ripped up in one of these forays.

The Middle East air force announced new bombings of enemy airdromes in Greece ond Rhodes, and said the Germans struck at the British-occupied island of Kos in the Dodecanese yesterday.

Medium Bombers Paste Wide Area Hitting Escape Routes Nazis Continue Naples Demolitions

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Sept. 30—(AP).—The Anglo-American 5th Army, advancing rapidly on Naples has pushed forward on the Naples plain toward the big Italian port, capturing Pompei and Mercato San Severino, a communique said today.

Pompei, ancient city at the foot of Mount Vesuvius which once destroyed it, lies along the coast about 10 miles from Naples. Mercato San Severino is about 22 miles southeast of Naples and eight miles northeast of Nocera the capture of which was announced yesterday.

On the Adriatic, the British 8th Army, which includes the Canadian 1st Division, continued to make satisfactory progress, the communique said, and reached the seaside town of Manfredonia, 20 miles as the crow flies from Zapponeta where Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's forces last were reported.

On the approaches to Naples the "enemy continues to cover his withdrawal by extensive demolitions," the war bulletin said.

Medium bombers of the North African Air Force took to the air and raided Cancello, Benevento Formia, Piano and Amorosi—all along escape routes that German forces must use in withdrawing before the advancing Allied forces.

Hit Road Junctions

The communique said road junctions around Cancello, 13 miles northeast of Naples, near Amorosi 27 miles to the northeast, and around Piano.

Fighters and fighter-bombers also swept over the Benevento battle area, 32 miles northeast of Naples toward the centre of the peninsula, attacking targets that presented themselves. Fighter-bombers shot up a bridge near Appollinare.

A night flight to Formia, along the coast 43 miles northwest of Naples, was the deepest penetration into enemy territory.

One Allied aircraft did not return during the day. No German planes were encountered, the communique said.

The bulletin made belated announcement of the destruction of three additional enemy aircraft in a dogfight Sept. 25.

Open Rink Bowling Tourney Great Success

Playing under ideal Autumn weather the ladies of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling club held their annual open rink tournament for the Duffus Trophy on Wednesday afternoon and evening. This was the tournament that was scheduled for July 14, but rain came during the afternoon, causing the tournament to be withdrawn.

However with rinks from Lindsay, Port Hope, Cobourg and our local club, a nice entry was on hand by 1.45 p.m. It was a glorious day and the bowling was in keeping with the weather—all that could be expected.

To Mrs. H. Wilson's rink from our own club goes the honor of winning first place and the J. J. Duffus Cup, with Mrs. W. Jardine, Lindsay, coming in second place. These two rinks were the only three game winners.

High for two wins went to Mrs. J. Arnold, Peterborough, and high single goes to Mrs. L. Bearne's rink, also of Peterborough.

During the intermission between the second and third games, the committee served hot soup and biscuits, and tea and cookies, which made a big hit with all the ladies.

The games were all over by eight o'clock, and we believe everybody went home happy.

We were informed last evening that we may have the lights for night bowling up to and including Saturday, October 2, and this being the case, here is our week-end program:—Friday night, 7.30 p.m., a big mixed tournament, draw from the board, fee 25c.

Saturday afternoon, men's open doubles, choose your own partner, entry fee $1.50 pair. 3 16-end games and to play right through.

Jewish Citizens Mark New Year

Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, beginning on Wednesday at sunset, continues through today and Friday and services are being held in Peterborough to celebrate the solemn occasion. Special prayers will be offered for the British Empire, for the King and Queen, for war victims and for the speedy bringing of final victory and peace.

The services this year, which will be under the direction of Rabbi Bronstein from Toronto, are being held at the new Beth-Israel Synagogue on Reid street, formerly the Trinity Sunday School hall. Recently purchased to take the place of the old synagogue on Aylmer street, it is being fixed up to serve as a place of worship, a community hall, Sunday School and Hebrew school for nightly instruction of Jewish children.

This is the beginning of year 5704 in the Jewish calendar and the holiday itself is one of particular solemnity. Jewish business houses generally are closed during the two days of the New Year and on Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, which will occur this year on Saturday, October 9, while Jewish school children remain absent from their classes in order to participate in the services.

Once a season of altar sacrifices, the New Year is now a time of penitence, prayer and self-security, a period when the individual prays for forgiveness and for strength and grace to meet the future trials of daily life. During the morning services the Shofar, a ram's horn, is sounded to remind the congregation of the judgment God passes on all men at this season, and to summon every person to repentance. Originally marking the beginning of the agricultural and economic year in Palestine, the holiday of the New Year has gradually developed into a day of judgment.

Cedar Creek Factory Maker Is Seymour Fair Cheese Champion

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 30 — Ideal weather attracted a crowd estmiated at close to three thousand people to the Campbellford Fair here yesterday and though entries in practically every section were fewer than those of a year ago directors had arranged a program of special events which more than compensated for any shortcoming on the part of exhibits.

As it has for the past two years, the fair again served the dual purpose of being an exhibition both for the farmer and the urban and rural school pupil. Two of the main events so far as the young boys were concerned were the Foal Club judging which took place in main ring where twelve colts were shown and placed by Agriculture Representative R. C. Banbury. The boys made an impressive sight as they lined up across the field for their showmanship contest which was won by Leslie Platt of Warkworth. Percy Greenly of Warkworth had the prize winning colt and the second prize winner was owned by W. W. Archer the Fair president and shown by Ed. Quinn. Equally interesting was the Calf Club in which twelve of the original contestants took part in the demonstration of showmanship.

Cheese Exhibit

Close to $1000. worth of the finest cheese in the province made up the chief display in the general exhibits building. A total of 36 cheese were shown by eight factories making an even bigger show than last year and Chief Dairy Instructor for Western Ontario and Central Ontario, J. M. Bain of London, who was one of the judges, described it as "one of the finest exhibits of cheese I've seen anywhere this season." James L. Irwin of the Federal Grading Staff, Belleville and W. H. Moore, Dairy Instructor, Peterborough assisted with the judging. Instructor J. A. Murray confirmed the fact the show was not only larger but included better quality cheese than was exhibited a year ago. There was over $80.00 offered in prizes for cheese and in addition to the money was the even more coveted esteem which went to the winning makers. The best cheese exhibited was made by Sam Hobbs of Cedar Creek factory and his product rated a score of 97.95 and won the Cheese Buyers' special prize. Other high scores were 97.15 made by Wes Remington, 97.75 earned by Doug. Rowe.

The exhibition of cattle was a reflection of the labor problem rather than of decreased interest in the fair. At least that was the opinion of officials who had visited other fairs this fall. Largest entry was in the Holstein class where two well known exhibitors E. L. Anderson and H. J. Petty competed. There was but a single herd of Ayrshire cattle represented while the Jersey section attracted three exhibitors two from the township of Seymour and one from Cannifton.

For those who were interested in softball an exhibition was staged between Seymour East and Seymour West. It was a seven inning match with Seymour West winning by a close 8 to 7 score, with Cliff Anderson pitcher for the winner, helping the cause along by a home run in the 4th inning. Bruce McComb was on the mound for Seymour East. An event which attracted great attention when the judging of horses was completed was the drawing contest for which the Society provided a stone boat loaded with the biggest stone they could find on the ground. Three teams completed and the winners were: 1 John Doyle of Marmora; 2 R. G. Curle, Campbellford; 3 Ernest Petherick, Campbellford.

Other special events and their winners were:

Potato Race— 1 Percy Edwards, Trenton; 2 Bradley Paul.

COBOURG

Utilities Worker Loses Insurance After Enlisting

COBOURG, Sept. 30 — (ENS)— Failure of the Cobourg Public Utilities Commission to subscribe in 1940 to the war service policy placed into effect by the H.E.P.C. on all employees insurance and pensions while in the armed services, has resulted in cancellation by the Confederation Life Co. of the insurance held by Lieut. E. Kelly. Lieut. Kelly, who was engineer at the pumping station enlisted in the Navy some time after war broke out.

The cancellation of the insurance was not made public until the meeting of the Cobourg Public Utilities Commission this week, although there was a reference to it in a meeting held on August 30. The press were not invited to the meeting of August 30.

The Commission has written a letter to the secretary of the H.E.P.C. with the view of securing the influence of the H.E.P.C. on their behalf but in reply the secretary informed the local commission that nothing could be done The local Commission is now considering contacting the members of the H.E.P.C. individually and failing that will endeavor to take out insurance for Lieut. Kelly in another company.

No Longer Employed

The letter of September 11 to the secretary of the H.E.P.C. sums up the situation and is as follows:

"We are taking the liberty of requesting the consideration of the H.E.P.C. regarding the cancellation of one of our employee's contract with the Pension and Insurance Fund.

"In 1940 when the War Service Agreement was first mentioned to the contributing municipalities, Cobourg Public Utilities did not see their way clear to enter into this agreement. At that time it did not appear that there would be any employees that would be affected by enlistment. However, in July 1941, one employee, Mr. E. B. Kelly, enlisted in the Navy and was granted leave of absence and was assured by the local Commission that they would carry on his contribution as well as their own, to the P. & I. Fund.

"It was not realized then that according to the interpretation this could not be done. Contributions were made to and accepted regularly by the Association until April 1943, when we were informed that Mr. Kelly's insurance and service annuity benefits must be cancelled as of July 1941. Mr. Kelly's enlistment was reported but the Confederation Life Association states that they had overlooked this fact in our annual return in 1942 and had not noticed it until they recieved the return in April of 1943.

Will Pay Arrears

"The cancellation is based chiefly on the fact that Mr. Kelly cannot be considered a contributing employee, in that he is working for another employer, his King and Country. Cheques covering the excess contributions since 1941 have been returned to us and our efforts to date to have Mr. Kelly re-instated, have failed. The local commission is very much concerned as Mr. Kelly is being made suffer a very heavy penalty. Admitting that they did not realize the consequences as they have developed, by not signing the War Services Agreement in 1940 the local Commission has advised the Confederation Life Association that they would now sign the agreement and pay such contributions as may be in arrears in order that Mr. Kelly may not lose his pension or insurance benefits. This request has also been refused.

"We have already informed Mr. Kelly of the Association's decision and he feels very keenly about it. If a personal interview with Dr. Hogg or the Commision would do anything to affect a reconsideration, we would respectfully ask that this be arranged. On the other hand we would appreciate the efforts of the Hydro Electric Power Commission on our behalf to have Mr. Kelly reinstated. Yours very truly, Public Utiities Commission of Cobourg.

Too Vague

Enlarging further on the matter the following statement was issued Wednesday by Harry McGuire, chairman of the Cobourg Public Utilities Commission:

"When the war service policy was first proposed back in 1940, the matter was somewhat vague and the Commission could be furnished no definite idea of the costs and the Commission felt it unwise to commit itself and subsequent Commissions to something of which we were still somewhat in the dark. With that in mind we didn't become a party to the agreement. It was not until April of this year that we were advised that Mr. Kelly's insurance must be cancelled. We are most anxious to have Mr. Kelly protected and we will make every effort to see that he is covered."

About 42 doctors were in attendance, coming from the Counties of Victoria, Peterborough, Durham. Northumberland, Prince Edward, Hastings and Haliburton.

Hon. Dr. R. P. Vivian, Minister of Public Health and Welfare, was to have been present for the luncheon yesterday but was unable to attend. E. W. Vanstone of the Medical Welfare Board, spoke instead.

Special Lectures.

At the clinical sessions lectures were given by Dr. Fred Blackwell of Cobourg on "Blood Transfusions"; Dr. George Peacock of Grafton, "Hydronephroma"; Dr. A. R. Richards of Cobourg, "Developmental Anomalies"; Dr. W. Birks of Bowmanville, "Post-partum Complications"; Dr George Stobie, of Belleville, "Carcinoma of Sigmoid".

At the scientific session, papers were given by Dr. F. I. Lewis of Toronto. "The Management of Fresh Fractures of the Neck of the Femur," and by Dr. W. C. McGuire of Hamilton on "The Kenny Method of Treating Infantile Paralysis."

Addressing the luncheon yesterday Dr. Torrington expresed his pleasure in the attendance of lady doctors at the meeting. During the course of his address he pointed out that 60 per cent of the medical students were from cities and 40 percent were from suburban areas.

Even Less Gasoline In 1944

The vastly improved war news and a few such concessions as more molasses and cuffs on trousers has aroused a general optimism about the large supplies of goods which will be available for civilian use in the immediate future. Perhaps it will be so. But one thing at least is certain: there will be less gasoline for civilian use in 1944 than there is now.

This depressing prediction is based on the information that crude oil production will reach its peak in that year, and will then begin to drop off, slowly but surely. At the same time, the military demand for gasoline and other petroleum products in 1944 will be greater than it has ever been before, and those demands will have to be met before anything else is considered.

Precisely what the effect of this shortage of gasoline for civilian use will be in Canada, we cannot say, but clearly some stricter form of rationing will be the result. In the U.S. preparations for more stringent rationing are now being made. Next March a new coupon system will be put in use and a checking system is to work with it, in order to stop the traffic in stolen or counterfeit coupons. No such system can be entirely foolproof, but it is expected that the new one will be more effective than anything used up to now.

The amount of gasoline for civilian use will be drastically curtailed, and local rationing boards will be given a quota within which they must work. The quota will not be based upon what civilian consumers think they need, but on what is left for them when services with prior claims have had their share. Civilian consumption comes seventh on the list of gasoline priorities, and it may be assumed that the supply will be scant.

Next year will be a year of mighty Allied offensives. The Nazis could tell us what those offensives cost in gasoline, fuel oil and lubricants. If we are going to strike with all our might on the land and in the air we shall need gasoline in enormous supply; the production of the U.S. has reached its peak of 4,400,000 barrels of crude oil a day and a portion of what is left when that has been put to its more essential uses will be ours.

As we have already said, the Canadian shortage will be measureable by the American shortage. So if you have a bicycle, you had better oil it up now in preparation for next summer. Or, on second thoughts, you had better get used to greasing it with lard.

A Notable Broadcast

We should like to comment briefly on the broadcast version of E. J. Pratt's narrative poem, Brebeuf and His Brethren, which was heard over the CBC network last Sunday night. The Examiner has frequently criticised the programs of the CBC and it is glad of this opportunity to praise one of them. It is for such broadcasts as this that the people of Canada support a national broadcasting company, and we hope that there will be more of them.

The poem appeared in the autumn of 1940, and enjoyed a widespread success. It tells the story of the Jesuit mission to the Huron Indians, which ended with the capture and martyrdom of the missionaries by the Iroquois. The dramatic theme was handled with restrained power by the ablest of living Canadian poets—perhaps the most considerable poet that this Dominion has so far produced. A musical setting for parts of the poem was written by Healey Willan, certainly our foremost living Canadian composer. The union of two such talents to produce a work on a Canadian theme is a matter of national importance, and we are glad that the CBC recognized that fact.

The CBC is in a position to give helpful recognition to much valuable artistic work and in the past two years or so it has made a genuine attempt to do so. The position of the Corporation is, understandably, a difficult one. Many listeners care only to hear imitations of the popular American programs. Many poets and musicians of indifferent merit are eager to foist their productions on the CBC. The production of such programs demands talent which is not always available. But the CBC is doing a better job now in this direction than it has done since its organization, and we urge it to keep up the good work.

Return Of The Cuff

The cuff has returned to the bottom of the trouser leg after a long and deeply-mourned absence. The two-pants suit has come back to cheer the sedentary worker. Things are looking up in the sartorial world.

During the period when men were not allowed to have cuffs on their trousers we noticed one or two interesting things. Many of our acquaintances always seemed to have cuffs on their trousers, and from this we deduced that they had not bought a new suit since the order became effective. This led us to some reflections on the longevity of men's clothes, and we at last decided that most men keep their suits for about three years, and then wear them for another two as gardening, fishing and lawn-mowing costumes. Of course there were plenty of cuffless trousers to be seen, too, and the interesting thing about them was that they generally looked as though they needed pressing. The cuff helps to keep the crease in the pants. Forty years ago, when people were dressier than they are now, few men wore trouser cuffs; but in those days they pressed their trousers down the sides and had several pairs of them. Modern income tax, figuratively speaking, has run off with our extra pairs of pants. Even if we can get two pair with a suit now, we shall have no use for the pockets in them.

Death At 132

Sayed Mehrem, an Egyptian who insisted that he was 132 years old, died in Chicago on September 27. He was an educated man, who spoke five languages fluently and earned his living as a calligrapher and illustrator. According to his own account, he was born in Cairo on January 11, 1811, and he remembers hearing Napoleon spoken of as an contemporary when he was a small boy. He had clear recollections of the British bombardment of Alexandria in 1880. It was in 1893 that he went to Chicago to help set up the "Streets of Cairo" exhibit for the World's Fair. He married a Chicago girl and became a naturalized American in 1899.

Perhaps Sayed Mehrem miscalculated his age by a year or two; who can tell. Certainly he was a very old man. At the time of his death he looked like an active man of 85, and never wore spectacles for his work, and at his death the chief physician of County Cook hospital declared that he was certainly well over ninety. How did he do it?

His own explanation was that he followed a philosophy of "self-harmony". He did not fume and fret about trifles. He did not regard his great age as phenomenal, though he had an ambition to live to be 200. "In Egypt we live better", he once said; "we pray five times a day, which is restful and helps rebuild body tissues". Egyptian prayer, we must remember, involves a degree of bending and stretching not usual in Occidental devotions. Are peace of mind, then, and supple joints the secrets of longevity? If so, the secret of Sayed Mehrem is like many another great secret—easy to explain but hard to put in action.

Some Trends In English Education

By EVELYN McDONALD, M.A.
Bloor Collegiate Institute, Toronto

(This is the second in a series of articles on Education in Ontario, prepared for publication by the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.)

A REVOLUTION has taken place in England. This seems to be generally accepted over there, and the great concern now is to shape and build, wisely and well, the new England that is emerging. By common consent, education is considered one of the chief problems to be dealt with. Nor is it being left to the authorities only to decide policy in these matters. The British people, very wise and experienced, realize that if their democracy is to survive in this complex world, their people must be prepared and trained in the principles and practices of self-government and be taught the knowledge and skills to enable them to hold the place in the world. Therefore in all quarters, people are studying and discussing education, forming committees to prepare reports, and making clear their determination that money needed will be forthcoming. Pamphlets on education after the war have been received here prepared by committees of the Conservative, the Liberal, the Communist parties, by the Trades Union Cnogress, the Workers' Educational Association, the Headmasters' Association, Teachers' Organizations, various Education and Municipal Authorities; all the church groups have reported on it, and the number of small books on the subject written by outstanding people is legion.

THE government, always responsive to strongly held public opinion, recently published a White Paper setting forth a scheme of educational reform proposed by Mr. Butler, the President of the Board of Education, in order that its various points might be widely discussed before legislation was drawn up. In late July, two days were allotted in Parliament for debate on this White Paper, an almost unheard of amount of time for matters of education, and yet it was not enough for all who wished to speak. The House endorsed the scheme with practically unanimous approval, urging that its policy should be speedily realised.

Many of the problems in education that England has to face are not our problems, but many of them we share.

Technical education is far more advanced in our cities than in England, but in both countries there is agreement that more and better training for vocations is needed, and there seems little desire to balk at the very considerable increased cost.

PRACTICALLY every committee, every writer on the subject of education in England and almost every speaker in the parliamentary debate are unanimous in their belief that religious instruction must be a part of the curriculum of every school, and that the aim should be for each school to become "a Christian community manifesting in all its activities the Christian ideal and way of life." The point is made that this is in no sense denominational instruction. One report states the issue in these terms: "the State must do its best to ensure that every child is given opportunity and help towards the awakening of its religious sense," and suggests that teachers who are themselves imbued with this religious sense should be provided with a syllabus approved by the Board of Education, drawn up after consultation with representatives of the major Christian denominations. The legal right of parents to withdraw their children from such classes is admitted.

GREAT stress is being laid on equality of opportunity in education, a principle to which we give at least lip-service. This is at the basis of the proposed raising of the school-leaving age from 14 to 15, and later to 16 years of age for full-time schooling, with part-time continued till 18, with the co-operation of industry. Our next article deals with the way in which one great industry, De Havilland's Aircraft Company, is doing its part in assisting education.

The proposed frame-work for the secondary school system, with the abolition of fees and the allocation of children to the type of post-primary education best suited to them on educational grounds, without regard to the financial or social position of the parents, involves equality of status and esteem for the variety of schools that must be provided. Many people feel that the boarding-school has merits that cannot be sacrificed without great loss to England. It will be interesting to watch developments.

THE need to educate the child as a citizen is emphasized over and over. Studies to develop his particular aptitudes, practical or artistic, are recognized as assential. That he must be able to begin to make his living when he leaves school is obvious. All this implies good health, good character, good will, some body of knowledge, certain skills. No wonder these people, awake to the importance of education, are scanning the curricula for "relevancy" of its content and training, the organization and physical equipment of their schools, the raising of the prodigious sums of money needed. But perhaps their greatest concern is the problem of securing and training a body of teachers good enough and numerous enough for the supremely important work they are given to do. And over there, the truth is faced that conditions for teachers must be greatly improved if the profession is to be expected to attract the excellent people required for the job.

Churchill on 'Highest Experts'

When I was moved by many arguments and forces in 1925 to return to the gold standard I was assured by the highest experts that we were anchoring ourselves to reality and stability and I accepted that advice. But what happened? We have no reality, no stability. The price of gold has risen since then by more than 70 per cent. Look at the enormously increased volume of commodities which have to be created off the same mortgage debt or loan. This monetary convulsion has now reached a pitch when I am persuaded that producers of new wealth will not tolerate indefinitely so hideous an oppression.—Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, M.P., in the House of Commons, April 21, 1932.

Prelude To Hitler

Let us have a world trading bank to ration industry as we now have a central bank (Bank of International Settlements) rationing currency. We will put a stop to over-production, not by increasing consumption but by restricting production to those financialy first class firms in all countries who take up shares in the bank.—Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England—in New York, 1931.

STILL AROUND

England In Canada

LONG before the non-Canadian gets to Victoria he has acquired some definite prejudices—either favourable or the reverse — about it....

It is usually—far too usually—referred to as "a little bit of England," which praise, repeated in slightly jealous tones by the Vancouverites and reprinted with lush adjectives by tourist pamphlets all the way across the country, can be tiresome....

It is a mild and pretty island at first glance, but certainly not one necessitating lyrical invocations, and certainly no more like "a little bit of England" than "a little bit of Maine."

The skeptic who has not yet seen Victoria shares something of the perversity of one who is to be introduced to a woman whose charms have been so dinned into his ears that he is resolved not to sucumb to them.

And then, as the boat passes the long breakwater and turns to enter Victoria Harbour, the domes of the Parliament Buildings and the roofs and turrets of the Empress Hotel swim into focus with astonishing dignity and grace.

The high, stone wall, with its romantic flight of steps at the end of the harbour, seems like a parapet supporting the castle-like hotel. The lawns which slope up to the Parliament Buildings are greener than any lawns anywhere before.

Flowers pour over window boxes and redeem the walls and yards of shops and cottages. They shine in brightly patterned beds in every conceivable spot. Even the street posts are misty with hanging baskets of blossoming scarlet and trailing green. There is the clop-clop of horses' feet and the clatter of a horse-drawn tallyho....

One of the advantages is that there is plenty of time to look at people: at the white-moustached, ruddy-cheeked gentleman in the good old tweed coat,....swinging the good old cane; at the dowager in long jet earrings, sweeping hat, and—actually in this year of our Lord—a feather boa. There is no doubt that these two are doing what they can to keep Victoria a little bit of England.

And so is the policeman, all complete in the uniform and helmet of a London bobby. And so are the shops, with their displays of British woollens, Irish linen, English shoes, and Scotch sweaters. And so are the tearooms, with their scones and crumpets, and those restaurants whose loyalty transports them so far that they advertise "English cooking."

Antique shops crowd one another on the main streets and remote residential streets. They are on avenues, down alleys, in side streets. But wherever they are, they make a specialty of English fireside benches, embroidered fire screens, and crewelwork footstools; of old English crystal and brass trivets and copper kettles and generous, ancient, silver platters and immense silver dish covers and teapots, and ruby glass goblets and finger bowls and carved oak chests and chairs and tables that have been brought across the sea.—From "The Ports of British Columbia," by Agnes Rothery. Whitehall Notebook

(By SCOTT YOUNG, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Sept. 30 (CP)—The parade was well under way when the terrifying voice of the guards instructor bawled across the drill square: "That sloppy indiivdual, fifth from the left, six paces forward march!"

Pte. The Earl of Clanwilliam turned nervously to the man beside him, Pte. The Marquess of Queensberry, and said: "That's you." Out into the embarrassing limelight stepped the Marquess.

It sounds like the first day of a revolution, but really it was just a Home Guard drill session. The Whitehall Home Guard had been chosen to mount a guard of honor at Buckingham Palace, and the Marquess of Queenberry had returned to London from a business trip, found he was to be part of the guard of honor, and rushed for the parade ground. Unfortunately, even an English lord is not infallible. He forgot his gaiters and helmet camouflage netting.

Peer or not, that made him sloppy. The guards instructor told him about that at some length, and eventually the Marquess marched with subdued mien back to the ranks, interrupted in his sorrowful retreat only by another bark from behind: "Shoulders up, me lord!"

That cost him his place in the palace guard.

Prime Minister and Mrs. Churchill's 35th wedding anniversary, celebrated this year in North America, started British political writers—greatest purveyors of reminiscence in the world—on a magnificent flow of wordage.

There were huge crowds at St. Margaret's, Westminster, for the wedding, not particularly to see the 33-year-old Churchill, president of the board of trade in the Liberal government of the day, as much as to see his bride, one of the most talked-of personalities of those days.

As Clementina Hozier, she had been introduced to Britain's future leader by his mother. She has proved herself an ideal wife for a politician, a first-rate speaker and a discriminating critic. She once told Lloyd George that if she were to die, she would leave written instructions behind on how to manage her husband. One of the prime directives would be to feed him well, she said.

They have four children—Diana, now Mrs. Duncan Sandys; Randolph, M.P. and British Army major; Sarah, wife of Vic Oliver, the American comedian, and Mary, an A.T.S. subaltern. There are three grandchildren.

Considerable interest followed Sir William Jowitt's recent statement that further steps for the implementation of parts of the Beveridge Plan will be announced soon. The government has accepted the principle of a comprehensive medical service and children's allowances, although the details are not known and perhaps have not yet been agreed upon by the cabinet ministers concerned.

Apparently other aspects of the plan will be dealt with in instalments, instead of one all-embracing piece of social legislation.

Blucher Tradition, Then and Now

"Would God that night or Blucher would come!" remarked the Duke of Wellington at a critical stage in the battle of Waterloo on a June day in 1815. The hard-living Prussian soldier, "old Marshal Vorwarts," arrived in time to make victory certain. Napoleon and his staff left the French army to its fate and it fled in disorder. Blucher's men relentlessly pursued the French throughout the night and the next day. They showed no mercy and plundered where they could.

After the war Marshal Blucher visited London. While driving through the streets, he gazed with admiration on the buildings and ejaculated, "What a city to sack!" The words were characteristic of the man and were in keeping with war practice then. As Longfellow puts it:

The tumult of each sacked and burning village;
The shout that every prayer for mercy drowns;
The soldier's revels in the midst of pillage;
The wail of famine in beleaguered towns.
The bursting shell, the gateway wrenched asunder,
The rattling musketry, the clashing blade;
And ever and anon, in tones of thunder,
The diapason of the cannonade.

The Bismarckian blood and iron policy still rules for the Prussia under Nazism as under Kaiser Imperialism. The Blucher belief in sacking and plunder is still practiced, witness the report from Allied Headquarters in North Africa telling of destruction of Naples—"the Germans have plunged Naples into a state of widespread horror, with curfew patrols killing 'thousands' of Italians in the last two weeks." Hitler's soldiers are burning, bombing, and killing civilians as the Allied Fifth Army advances. The Prussian spirit remains unchanged through the years.—Montreal Gazette.

Pre-war German Necks

After the pattern of the shoe exchange offices, exchange depots for men's collars have been created in several parts of the city of Brunswick. In many households there are numbers of collars which lie about useless, as they fitted pre-war necks and are now too large.—Hamburger Fremdenblatt.

ADMIRE THE DESIGN

Diner: "This soup's very thin, waiter."

Walter: "Yes, sir. The manager likes the people to admire the design on the plate."

A Bible Message

My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing.

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him....

Blessed is that man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him. (James 1: 2-5, 12.)

Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded. (James 4: 7, 8.)

There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able: but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it. (I Cor. 10: 13.)

Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good. (Rom. 12: 21.)

Unconsidered Trifles

"Where are you going this summer?"

"Well, I'm looking for novelty. I want to be in some place where I can do as I choose and where the summer scenery will be brand new to me."

"Have you found such a place?"

"Yes. I'm going to stay home."

Chaplain: "How could you have the heart to swindle people who trusted you?"

Prisoner: "But, parson, people who don't trust you can't be swindled."

Martha—We have been married over a year now, and we never quarrelled. If a difference of opinion arises and I am right, Henry always gives in immediately.

Neighbour—And if he is right?

Martha—Oh, that hasn't happened yet.

A keen-eyed mountaineer led his over-grown son into a country schoolhouse.

"This here boy's arter larnin," he announced. "What's yer bill o' fare?"

"My department, sir," replied the professor, "consists of arithmetic, algebra, geometry, and trigonometry."

"That'll do," interrupted the old man. "Load him up with triggernometry; he's the only poor shot in the family."

Brilliant Plan Fails

A man who wrote a weekly column for a newspaper had a brother-in-law who arrived for a week-end visit—and remained for six months. The journalist finally hit on a plan to get rid of the pest.

"Tonight at dinner," he told his wife, "I'll say that my column was especially good today. You will disagree and say that it was terrible. We'll then ask your brother for his opinion. If he agrees with me, you'll order him from the house. If he agrees with you, I'll order him from the house. So in either case, we'll get rid of him."

The wife agreed to the plan, and, exactly as arranged, the writer spoke up during dinner that night.

"I thought my column was pretty good today," he said.

"You're silly," retorted his wife. "It was just terrible."

She turned to her brother.

"What did you think, John?" she asked.

The guest shrugged.

"I don't know anything about it," he observed placidly. "I'm staying four more weeks!"

Family Doctors

That ratio should be reversed, he suggested, so that any district which was without a doctor might send a young man to medical school, defraying his expenses by a fund or some form of bursary, with the stipulation that when he graduated he would return to that community to practise for a length of time necessary to repay his cost of medical education.

"Of course," stated Dr. Torrington, "when I was starting to study medicine, a lady in my town told me that she would be glad to give me the family's business insofar as treatment of bruises and minor things like that were concerned, but for something serious she would prefer a doctor who would know something about it. And I guess that is often the case of the home town boy coming back to his own community to practise medicine."

"A questionnaire of students entering medicine revealed that about 75 per cent intended to be specialists, mostly in surgery, and the remainder wanted to be general practitioners. However, if we are to operate under a health insurance plan the old family physician will be the type of doctor most prevalent and it must be a case of 75 per cent of the medical students going through for general practitioners and the 25 per cent as specialists," declared the speaker.

No Union.

The Medical Association was not a union, the speaker pointed out. The doctor in getting more for his services, must give more to his patients. When a doctor received more and gave less, then it was time for the medical profession to hand its head. In regard to health insurance, the medical profession must be on its toes in order to get what it wanted, keeping in mind that it must give its best attention to health, at the same time maintaining the doctor's standard of living, and elevating the standard of living for the struggling doctor in outlying districts. Agriculture thought that the medical association should not control health insurance, but who was better qualified for its operation than the doctor, the speaker suggested.

Touching on medicine as covered in the Beveridge Plan, Dr. Torrington pointed out that under such a plan, the graduating doctor would receive $2,000 the first year and annual increases until at 46 years of age he would be getting $6,000 per year. He expressed the hope that such a system never came into effect in Canada. The doctor in Canada was not thinking of $6,000 a year when he was 46, but of getting enough for his bread and butter.

"We don't want to be in the Civil Service," asserted the speaker.

Larger Membership.

Dr. Torrington declared that he would like to see 100 per cent of the medical profession in the Medical Association as 100 per cent of the doctors were going to be affected by health insurance. He lauded the comprehension of the problem as shown by Dr. Vivian, and he foresaw the best of co-operation from the Ontario Department of Health. Under health insurance it would not be a case of sitting in the office waiting for business to come in the form of patients seeking treatment for their ailments, but rather a case of the doctor having to see that all in his charge are given preventative treatment. A much healthier state should prevail instead of the conditions of health as brought to attention through the military medical examinations of those entering the various armed services, he concluded.

Honey Crop In 1943 One Of Best In Years

OTTAWA, Sept. 30—(CP)—The 1943 honey crop is tentatively estimated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at 32,500,000 pounds one of the best on record. It exceeded the 1942 crop of 24,100,000 pounds by 8,400,000 pounds, or 35 per cent.

One-third of the total Canadian crop was produced in Ontario where production is estimated at 12,000,000 pounds, compared with short crop of 7,800,000 pounds in the previous year. The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 30 (AP) — Scribes travelling with the Dodgers report that there's another Brooklyn revolt brewing—and it won't likely be settled as easily as the summer flare-up . . . The veteran players are squawking that Leo Durocher cost them a chance for second place money by using too many rookies recently, yanking pitchers without good reasons, etc. . . . which seems to prove the only difference between a Dodger player and a Dodger fan is that the players say 'that bum,' instead of 'them bums.'

You Pick 'em

(Surveying, with a sigh of relief, the World Series relief flingers).

Yankees — Johnny Murphy and Jim Turner, the fireman and the milkman: You haven't heard so much of Murphy since Lefty Gomez left the Yanks but he's still the guy Joe McCarthy thinks about when the starter gets in trouble, has been in more than 30 games this season. "Grandma" has appeared in six world series games for 14 1-3 innings and has allowed just one earned run . . . Turner, rescued from the National League via Newark last season, is 39 years old but still a pretty good guy in the clutches.

Cardinals — With their pitching staff reduced to essentials, the Cards may have to use their starters as relief men, too, but they can call on Spud Krist, who pitched in three games in 24 hours last July. Rookie George Munger and pint-sized Murry Dickson . . . There's not an inning of world series experience in the trio.

Force Katan To Meet Black Comet

Approval of the Ontario Athletic Commission for the Katan-Clayborne bout for Peterborough has been officially ratified for next Tuesday night. Already it looks as if this important match will be the best attended mat program ever arranged here.

When John Katan met the Negro athlete there some six weeks ago and won a much-disputed decision, the Palermo Ukrainian declared that he would never wrestle in Peterborough again. Katan's reason was the hostile attitude of the fans here. And for six long weeks while fans and the Brock Arena management have been trying to get him to change his mind John "the Killer" has steadfastly stuck to his ban on this city. Considerable pressure has been needed to make the stubborn Katan agree to go through with the match, but he has been finally and officially forced into it.

Clayborne of course offered no difficulty since the powerful black wrestler has been asking for the match since that memorable night when Katan "stole" that final fall. That was the night that the fans here pretty well took matters into their own hands after the decision and harried Katan both in and out of the ring to such an extent that he made his famous declaration. Katan' feeling may be understandable since he did have to take a great deal of abuse that night both from his dusky opponent and the fans; but after all he did win and by not too ethical a method.

Anyway the match has been officially signed and Gentleman Jack Clayborne gets his chance at last. Judging by the Ebony Flash's two-straight win over Hogan on Monday night, the beautifully-built Dark Lightning of the mat game is out to prove that Peterborough really is an unhealthy place for Katan.

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

A flood of new light has been thrown on the Hattie Eakins military replacement incident by a letter published elsewhere in today's issue from F. R. Feaver, of Hamilton, secretary of the O.A.S.A. Right off the reel this column wishes to make it clear that this letter is the first intimation we have had that Eakins had not been given permission by the Ontario body to play for Genelecs in the O.A.S.A. playdowns. Like the public generally when Eakins took part in the first game against Oshawa here we assumed that the O.A.S.A. had given the Genelecs the green light and the decision was regarded locally as a black-eye for the Peterborough City Softball League which had ruled previously that Eakins was not eligible as a military replacement. It was on the basis of that understanding that we criticized the O.A.S.A. secretary for disregarding the circumstances in the case. It now turns out that Secretary Feaver adhered to the constitution which declares that military replacements can only be granted on the request of a local softball association. Because there was no such request from the City League there was no military replacement certificate issued for player Eakins, Secretary Feaver declares. In other words our criticism of the official was based on a wrong set of circumstances and we hasten, therefore, to offer our apologies to the O.A.S.A. secretary.

* * * * * *

The real offenders in this mixup have apparently been the Genelec management which chose to disregard the ruling of the Ontario body and played Eakins without permission just as it had previously ignored a similar ruling by the City Softball League executive and continued to use the Lindsay player in the local league finals. In short the Genelec management by its decision to use Eakins against Oshawa without permission from the O.A.S.A. deliberately tossed away any chance the team might have had of beating Oshawa for as Secretary Feaver points out, had Genelecs defeated the Colts with the use of Eakins "their team would have been disqualified in the next round." Why the management of Peterborough's representatives in the playoffs chose to make monkeys of its own players, the fans, and the City League by using a player without permission and thus tossed any hopes of trimming Oshawa into the discard before the series started somebody else will have to explain. Genelec complaints to the O.A.S.A. resulted in the disqualification of the champion 4th Battery on a technicality and in the Genelecs being named as Peterborough representatives. Why the management elected then to throw in the sponge in advance and turn the Oshawa series into nothing more than a couple of exhibition games will remain one of the sporting mysteries of the year.

They're In A Bigger Series

Only a year has gone by since the Cards and Yanks last met in the world series but there is a surprising difference in the lineups of the two clubs on the eve of this year's baseball classic. One surprising feature is that the first three players on both batting orders a year ago have disappeared. For the Yanks Shortstop Phil Rizzuto led off. The Scooter is now in Uncle Sam's navy. Second batter was the veteran Red Rolfe who is coaching at Yale and replaced on the Yanks batting array by a rookie third baseman. Third man was Roy Cullenbine, outfielder, who was traded to Cleveland. The Cards had their second baseman, switch-hitter, Jimmy Brown as leadoff man a year ago. The second St. Louis batter was the great centre fielder Terry Moore whose sensational fielding was one of the outstanding features of the 1942 series and third up was the hard-hitting Country Slaughter. All three of those Cards are now wearing the uniform of Uncle Sam. And of course these players are not all the stars who have disappeared. The Yanks go into the series without the services of Jolting Joe DiMaggio, the Yankee Clipper, of big Red Ruffing, always a world series pitching hero, and of Buddy Hassett, the first baseman of the 1942 club who did a spot of useful hitting in last year's series. On the other hand in addition to the players already named the Cards will not have Pitcher Johnnie Beazley who won two games for them a year ago. All of which makes this year's series depend to a considerable degree on which club has had the most success in filling the gaps.

* * * * * *

Marius Russo, Yank southpaw, has been looking like a world series possibility on the strength of recent games but his stock dropped a bit yesterday when he was beaten 3 to 6 by the Chicago White Sox. On the other hand the fact that Joe Gordon hit his 16th homer of the season in the second game of the double-header and that rookie Charlie Wensloff pitched a 7-hit shutout will probably be welcome news to Yank supporters. One of yesterday's brightest stars was Vernon Stephens, the St. Louis shortstop, who banged out his 20th homer of the season in the eleventh inning of a game with the Boston Red Sox to put the Brownies up and then when the Sox had tied it in their half came back with another circuit clout in the 13th to win the game 4 to 3. Another American League feature was Dizzy Trout's 19th victory of the campaign for the Tigers who beat Philadelphia in the second half of a double-header. And there was Rudy York who about cinched the home run honors by booming his 34 of the campaign.

Queen Mary Loses 2-1 In Soccer Tilt

King George soccer eleven got the break against Queen Mary in a hard-fought game on King Edward Park, when the East City boys won 2-1, K. Anderson getting the winners' counters; while K. Nicholls scored for Queen Mary. Both aggregations had splendid defensive tactics, but both forward lines lacked finish.

First Half

The opening exchanges opened up at a terrific pace that resulted in the defensive tactics of the full backs being evident as they tackled fearlessly to offset the attacking forwards. Twice did Queen Mary forwards go right through into goal to bang the ball past the upright with an open goal in front of them. Eventually K. Anderson, at centre half for King George, kept peppering away at goal, until a pass by Pollock to Swanston found the former testing the custodian but Anderson got the poor clearance to register quickly. Time and again, Queen Mary forwards had the advantage in taking the lead but their shooting was off the mark. Half time: King George 2, Queen Mary 0.

Second Half

Queen Mary team was changed a little in an endeavor to get a scoring player on the attack. They hammered away at King George goal repeatedly to witness the ball roll past the upright time and again or run right across the goal mouth as Bradley had three efforts in a row. From a foul kick outside the penalty line Nicholls converted as the ball was diverted into goal off a player to beat the goalie. Mid-field play continued even as the play run from end to end. Six minutes to go, a West-end player handled the ball. Anderson, King George, drove a rocket drive at the custodian who saved smartly but had too much sting behind it to hold. Queen Mary battled hard to get the equalizer. Full time: King George 2, Queen Mary 1.

Goal scorers: King George, K. Anderson; Queen Mary, K. Nicholls.

Queen Mary: A. Archibald, goal; J. Gray and D. Rose, full backs; K. Nicholls, J. Flowers and B. Collins, halves; R. Knapp, H. Bradley, P. Russell, L. Smith and R. Butcher, forwards; subs, T. Taylor, W. Finnie. V. Revoy, K. Grafstein.

King George: J. Stock, goal; B. Carr and B. Wyatt, full backs; R. Mounce, G. Rome and J. Millar, halves; R. Pollock, J. Swanston, K. Anderson, A. Payne, M. Van Allen, forwards; sub, J. Black.

SERIES STARTER — By Jack Sords

Genelecs Used Pitcher Eakins Without Permission Of O.A.S.A.

That Genelecs used Pitcher Hattie Eakins of Lindsay against Oshawa without the permission of the O.A.S.A. and that if they had happened to have won the series they would have been disqualified is revealed in a letter received by the sports editor of The Examiner from F. R. Feaver of Hamilton, O.A.S.A. secretary.

Here is the communication:

Hamilton, Sept. 27, 1943.

Dear Sir:

Regarding your "Tempest in a Tea Pot" story which appeared in your column of September 16th, I feel it is high time that an explanation was rendered you by this Association. I had hoped that such an explanation would not be necessary, as I assumed that the parties who had given you the information would correct it to the facts after perusing your story in print. As apparently no such move has been made, I take the time to stress the following points:

1. NO military replacement permit has been issued by the O.A.S.A. for Player Eakins.

2. Such military replacement permits are only issued at the request of the local Association involved

3. Repeatedly both Genelecs and the Peterborough City League representatives were informed that the replacement would not be allowed unless it was requested by the Peterborough Association.

4. As late as 12:10 a.m. on the morning of August 31st, the day of the first game with Oshawa, the Genelecs manager was informed in a telephone conversation that Eakins would not be allowed to play, as the Peterborough Association had not requested the replacement. When the Genelecs manager stated that arrangements had been made to secure Mr. Leether's approval upon presentation of signed statements, the O.A.S.A. secretary agreed that if Mr. Leether granted the replacement, the O.A.S.A. would issue the permit.

5. Likewise, at 11:30 p.m. on August 30th) (the same evening) Mr. Leether was informed over the telephone that no replacement permit had been issued and Eakins was not eligible to play in O.A.S.A. playdowns.

6. Nothing further on the matter was received from Peterborough; therefore, Eakins was not registered by the O.A.S.A. Naturally, had Genelecs defeated Oshawa with the use of Eakins, their team would have been disqualified in the next round, and Oshawa would have gone on.

You will note the underlying principle in all military replacements—that local associations request the permit for the replacement. Before issuing the request, the local association is required to check the bona-fides in each case. The O.A.S.A. checks further to assure that the replacement is for the same position.

Hoping that softball will go on to bigger and better achievements in Peterborough in the near future, we remain,

Yours sincerely,
F. R. FEAVER,
Secretary.

RICKEY GIVES DUROCHER OUTRIGHT RELEASE AS PLAYER-MANAGER

Dodgers Defeat Pirates 14-7; Cards Win 3-2

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer.

The baseball season may be closing, but the open season on managers is just starting.

In fact it might be said to have begun yesterday with some double talk by Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who announced that he was giving Leo Durocher his outright release as player-maanger, but might later consider him for a bench manager.

Rickey explained to a press conference at Pittsburg that "I have not thought of hiring anyone other than Durocher, but by giving him his release we will both be free to talk about next year without any feeling of compulsion on either side. If he wants to make a connection elsewhere, either in baseball, or radio, or the movies, he will be free to do so."

The last reference apparently was to reports Durocher might become an actors' agent in Hollywood.

Finishes 5th Season.

Durocher now is completing his fifth season as manager of the Dodgers, during which time he has won one National League pennant and never finished out of the First Division.

Before making his announcement Rickey watched the Dodgers score nine runs in the eighth inning to beat the Pirates 14-7 and oust Pittsburgh from third place in the standing.

St. Louis Cardinals clipped the Boston Braves 3-2 for the Redbirds' 19th triumph in 22 games with the Braves this year.

Johnny Vander Meer pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-0 decision over the Phillies with a four-hit performance and the New York Giants battled 14 innings to a 3-3 draw with the Chicago Cubs.

Clinch Second

The Washington Senators clinched second place in the American League by cutting down Cleveland twice in a twilight-night doubleheader 5-2 and 7-4. This will be the first time in seven years the Senators have finished in the first division.

The New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox split a pair of shutouts with Bill Dietrich winning 3-0 for the Sox in the first game and Charley Wensloff retaliating with a 4-0 whitewashing in the nightcap.

Detroit divided a doubleheader with Philadelphia, the A's taking the first game 8-2 behind the seven-hit hurling of Jesse Flores and the Tigers coming back to win the afterpiece 9-1 with Paul (Dizzy) Trout pitching a six-hitter for his 19th triumph.

Vernon Stephens beat the Boston Red Sox 4-3 in 13 innings for the St. Louis Browns in the first half of a doubleheader, but the second game ended in a 3-3 draw when darkness halted play after nine innings.

Three Southpaws And Cooper To Oppose Yanks

By CHARLES D. DUNKLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30 (AP)—Billy Southworth, manager of the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals, is pondering the problem of selecting his starting pitcher for the opening game of the World's Series against the Yankees in New York next Tuesday.

It could be strapping Morton Cooper, leading the National League pitchers for the second successive year, or one of a trio of left handers, Max Lanier, Al Brable or Harry Brecheen.

The 29-year-old Cooper, a right hander, winner of 21 victories against eight defeats this season, is the logical choice although he was twice blasted by the Yankees in the 1942 classic.

Has Injury

But Southworth is convinced Cooper is capable of defeating them. Cooper will be rested until the series because of a painful soreness in his right shoulder.

Southworth is not alarmed over Cooper's condition, and he believes he will respond to seven days rest.

The pitcher is confident his shoulder soreness will disappear. He's determined and eager to get another crack at the Yankees despite the shellacking they gave him a year ago.

"They gave it to me a couple of times, but they can't do it again," Cooper boasted. "If I start, I'll win this time."

Southworth may switch to a southpaw because he reasons that Yanks are experiencing some difficulty in hitting left handers. He may decide to open with Lanier, whose pitching has been better this season than ever before. Currently, Lanier has won 15 out of 22 starts. He worked in only three innings, pitched to 11 men, yielded two singles but prevented the American League champions from scoring in the 1942 series.

Howell Chosen To Start Series

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Sept. 30.—(AP).— Regardless of whether the Syracuse Chiefs, winners of the International League play-offs and Columbus Red Birds, American Association champions, open their Little World series here Friday or Saturday night, Manager Jewet Ens will stand pat on his choice of Millard (Dixie) Howell. Chiefs' right hander, to hurl the opening contest.

Howell had a record of 13 victories and nine defeats in the regular season and triumphed in three of four efforts in the post-season series with Newark and Toronto.

Leo Miller, general manager of the Syracuse club, said the Chiefs would prefer to open the series Saturday night because such an arrangement probably would mean bigger gate receipts for the players, who share in the first four games. A decision on the opening will be made later to-day.

Etten Faces First World Series

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Sept. 30—(CP)—National Hockey League clubs are dredging deep in search of crowd-pleasing players to replace those called for military service. They're coming up with the right type, too. Montreal Canadiens signed two of the most colorful players in hockey in the Lemay brothers, Tony and Albert. These Flying Frenchmen from St. Boniface, Man., played junior and senior hockey in Winnipeg before joining Wembley Lions in the English league. They were colorful figures in English hockey before their return to Canada. They carried their color into Quebec senior loops and were star forwards with Ottawa Senators. Baz O'Meara of the Montreal Star comments: "Both are the vivid type that will set the millionaires in ecstasies. Albert who is a bit of an actor can run the emotional gamut in a manner missing since the days of Jack Loviolette. They have flair and they have flavor. There will be nights when they will seem almost heroic in their capering." Albert is 32, Tony two years younger.

Canadiens' new defenceman, 29-year-old Stan Pratt, is the last of the old Ottawa Primrose juniors to move into the big time although he had had previous offers from professional clubs. Pratt, Bill Cowley, Murph Chamberlain were members of the 1931 Primroses who lost in the Memorial Cup final to Winnipeg Elmwoods, starring Billy Mackenzie. Dan Cowley, Bill's older brother, was the star of that Primrose team but Dan broke a leg pole-vaulting that year and never figured in hockey afterwards.

Predictions, Unlimited:

Bill Gaynon of the Niagara Falls Review passes on rumors that American Hockey League prospects are none too good and that the task of keeping the league in operation rests with Eddie Shore of Buffalo and Al Sutphin of Cleveland. Gaynon says failure of Buffalo and Cleveland to make the N.H.L. this year convinced Shore and Sutphin that if they hope to gain major league status for their clubs they must do so through another league than the National. The inference is Eddie and Al hope to gain major status for the American League after the war.

Overcoming handicaps is nothing new to screen stars. Jinx Falkenburg injured her legs as a child, took up swimming to mend them, became a champion and a screen star. Joan Fontaine was a sick youngster but won back her strength and went on to fame. Barbara Hale suffered from a hip ailment until she was 14 and now will sing and dance in "Higher and Higher." Claudette Colbert spoke only French until she entered High School. You've got to keep trying. . . . For "Buffalo Bill" a goodly number of Indians were required to use bow and arrows and paint themselves with tribal markings. They had to be taught by white men. . . . When the old Bob Hope film, "The Ghost Breakers," played Detroit a publicity man arranged for Hope to visit a haunted house. Thousands of fans came along, so it wasn't very ghostly. Hope got one scare when he sat on an old bed and the mattress began to move. It turned out that a fan had hidden under the bed.

Welles has been running a magic show for servicemen and Hayworth acted as his stooge. When Mature was told of the marriage he said, "I guess the way to a woman's heart is to saw her in half." . . . Judy Garland's sister is a script girl. . . . The late Leslie Howard's last film is not "Spitfire" but "The Lamp Still Burns," which will be released soon. Howard's daughter, Leslie, is about to make her screen debut. . . . A new film, called "Roger Touhy—Gangster," is about the life of that criminal, now in jail. He was offered $1,000 to say "Crime Doesn't Pay" at the end of the picture but refused it.

Laird Cregar, the heavyweight, will sing, dance and wear a wooden leg in the screen version of "Knickerbocker Holiday." Walter Huston played the role on the stage. . . . Sonny Tufts, who made such a hit in "So Proudly We Hail," can only collect a small part of the money his success will bring. Like Frank Sinatra, Tufts sold portions of his future earnings to various people with faith in him who advanced money to keep him trying. . . . Hollywood's juvenile actors, 1,285 of them, are looked after by the Screen Children's Guild. They average $10.50 per day when working and get $25 for speaking a line. Membership is confined to children from six months to 14 years of age. To get a chance in Hollywood you have to make a reputation elsewhere. Gale Robbins was Miss Chicago, Trudy Marshall a billboard model, June Haver won a music contest, and Jeanne Crane a beauty contest winner. All will be seen soon.

Nazi Retreat Forced By Slav Guerillas

LONDON, Sept. 30 (CP) — A patriot communique broadcast today from somewhere in Yugoslavia said that guerilla forces had forced German troops to retreat "at many places" near the northeastern Italian city of Gorizia and at Ljubljana, in Yugoslavia.

The war bulletin, recorded here by Reuters News Agency, made no mention of how far the irregulars had swept past Gorizia, 25 miles west of the Yugoslav border and 30 miles northwest of Trieste, but the London Daily Mail, quoting German radio accounts, said the guerillas had penetrated 100 miles into northern Italy to the Venice area.

On 125 Mile Front

This account declared fighting was in progress along a 125-mile front between Venice and Trieste to the northeast and northward toward the Austrian border in the Dolemite foothills.

The newspaper quoted a Berlin radio spokesman as saying that the entire area was "unsafe" and that German troop movements were possible only in convoys. Roads, bridges and railways were said to have been blasted.

South along the eastern shore of the Adriatic, the Germans were said to be rushing additional forces to the Dalmatian coastal sector to strengthen the battered troops which recaptured the port of Split after 15 days of fighting.

The broadcast Yugoslav communique today said heavy fighting was in progress near that city, the evacuation of which had been admitted earlier.

Attack Column.

In the port of Susak, adjoining the Italian city of FFiume, all the positions were said to be firmly held with heavy losses having been inflicted upon the enemy.

Units of the First Croat Corps were credited with killing 60 Germans and destroying 11 trucks in an attack on a German column moving between Bihac and Kin. Other units derailed a German military train on the railway between Brod and Zagreb.

The Yugoslav fighting "without a doubt is preliminary to major events in the Balkans which may lead to a junction of the Allied and Soviet Armies," the Daily Telegraph said.

Meanwhile, the arrival in Cairo of young King Peter of Yugoslavia was viewed in London as the likely forerunner of an Allied move to bring about a unification of the two Yugoslav guerilla armies which together are estimated to total around 300,000 men.

Allied officers are said to be attached to the headquarters of both Gen. Draja Mihailovic, the Yugoslav Minister of War, and the rival guerilla leader, Josip Broz ("General Tito").

These Allied representatives, it is said in London, are unable to bring about a common understanding between the two leaders. Yugoslavs here said there had been no recent reports of action by Mihailovic's forces, centred in Southern Yugoslavia.

These same sources said "Tito" recently has renewed an oldstanding accusation that Mihailovic openly collaborated with the Germans.

F.B.I. Investigates Half Million Dollar Fire

The Erie freight depot and the Eagle Rubber Company plant, engaged in war production, were destroyed. Blazing oil from the wrecked cars ran into the sewers and threatened the residential district. Five persons were treated for injuries. Damage is estimated at $500,000. Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation launched an immediate probe of the fire.

Troop Carrier

"She went flat out from England with men and stores representing half a fully-equipped division. Her passage from an English port, right around the Cape to Port Suez, a distance of some 12,000 miles, was made in a few weeks—including a stop at a South African port."

"It is safe to say," the correspondent added, "that the Queen Mary played a bigger part than any other ship and perhaps the biggest individual part of any fighting unit in saving the situation.'

Fully-Loaded

With a full load of American troops aboard in the late winter in 1942, the writer said, the liner ran into giant storm-lashed seas which almost upset her. She was heading for a northwestern port and an enormous wave hit her broadside some 700 miles from port.

"She listed until her upper decks were awash and those who had sailed in her since she first took to the sea were convinced she would never right herself," the correspondent wrote.

"Her safety depended on no more than five inches. Had she gone those inches further to port the Queen Mary would have been no more."

It was only exceptional seamanship on the part of bridge officers that saw her through that tense period," the correspondent wrote.

"By a quick turn of the helm her bows were brought head on to this exceptional wave and she was safe."

In addition to taking Allied troops to the fighting front the Queen Mary, which has accommodations to carry 12,000 to 20,000 men—has carried to captivity thousands upon thousands of Italian and German prisoners of war.

Relieved Pains in Back and Hips, Says This Local Lady

Has High Praise For Syntona as Nerves Are Relaxed and Sleep Is More Restful. Condition Followed Indigestion, Gas, Acidity and Heartburn.

"The way Syntona has helped me is just grand and I will be glad to have others know about it," said Mrs. Florence Hinchcliffe in a recent report.

"I had been troubled with indigestion, stomach gas, acidity and heartburn. Then, severe pains set into my hips and back. These pains became so bad I couldn't even walk at times. My nerves were bad. I slept poorly, and I suffered with frequent headaches and constipation.

"I wasn't taking Syntona long before my food began to digest better without all that indigestion, sourness and gas. Then the pains went away and my nerves were relaxed. I sleep better now and I arise mornings feeling rested and happy."

Syntona contains no harmful drugs or depressors. It is made only from the pure extracts of herbs, roots and barks that aid in proper assimilation of food to build sound bodies and strong, healthy nerves. It rids the system of irritating acids and poisonous waste matter. Many who have used it say that even after the first few days, the whole system takes on a new feeling of energy and resistance.

Come to Elliott's Drug Store, Peterborough, to-day and find out for yourself about Syntona. It has helped hundreds here and can do the same for you.—(Advt.)

Education In England Is Undergoing Great Change

By JAMES A. ROY

The goodwill expressed by English people towards Canadians is almost touching; they will do anything for a Canadian. But their ignorance of Canada and of Canadian affairs can often be described as abysmal. It is almost as great as the ignorance of many Canadians about English affairs — my own for example. I am not talking about the person who is commonly referred to as the "man in the street" but about highly educated and intelligent people. The other day a very prominent editor in Fleet Street asked me: "Tell me, how is Malcolm MacDonald getting on in Canada. You know, the fellow who took John Buchan's job?" I tried to explain that whatever Malcolm MacDonald is supposed to do in Canada is quite different from what the Governor-General does. I don't know whether my explanation registered or not. But only a few years ago a venerable Canadian assured me that Monsieur Taschereau was Prime Minister of Canada.

It is not easy to find, or even to suggest a quick remedy for this state of affairs. The present high commissioner, Vincent Massey, and his wife, and able liaison officer, Campbell Moodie, do all they can to spread a knowledge of Canada among the English. There are thousand of service men and women from the Dominion in Britain at the moment. And still the fog of ignorance lifts hardly at all. Posters advertising Canada do very little to help; they arouse a vague wanderlust in the minds of a few who say to you: "I have never been in Canada but I should awfully like go there some day." But most of them never go. They remain perforce chained to their desks in London, and, besides, people are so busy these days with their immediate affairs that they have no time for anything else.

It is to be hoped, now that Canada has made a fine position for herself in the world, that she will begin to produce a literature that will interpret something of the life of that portion of North America which is called Canada. There is no representative poet of Canada. Canada has no great novelist and no great dramatist. No matter what her achievements may be in financial and economic spheres, the Dominion will never be satisfied with herself until she has a literature worthy of herself. Give her time! Of course she must have time! England herself is producing nothing of great importance at the moment, but her poets and dramatists and novelists have more time now, possibly, to spread and maintain her fair fame throughout the world than her bankers and brokers, her industrialists and her practical men of affairs.

Education In England

The Public Schools (private schools in Canada, like Upper Canada College), are a very small fraction of the population of England, but in the past public school products have played a role in English history out of all proportion to their numbers. Until recent times, the Public Schools provided England with its statesmen, its soldiers, its viceroys and governors-general, its bankers, its bishops, its judges, its barristers. Today a considerable proportion of Mr. Churchill's cabinet are Public School boys, but that is largely fortuitous. The era of the dominance of the Public Schools in England is past and their future is problematical. The Leftists want to abolish them altogether. It is not likely that they will be abolished, but if they are to continue to exist it can only be under very different conditions. The future of the English public schools is greatly exercising English educationalists today.

The two chief causes of the present plight of the English Public Schools are, according to an official of the Board of Education with whom I discussed the matter:

(1) Decline in revenue;
(2) Decline in the birth rate.

People who used to send their boys to Public Schools can no longer afford the necessary fees. The declining birth rate among the class of people who would normally send their sons to Public Schools means that the recruitment for the Public Schools has become inadequate.

One effect of the higher income tax is that in future more and more people will send their children to state-aided schools which are in the end possibly not less efficient.

The result of the deliberations of the Fleming Committee now sitting are not yet published, but the probabilities are, or so they seem to the average person not in the know, that the committee has come to the conclusion that Public Schools must be brought into closer relation with the state system, i.e. they must become more accessible as a condition of their getting state aid.

Otherwise education is going on much as usual. The most serious difficulty is a shortage of men teachers. The education authorities have tried to meet the situation by getting married women teachers. These women, who had lost their appointments on marriage, were available for reserves and have been a great standby. In fact, it is difficult to see how education could have been carried on without them. Thus again the vital importance of women in the war effort has been proved beyond all possibility of doubt.

The present situation with regard to women teachers is likely to be permanent: that is to say, they will not lose their jobs in future if they marry. The wholesale exclusion of married women in England from the teaching profession has been a big mistake; the idea that they ought not to be in the market competing with men belongs to the bad old days. Married women must have a permanent place in education in the future.

In any case there is certain to be a grave shortage of teachers in the near future. The whole problem is being considered at the moment by a committee on the training and recruitment of teachers. It is estimated that if certain education reforms are to be carried into effect about 50 to 60 per cent more teachers will be required. The reason for the committee on this training and recruitment of teachers is to advise on this. The education authorities are trying to attract men and women at present in the services to the teaching profession by propaganda emphasizing the attractiveness of the teaching profession. There is a general feeling that the teaching profession in the past has been recruited on too narrow a basis

Over $63,000 Now Sent For War Victims

For the 25th time, the management of the Peterborough District British War Victims Fund is happy to announce the cabling of money to the Lord Mayor of London to give assistance to those who have suffered through air raids over Britain.

The amount sent this time is £500. and this coupled with what has been previously sent to them, now makes a total of £14,100, all of which has involved a sum of approximately $63,140.00 in Canadian funds. Some idea of how this has been received will be given in this column on Friday, when quotations from a letter just received from the Lord Mayor of London will be given.

When the fund first commenced operations, no one ever visualized that it would reach such proportions as this, and the results obtained speak loudly to the credit of the citizens of this city and the district.

Young Children Help

Last Saturday a group of school children headed by 12 year old Doreen Gilmour of 56 Morrow St., held a bazaar at the booth situated at the north-west corner of Lansdowne and George streets, an ideal spot for an event of this kind, and after paying $1.00 for its rent, they had a net proceeds of $17.18 which is included in today's list of receipts.

Associated with her in this effort of good for others were Eileen Shaughnessy, Barbara O'Reilly, Geraldine Bloom, Mary Lou Quinell and Pauline O'Connell, all of them pupils at Sacred Heart School and Confederation School.

These children sold a variety of goods such as canned goods, home made candy and cookies, chocolate milk, apples, soap, custard, jellies and novelties of all kinds, besides holding a small draw on a basket of groceries which was won by G. Johnson of 157 Morrow street. The girls wished expressly to thank the Clancey's, Silverwoods and Sunshine Dairies for their donations of chocolate milk, and the many people who assisted either by donations or purchases to help their effort to be such a success. An attractive card was provided by Doreen Gilmour's father for the booth, and one can easily sense that where such moral support is given children by their parents, children work with greater enthusiasm and success.

On the market last Saturday, Mrs. V. Sweeting conducted a guessing contest on a citron which she had donated for that purpose, and at five cents a guess, this realized $1.50 for the fund. This was won by Mrs. A. Murphy of 288 Brock street, her guess being only four ounces away from the 17 lbs. and 12 ozs. that it actually weighed. There were guesses all the way from 7 to 50 lbs on it.

Then girl guide Zella Chapman who was assisted by Annie Blackburn at the market stall are credited today with $1.10 from the sale of produce, and they also sold tickets for a draw on a silver pyrex pie dish donated by Warne's Jewellery store, the draw for which will be made after it has had another turn at the market this next Saturday.

Note Re Garibaldi

Through the mail comes a donation of $2. from one who wishes to be known as "A Friend," who requested some information in regard to Garibaldi, and Mr. Churchill's recent mention of Garibaldi's curse. This Italian patriot was the leader of the Revolutionary movement which after previous reverses, succeeded in capturing Naples in 1860, which resulted in a unified Italian Nation with the House of Savoy as its head, and having had the sympathy and the help of Great Britain in this matter, he uttered the curse which he said would descend on the head of any Italian who should act to sever the good relations then existent between the people of Italy and Great Britain. Recent events would seem to imply that the prophesy he made is coming true.

The donation which actually put the fund over the top for its latest achievement comes from a constant helper, through the penny box located at the Empress Hotel, where Chris Graham takes the utmost in personal interest by giving it a daily boost with his own hand.

It would seem an appropriate thing that from the very steadiness that this one activity has given to the fund, that it should be the means of adding the finishing touch to one of the many donations it has had a hand in helping to raise.

A last minute reminder is injected in regard to the Bingo and Draw being conducted to-night in the Orange Hall on Brock street by the South-end Ladies Conservative Association commencing at 8 o'clock sharp on behalf of the fund.

A JUVENILE CRAP GAME

Officers Leo Murphy and John Morrow, travelling along an Ashburnham street in a police cruiser Wednesday night surprised a juvenile crap game being carried on under a street light. Seven boys, ranging from 14 to 16 years of age were so intent in watching the galloping dominoes that they did not notice the police car until it had pulled up beside them.

FINED FOR DRUNKENNESS

Thomas Gorman and Maurice Meade both pleaded guilty when charged in police court this morning with having been drunk. "Hasn't this man been here recently," asked Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. when Gorman's case was called. "It was for begging the last time," Inspector James F. Reid stated.

DRIVING TOO FAST

FINED ON TWO COUNTS

Mrs. June Patterson, Toronto, was driving her car in Norwood recently and she made the mistake of travelling too fast when Provincial Constable Archie Grayling of Havelock was in the vicinity. As a result she was charged with driving faster than 40 miles an hour and when it was discovered that she did not possess a driver's license another charge followed. This morning Mrs. Patterson entered a written plea of guilty on both counts and was fined $15 and $1.75 costs for speeding and $10 and $2.50 costs for driving without a license.

A RECORD POTATO

1,300 Present To Try Luck On Radio Quiz

A large crowd estimated at about 1,300 people attended the Treasure Trail radio quiz program and dancing entertainment sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, Wednesday night at the Brock Street Arena. Only the second occasion on which the Treasure Trail has been broadcast outside of studios in Toronto, the program from the stage of the arena went off without a hitch and was very well received by an enthusiastic audience.

Spot dances, door prizes and a jitterbug contest were features of the evening in addition to the network broadcast, and so popular was the competition among the exponents of the modern dance that a request performance was given after the conclusion of the main show by the jitterbug experts, who were definitely "on the beam."

First prize winners in the contest were Jack Dugan and Helen Sage, $15; while second honors were carried off by Frank Vasey and Vi Meadows, $10.

No Mistake

A special stunt involving Harland Seans proved that he was not easily fooled in the matter of his wife's identity. Blindfolded, he was told he would be confronted with three girls who would wear the same coat, and was asked to embrace each one in turn and decide which was his wife, Mr. Seans was crossed up and he hugged the same girl— who was not his wife — three times in a row, but remained firm in the conviction that he hadn't embraced his wife.

On the Treasure Trail the telephone question was answered by D. W. Kinghorn of Windsor, with a pot of $75 in prospect, but he ran into difficulty with the question: "What is the capital of Alaska?" giving Dawson City as the answer instead of Juneau. Beryl Dobbin pulled the letter, giving Mr. Kinghorn's name, from the box.

Prize questions were won by contestants on the stage of the Brock Arena as follows: Robert Watt, $5; Alene Holt, $2; Nora Condon, $4; Clarence Black, $1; Laurence Outram, $2; May Caccavella, $2; Jack Hicks, $1; Jean Davis, $2; Ron Calder, $1; J. H. Daynes, $1; Isadore Gordon, $1. Jack Seymour missed on a difficult question which asked when the lightning rod was invented, the correct answer to which was 1752.

Harold McFarlane and his melody Men provided music for the dancing.

William Stevens Pleads Not Guilty

Brought back from Toronto early this morning by Detective Sergt. W. E. Meagher and Officer Archie Menzies, William Stevens was arraigned in police court today on two charges of false pretences.

The indictment in one case read that he had obtained $15 from Schneider-Alexander Limited on the ground that he was still employed by the Silversmith Company and in the other that he had secured $17.68 from Elsie Bennett on the ground that he had an account in a Toronto branch of the Bank of Commerce. These claims the indictment alleged to have been false.

Stevens pleaded not guilty to both charges. The prosecution was not ready to go on with the case this morning and the accused was remanded until next week, with bail fixed at $250.

Names Needed For Parcels

Two weeks ago a commitee the Peterborough Women's Active Army Auxiliary and the IODE chapters of the city accepted the task of compiling a list of all the men and women of Peterborough who are serving in the army oustide of Canada. The project was widely advertised, in the newspaper columns, and the local theatres gave space on their screens. Members of the organizations did everything possible to secure an up-to-date list.

In spite of these efforts there are still many whose names have not yet been tabulated because their relatives have not supplied the necessary information. Every member of the army would like to be remembered by his home town at Christmas but unless relatives act quickly there will be many who will conclude that they have been forgotten. The list must be completed on October 1. Please phone names and addresses at once to 8401 or 3609 or 9165.

MOUNT JULIAN

Anglican Church Observes Golden Jubilee

MOUNT JULIAN, Sept. 30 — (ENS). — Holy Trinity Anglican Church was packed by the large congregation which attended its 50th anniversary service on Sunday afternoon. Harvest festival was held at the same service, the church being decorated with the fruits and grains of the season.

His Grace Archbishop Derwyn T. Owen dedicated the honor roll and the font cover. The latter was donated by Douglas Hammond of Peterborough in memory of the late L.-Bdr. William C. Bronson who died in England.

The following names are on the honor roll: Flt. Lieut. N. D. Knox, L.-Bdr. W. C. Bronson, Pte. F. Dunford, Spr. J. Dunford, Seaman D. Dunford, Pte. F. Shewen, Spr. C. Shewen, AW1 E. Shewen, Sgt. G. Booth.

Recalls Early Church.

Following a short address by Archbishop Owen, Canon Hartley of Toronto took charge of the anniversary service. Canon Heartly was stationed at this mission, assisting Canon Harding when the church was built fifty years ago. Notes from Canon Harding's diary gave facts, figures and dates, while Canon Hartley completed the history from memory, of how the church was built back in those pioneer days, much of the labor and material being given free by the pioneers, many of whom still have descendants belonging to this church.

He also recalled the hardships and difficulties experienced while conducting services throughout this mission before the church was built. Services had been held first in farm homes, and later in the school house, the long journeys being made on foot or with a horse over roads much different from those now travelled on.

Little Money.

In those days money was very scarce, he said, but there was a wealth of hospitality and loyal friendship for the young minister struggling along in the parish. Many of the older members of the congregation travelled right along memory's lane with Canon Hartley as those experiences were recalled.

Rev. E. C. Moore of Peterborough, a former rector of this parish, assisted in the service, as did Rev. C. A. G. Spence, the present rector.

Visitors from Buckhorn, Deer Bay, Douro, Lakefield, and Peterborough attended the service.

New York Times Lauds Canada For Financing

NEW YORK, Sept. 30 (CP). The New York Times today commended Canada for its method of financing the war, noting editorially that the Dominion is meeting about one-half of its war costs out of current tax collections. It termed this "an important factor in the more effective inflation control achieved there."

The Times editorial, written in connection with the United States current Third War Loan, which has an objective of $15,000,000,000, said in part:

"The Canadian Fifth Victory Loan set for October has an announced goal for sales to individuals of 44 per cent of the aggregate flotation. Since the Canadian objective is $1,200,000,000, which on a per capita basis is about equivalent to our $15,000,000,000 drive, it is clear that attaining this goal will be a major achievement.

"Last spring, 40 per cent of the by individuals. The extensive participation of individuals in the spring drive is evidenced by the 2,660,000 subscriptions obtained, or one for each 4⅓ persons living in Canada.

"Their accomplishment is particularly impressive, since Canadians are devoting about as large a proportion of their national income to the war effort as we do.

"But they have been meeting about one-half the cost out of current tax collections, as compared with only 30 per cent in this country last year and an anticipated 35 per cent this year. The record in Canada, which has been much better than in this country, is an important factor in the more effective inflation control achieved there."

We both like Apple Pie and Cheese!

● We of Canada and the United States are the world's outstanding example of "good neighbours".

We are unique in our understanding of one another, in our mutual confidence, in our fellowship.

And the things which make us good neighbours are as basic as our common liking for apple pie and cheese.

We speak the same language.
We enjoy the same jokes.
We sing the same songs.
We play the same games.
We work and worship to the same ends.

One of us flying the Union Jack, the other the Stars and Stripes, we both nourish deep in our hearts the same concept of freedom, the same human ideals. And we share an indomitable determination that no one shall ever take them from us.

Today our soldiers fight side by side in all parts of the world. And our citizens work shoulder to shoulder to supply them and support them in their grim task. Nazi Leaders Fear Hitler's Temper

By EDWIN SHANKE
Associated Press Staff Writer

STOCKHOLM — (AP) — Hitler gives the impression of a man conscious of the fact that sand runs rapidly through the hour glass, says Arvid Fredborg, widely-known Swedish newspaper man who returned home recently after two years in Germany.

Not only is the Fuehrer's historical time running out but Fredborg says in his new book, "Behind the Steel Wall," that the master of Germany is aging.

Fredborg's book, covering the period since United States newspaper correspondents left Germany, presents a most comprehensive view of the interior workings of Germany.

During Hitler's numerous nervous breakdowns, Fredborg writes, political power has been in the hands of Heinrich Himmler and Martin Bormann, two of the most powerful men in Germany, and the military control in the hands of party men.

Bormann, chief of the Nazi party Chancellery, succeeded Rudolf Hess, but without Hess's title of Deputy Fuehrer, and has been emerging with greater power than Hess ever had. In his hands have been placed extensive new authority in domestic and party matters.

Never Gets Whole Story

It is even doubtful whether Hitler during the periods when he has been in full health has been told the whole truth about Germany's situation, the book continues.

It is quite natural his subordinates are tempted to touch up the situation because they have to deal with a stern master who lives in practically total isolation and sees only a few persons.

Decisions may wait for weeks because Hitler's aides don't dare present something unpopular until he can have compensation in some form. Many times his personal dislikes have been decisive for Germany's policy.

It is this irrational point which is so dangerous. As a military leader Hitler has a genius for outlining grandiose plans of attack. But he also has an inclination for fiddling with details which has irritated German military men.

Several stories are told about his military leadership. One of them describes a conversation between Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock and the conductor Dr. Wilhelm Furtwangler.

Furtwangler asked Von Bock, former chief of the German High Command: "Why were you dismissed?"

Von Bock replied: "My dear Furtwangler, if the Fuehrer had been able to play the harmonica you would have been dismissed as a conductor, too."

Behind the Swastika facade there is a struggle of one leader against another in the highest Nazi circles, but they keep together because they know the terrible fate that awaits them if the Nazi clique of Hitler, Goebbels, Himmler, Goering, Borman and others is unable to keep a united control over the Reich.

Hockey Stars Don Rugby Togs

WINNIPEG, Sept 30— (CP). — It's a long cry from the hockey rink to the gridiron, but four Winnipeg lads are proving that it's not so. They are AC1 Paul Platz, LAC Andy Branigan, LAC Sammy Lavitt, and AC2 Alf Pike.

All four are hockey players of proven ability, and held down jobs in professional company before they became members of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Platz was a winger for Chicago Black Hawks. Branigan toured the big league hockey lanes playing defence for Red Dutton's Brooklyn Americans. Lavitt was a top-notch player with Dallas in the now defunct American Association, and until the spring Pike was a forward and defenceman with Lester Patrick's New York Rangers.

This fall all four have donned the rugby moleskins with Reg. Threlfall's Winnipeg R.C.A.F. Bombers in the Western Interprovincial Rugby Football League, and have shown they are just as adept on the gridiron as they are on the hockey rink. Branigan ran for two touchdowns when the Bombers made their first start of the season against Regina All-Services Roughriders last Saturday.

blood on the moon here next Tuesday night when the Palermo Panther, Killer John Katan will meet Gentleman Jack Clayborne in the main bout of the Tunney wrestling card. Katan didn't want to meet the Black Comet or to wrestle in Peterborough for that matter but he has been forced into taking on the match and we have an idea that he will be in a vile mood when he goes into action. Never sweet-tempered the Panther resents the pressure that has been put on him and he intimates that he is going to get his revenge at the expense of Clayborne. All of which measures up to a stormy passage for the bounding battler from South Africa. However, Gentleman Jack showed in his two battles with Rowdy Dick Hogan that roughhouse artists have no terrors for him. He figures he is too fast and too smart for them and his record confirms that opinion. Yet Katan's list of mat victories is impressive. The whole thing shapes up as about the most sensational argument of the whole season.

The Peterborough Carpet Ball League, a successful organization that has been in operation since 1929 is preparing for another season. The opening meeting and election of officers will take place next Tuesday night, October 5, in the S.O.E. Hall and it is hoped that a number of new teams, including representatives of the Military Training Centre will line up with the league this season. Last season there were thirteen teams representing the Sons of England, the Orange Lodges, British Empire Service League, the Fire Department, St. George's Church, Brinton Carpet Company, St. James' Church, and the Wardens of East City. The welcome is on the mat for any new clubs wishing to enter teams. In this connection it will be remembered that the league had a membership of 22 teams one year and the officers would be delighted to see that mark passed in the campaign about to open. Dave Leether, also known for his long service as a softball executive, is president of the league, a position that he has held for several seasons.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORTS

By The Canadian Press

After lapse of a year without O.H.A. competition, Kitchener threw its Greenshirts into the ring with the announcement last night Wilf Heller had been appointed to coach the Junior "B" entry this season, with H. S. Boehmer as club manager and Gordon Herchenratter assistant manager.

Greenshirts are drafting their players from district centres, including Kitchener, Waterloo, Elmira and New Hamburg—also Preston if a club does not develop at the latter place. Kitchener will play home games on the natural ice at Preston, in any event, and has decided to participate in the pre-season Sportsmen's Patriotic Association series. Meanwhile, Ott Heller, brother of the Kitchener coach, is preparing to leave for the New York Rangers' camp to start training Oct. 12.

At Niagara Falls, Henry (Hank) Damore, former centre of Niagara Falls, Stratford and Windsor teams in the past decade, announced he had signed for a trial with the Hershey Bears of the American League. His brother, Nick, is the Hershey goaltender.

Named Coach.

Scout Carson Cooper has been appointed to succeed Coach Ebbie Goodfellow of the Detroit Red Wings, champions of the N.H.L., it was announced last night by Manager Jack Adams. Goodfellow is now employed in a war plant. The players will report at Olympia Stadium, Detroit, next Tuesday and will train with the Indianapolis farm club of the American League.

FO. Lew Hayman, R.C.A.F. director of physical training, arrived in Winnipeg yesterday from Ottawa but immediately announced his trip had nothing to do with football. Last season Hayman coached the Toronto Hurricanes to the Dominion grid title, defeating Winnipeg bombers in the final.

St. Catharines advanced to the finals of the O.A.S.A. Senior "B" series by defeating Toronto 10-6 at Hamilton last night in their third clash in which the losers ran up a total of seven errors. The Saints earned the right to meet either Trenton Flyers or Sudbury for the title.

Mel Hein, snapback for the New York Giants in the National Pro Football League for 12 years, decided to retire this season to coach Union College in New York State but the college team folded for the duration. Hein is back with the Giants for his 13th year.

Club Bankrupt.

The Toledo Jockey Club yesterday filed a petition for bankruptcy in the Federal Court, listing debts of $40,605 and no assets. The club conducted a 19-day meeting on the Ohio track from June 22 to July 19.

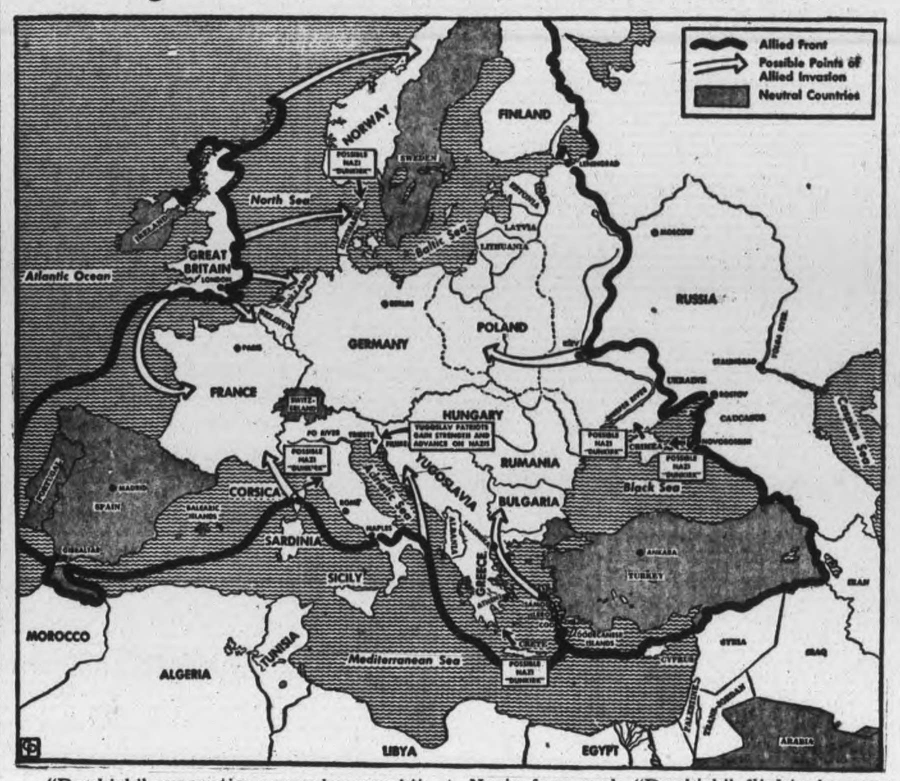
The New York Giants of the National League yesterday lost four of its players. Sid Gordon, who played both the infield and outfield, was inducted into the armed forces; Catcher Ray Berres is reporting to his Kenosha, Wis., draft board today; Catcher Ernie Lombardi returned to his California home because of injuries, and Infielder Dick Bartell was permitted to go to his coast home town on account of a fractured wrist.

Complaints are already being registered in the United States about the one-sided football scores. Colleges where naval or marine cadets are enrolled have found considerable gift talent among the uniformed men and have been able to roll up big point totals against the have-nots. The suggestion has been made that army trainees be permitted to play at the nearest school.

After playing with Toronto, Rochester and St. Louis Cardinals this year, Right-hander Bill Beckman of the Columbus Red Birds in the American Association was purchased last night by the Rochester Rew Wings. He had won eight games with the Red Birds.

Secretary W. J. Snyder of the Ontario Baseball Association last night announced from Hamilton the draw for three final games next Saturday: Intermediate "B"—Maidstone at R.C.A.F., Camp Borden; Junior "A"—Niagara Falls vs. Windsor, third game at Ingersoll, and Junior "B"—St. Catharines at Dresden.

Retreating Germans Face Several Possible "Dunkirks"



"Dunkirk" evacuations may become bitter pills the Germans will be forced to swallow as they continue their retreat in the face of advancing Allied armies. The present front of advancing Allied armies is shown by the heavy black line, while possible points of Allied invasion are indicated by the white arrows. Neutral countries are shaded on this map.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By ALAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 30 — (CP). — Britain's lightweight boxing champion lost an eight-round decision to an aging fellow who held the same title a decade ago and the ringside boys began hollering for the kill.

They figured Eric Boon's continuance as king was dated to end the next time he puts the championship on the block because Veteran Harry Mizler, who hasn't shown much since he dropped the title in 1934, trounced him by plenty of points in a non-title tilt. The eight-round affair headlined a card at London's Royal Albert Hall, scene of peacetime pageantry and wartime musical concerts.

Mizler, who won a British Em-Games championship at Hamilton, Ont., 13 years ago, beat Boon with a flickering left hand. An expressionless boxer, he refused to be hurried or flurried and he made Boon miss repeatedly. And at that he was substituting for the Jamaican champion, Lefty Flynn.

The defeat, which showed Boon as but a shadow of the fierce little battler of a couple of years back, followed hard on a non-title Belfast bout in which Boon was knocked out in the fifth round by Tommy Arthur, Northern Ireland welterweight champion. A left to the jaw did the trick before a roaring crowd of 10,000 after Boon hit the canvas tice.

Mizler, surprising even the most optimistic, won almost every round. His left hand transfigured Boon's features into a beet-color and he opened an old wound under the champion's left eye.

Immediately after the fight Boon asked for a return contest and said he was prepared to put up a side-bet of $2,200 that he would win over 10 or 12 rounds.

Over at Cardiff, Bert Jackson created the biggest surprise of the Welsh mitt season by outpointing Len Davies of Swansea. It was a surprise in that Davies within the previous weeks had taken decisions over both Ned Tarleton, British featherweight champion, and Jim Brady of Dundee, British Empire bantamweight king.

Jackson, a featherweight, hit the deck for a nine-count in the third round, but fought back furiously to take a decision over 10 rounds.

Meanwhile, at Chesterfield, Brady took a technical knockout over Billie Doherty of Liverpool when Doherty retired in the seventh with a cut eyebrow.

Another British champion came out for action when Liverpool's Ernie Roderick, welterweight holder, beat Paddy Roche of Eire.

The referee stopped the contest in the fifth round. The battle, at Bristol, ended with Roche swaying about the ring.

Milk Weed Crop Exceeds Highest Hopes

If prizes were being offered for the best fields of milkweed which were artificially planted in the Peterborough area this season as a source of sticky substance to be used in the experiment of making synthetic rubber, the first award would probably be handed out to F. W. Rowland whose farm is situated on the second concession of Smith.

The Rowland milkweed has flourished perhaps to the expectations and certainly to the hopes of the Ottawa authorities who assigned the project to a group of farms in this district. And when Dr. H. A. Senn of Ottawa comes to Peterborough on Thursday of next week to look again at the results of the season's work by the farmers who accepted the government's contract, it is safe to say that he will be shown the Rowland product as a sample of healthy, upstanding milkweed plants of exceptional promise for the harvest of 1944. Most of them are from twelve to sixteen inches above the ground, with a root development that is said to be almost as deep as the height of the stalks above the ground.

An Examiner reporter accompanied F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative, in a round of more than a score of the fields that were seeded last spring, returning with a general impression that although a few of the plantations are obviously disappointing the most of them are going to yield a lot of milkweed by this time next year. And reportorial knowledge of the milkweed is vastly less than that of the farmers who undertook to grow the stuff.

Good Crops

Another field that would be claiming recognition in any rating of accomplishment is that on the farm of F. Turner, east of Mather's Corners on the Keene Road. George Mullen of Smith has another outstanding field, and then there is a numerous group that shows a lot of milkweed although most of the plants are comparatively small. However, they sprouted and are rooted for next spring with expected lateral shoots.

One of the 'tidiest' fields the Examiner saw was on the farm of Harold Dawson, Otonabee, and Clayton Sanderson of Smith has also done a good job of cultivating. Many others could be mentioned in that category, and the fact that they are omitted is of no present significance. Several fields were in the hands of foxtails, thistles, quack grass, and ragweed, and may need some last cultivating before the frost levels them all for the next six months.

If the milkweed were as prolific as the ragweed and could elbow and thrust its surviving way about a field even to the extent of pushing less rugged weeds out of the picture, the synthetic rubber problem would soon be solved, that is if the milkweed can do the job of helping to make tires until the Japs are thrust out of the East Indies.

Auxiliary Discusses Missionary Work

BETHANY, Sept. 30 —(ENS). — The monthly meeting of the Evening Auxiliary was held at the home of Mrs. Waddell, with five members and one visitor present.

The roll call was answered with a verse of Scripture, containing a promise. Two watch towers responded. Mrs. Jackson, Trinidad, and Mrs. Porteous, China. All took part in the M.M. program, the theme for September being 'Christ for all the world and for all of life.'

Mrs. Harding then introduced the new study book, 'For All of Life,' written by Dr. and Mrs. Wiser. The first chapter, 'The light of knowledge,' deals with different methods of spreading the Gospel to the village people of India, Africa, or wherever the missionaries are working, by living with them, teaching them to read, and cleanliness so essential to better health. Various other methods were given also how to spread the light of knowledge.

Honor Roll At St. Aidan's Is Dedicated

YOUNG'S POINT, Sept. 30 —(ENS).— St. Aidan's Anglican church, Young's Point, was a beautiful picture in its decoration of flowers, fruits, vegetables and grain on Sunday, Sept. 26, when St. Aidan's celebrated its 48th Harvest Festival and the dedication of the Honour Roll for their men serving in the King's uniform, with His Lordship Archbishop Owens, Rev. Canon Hartley and Rev. C. A. G. Spence taking charge of the service.

Rev. Mr. Spence read the evening prayers and Archbishop Owens delivered an inspiring talk on the symbols of bread, grapes, honour roll and the Cross placed on the altar.

Rev. Canon Hartley, who was the first Anglican rector to hold services in Young's Point 49 years ago, told of the humorous side and difficult times he encountered when he first came to Young's Point in attaining his mission work. Canon Hartley remarked that when he left Young's Point he had six confirmed members of the Anglican church, who, with the aid of others, erected the lonely stone church of 'St. Aidan's' the following year under the leadership of Rev. Cressick.

After the benediction, Archbishop Owens dedicated the Honour Roll with the following names insribed: Flt. Ltd. N. D. Knox, Pte. Earl Dixon, Pte. Alec Freeburn, Sgt. Victor Thranes, Pte. Arnold Millar, Cpl. Godfrey Moore, L. Cpl. Douglas MacNaughton, Pte. Fred Coones, Pte. Harry McNaughton, Pte. Raydon Ellsworth of the U.S. Marines, Pte. Max Coones, Pte. Tom Nicol. His Lordship Archbishop Owens also prayed for Flt. Lt. N. D. Knox's speedy recovery from illness and for his family's safety.

Immediately after the service the guests of honour, Archbishop Owens and Mrs. Owens, Rev. Canon Hartley, Rev. Mr. Spence and the congregation were entertained by the W.A. in the Parish Hall. Mrs. Arthur Duggan and Mrs. Robert Johnson poured tea from a lace covered table centred with a bowl of autumn flowers.

A most social hour was spent over the tea cups and Canon Hartley showed his gold pocket watch to the younger generations, which had been a community gift to him on his departure from Young's Point nearly fifty years ago.

NEW SCHEDULE

PRESERVES RATIONING

EFFECTIVE SEPTEMBER 30, 1943

Preserves rationing gives the consumer a number of choices both of products and sizes of containers. Because of the wide range of container sizes and the variation in buying habits across the country it was necessary to put the system into operation and then make adjustments on the basis of experience.

Now that preserves rationing has been in effect for several weeks, it is possible to make some increases in coupon values. The new schedule is announced below and is effective September 30th.

The new doubled ration allowances for molasses, extracted and comb honey will enable consumers in areas where consumption of these products is heavy, to buy more and still have enough for districts where the total demand is light.

The increased ration allowances for corn, cane and blended table syrups and maple syrup are adjusted to bring coupon values more closely into line with the great variety of container sizes now in use.

Simple Beauty

By ALICE ALDEN

IF A COAT is not embellished with luxurious fur trimming or does not boast a fur lining, it has to be pretty smart to win approbation this season. It must be perfectly tailored and beautifully styled, and then it is likely to be a candidate for high sartorial honors. Julie Bishop has chosen such a coat and thinks that it is THE greatcoat of the year. It is of dark blue chinchilla wool with dark red wool facing the collar and notched revers. The blue enamel buttons are rimmed with dark red. It is nice for wear over a dress, a suit or slacks.

This is Everybody's War

By MOLLY BROWN

Newspaper is badly needed by munition factories at present and the government has been, during the month of September, sponsoring a nation-wide drive to collect newspapers. The local Salvage committee has at present six tons of newspaper filling its warehouse on Hunter street, waiting to be tied in bundles in order that it may be shifted to where it will do the most good. But a snag has been met. A snag all too common in salvage drives, here and elsewhere. There has been a severe shortage of volunteer helpers to sort and tie these papers.

Now, when the current drive for newspapers is over the committee will close the warehouse for the winter at least. Possibly for good. It does seem as if the people of Peterborough could put forth a single effort and help to get the warehouse cleared and locked up by the end of October. Nobody is now being asked to pledge themselves to give a night a week all winter and summer too, as once seemed necessary. You are being asked to help in one big drive and then stop. How about it?

The news is good right now, very good, in fact, and some people are probably thinking that they can relax their efforts, because the war is practically won. Well the war isn't anywhere near practically won, and anyone who thinks it is is wilfully blinded by wishful thinking. Our armies still need ammunition and the factories still need waste paper, for the making of that ammunition and it's our part in this war to see that they get it.

The Civil War Service Committee has contributed generously to war services in this city from funds gained through the sale of salvage, and many of the organizations which partook of this generosity have made little or no attempt to repay it by giving volunteer help at the salvage depot, so that now, because it has been necessary to spend considerable sums on hired help, it is no longer able to contribute to anything, and is badly in need of volunteer help.

Possibly the members of some of the organizations which were helped in their war work by donations from the C.W.V.S. could be persuaded into helping in this last drive, but it seems more than a little doubtful at this late date. Nevertheless, the fact remains that there are six tons of paper at the depot, waiting to be tied, and somebody has to do it. Why don't you try it, just this once. You can get information by phoning Mrs. R. Whalon, 3304. Or can drop in at the depot on Hunter street any afternoon or morning.

Mrs. H. F. Doig Hostess To Bible Class

Mrs. H. F. Doig Cameron street, was hostess to the King's Own Bible Class of St. James' Sunday School for their September meeting.

The devotional period, led by Mrs. G. H. Rowe, opened with the class hymn. Mrs. S. Hanlon read the scripture lesson and Miss Mary Collins, class teacher, offered prayer. The duet, "He Understands and Cares" was sung by Mrs. E. R. Frost and Mrs. E. Kitney. "The Gospel According to You" was given as a reading by Mrs. G. H. Rowe, while Mrs. Moore contributed the solo, "Hold Thou My Hand."

The business session was presided over by Mrs. E. Kitney, vice-president, and Miss M. Robinson, the Sunshine convener, gave a report of work done. Two delightful piano duets, "March Militaire" and "Rendezvous," were played by Misses Ethelwyn Gibson and Gloria Wilson. "Willie in the Ministry" was a humorous reading by Mrs. Rowe. Miss Mary Hanlon was heard in two solos, "For King and Country" and "Sleepy Hollow Tune," won the applause of all. In a musical contest Mrs. E. Kitney was the winner.

A social hour was enjoyed when refreshments were served by the committee, after which a vote of thanks was tendered to their hostess and to the entertainers of the evening by Mesdames Downer and Bullied.

The class meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. W. Rose.

O'Neill-Herlihey Wedding At Downeyville

DOWNEYVILLE, Sept. 30— (ENS). — St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, was the scene of a lovely wedding recently, when Eileen, daughter of Mr and Mrs. William C. Herlihey, was united in marriage to Gerald O'Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. William O'Neill, both of Downeyville.

The church was decorated with ferns, asters and gladioli arranged by the girl friends of the bride. The guest pews were tied with white ribobns.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Patrick Perdue, aunt of the bride, who also sang Rosewig's "Ave Maria" during the signing of the register. Solos were also sung by Mr. Clare Harrington, cousin of the bride, and Mrs. Leo Harrington, cousin of the bride, and a duet by Mr. Martin Herlihey and Mrs Perdue, uncle and aunt of the bride.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, looking lovely in a two-piece dress of white wool, white halo hat, with fingertip veil, and corsage of Talisman roses.

The bride's sister, Marie Herlihey, Reg. N., of Toronto, was her only attendant, and wore a two-piece dress of green wool with hat and accessories to match with a corsage of Bettertime roses.

The groom was assisted by his brother, Joseph O'Neill, and the ushers were Mr. Ed. Herlihey, brother of the bride and Mr. N. MacBeth, brother-in-law of the groom.

After the ceremony the bridal party and guests returned to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held and dinner served to 43 guests. The tables were decorated with cut flowers and centred by the bride's cake. The bride's mother received in a two-piece Air Force blue silk jersey dress with a corsage of Butterfly roses. The groom's mother also received in a dress of blue sheer with a corsage of Butterfly roses.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill left on a wedding trip to Quebec and points East, and on their return will reside on the groom's farm in Emily. Rev. Father McFadden performed the ceremony and said the nuptial mass.

This Week's Best Wartime Recipe

Contributed By Mary Moore Readers

Dear Mary Moore: This dish got put together by accident and my family took to it so strongly they ask me to make it again and again. I have been using fresh corn in it, but plan to use canned corn kernels (if we can get them!) when corn season is over.

Pork Patties and Corn Casserole.

(I have to serve 4 and sometimes 5)

One lb. pork sausage meat, 2 tablespoons cooking oil or butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup diluted evaporated milk or bottled milk, 1 cup fine cracker crumbs, 2 cups cooked corn off the cob or canned kernel corn. Fry the pork patties until lightly brown. Make a white sauce by melting the butter or heating the oil, adding the flour and stirring in the milk. Stir until the sauce thickens. In an oiled baking dish arrange layers of crumbs, corn, sausage patties and white sauce. Top with buttered or oiled crumbs and a few pork sausage patties, and bake 30 minutes in an oven of 350 deg. Fahr. I usually serve a green vegetable like spinach, broccoli, sprouts or cabbage with this. It does not need potatoes with it for it is filling. —Mrs. Jack Munning.

Thanks again, Mrs. Munning. This dish would also be good using bacon in place of the pork patties and adding a little finely chopped celery to the corn.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, October 1

A most reassuring day for concentrating the forces, in an effort to place the position and fortunes on a firm and enduring foundation for a future of security and continued peace and prosperity. Under this rule perseverance, application and hard work are stimulated to crystallized effort in this direction, and due returns are in sight in accumulated possessions or tangible assets of stability and worth. Seek co-operation and friendly support from elders and employers, but refrain from discord or impetuous or ill considered moves. Social, domestic and affectional matters should enjoy corresponding security and peace.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of steady progress in the direction of security, increased possessions and enduring success this through good judgment, persistent effort, and the friendly cooperation of elders or other solid friends, whose interest may be social, financial or possibly sentimental. It should be a time for concentrating all endeavors toward lasting and stable foundations, with due rewards for work well done but refrain from impetuosity, forced issues or intemperate application.

A child born on this day although being impulsive and high strung, is also stable, industrious and responsible, with an eye and determination to fortress its future fortunes.

DOROTHY DIX

WOMAN MAY COMMIT CRIME BY TAKING WAR JOB IN FACTORY

False Patriotism, Selfish Desire for Trinkets No Reason to Leave Children to Others' Care.

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a mother of two adolescent girls. I have a great desire to help my country, as so many other women are doing, by going into war work. But I can't break loose from the fact that I have too big a responsibility as mother of these lovely girls to leave them alone, with no one to watch over them and guide them while I do public work.

Of course, there are mothers who are driven by necessity to leaving their children to shift for themselves while they work in factories, but it seems to me that we, who can have a choice in the matter, should stay at home and rear our youngsters as best we can. So I have come to the conclusion that if I do a good job of bringing up my girls to be the good mothers of tomorrow, I have helped the future generations for time to come just as much as if I had toiled in the fields or been a boss riveter. I wonder if you agree?

A MOTHER AT HOME.

ANSWER—I do. A hundred per cent. No criticism can be made of the poor woman, whose children are hungry and ragged, if she leaves them to their own devices and goes to work to earn the money to feed and clothe them. "Needs must when the devil drives," says the old proverb, and she has chosen the lesser of two evils. And it is a fine and patriotic thing for the women who have no children, or grown up children who do not need their care, to go into defense work.

But the woman who has children who need her care who leaves them to go into a factory to work, either because of a false idea of patriotism, or because she wants the money to buy things she has never been able to afford, or because she likes the excitement of working with a crowd of men, commits a crime against her children and her country.

When a woman brings a child into the world, she is no longer a free agent to do just as she pleases. She has given a hostage to fortune. She is responsible for the way the child turns out. She determines his success, his happiness, whether he is a blessing or a curse to the world. It is the mother's hands that form the child's character. And if there is no mother on the job, we all know what happens. It is written in young lives wrecked before they fairly begin. In the records of our criminal courts. In the lists of those who pay for their crimes in the electric chair.

The most appalling thing that has ever happened to this country is the wave of juvenile delinquency that is sweeping over it. Mere children are arrested for stealing and sabotage, boys for holdups and murder; girls barely in their teens are street walkers. The FBI estimates that sixty percent of the prostitutes now are what they call "amateurs." Many of them girls of good families.

This is a horrible situation, but how could it be otherwise with thousands upon thousands of mothers leaving their homes, literally turning their children out on the street, to be reared by the street and learn its lessons. No mother to get the children off to school in the morning and to see that they go. No mother even to prepare them a good breakfast. No mother to be at home when they return and see who they are with, or where they go. No mother at home at night to gather the children about her, to keep them safe, to give them a good dinner, to watch over them and guide them and hear them say their prayers.

Children left to go and come as they please, to seek amusement and excitement where they can find it, to get into gangs, to start down the dark road that leads to perdition. Yet what else could you expect when there is no one at home to mother them?

The war has changed many things, but it has not changed one thing—it has not changed a mother's duty to her children.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX — Many months ago I met a young man with whom I fell in love, so much that I allowed him petting privileges that sound as cheap and vulgar as they are. I never thought this fellow would talk, but he has boasted about his conquest, and the stories that he circulated about me are worse than anything I could have dreamed in a nightmare. Most of them are lies, but my reputation is stained.

Of course, what's done, is done, but I just want you to publish this letter as a warning to other young girls not to be misled, not to think it smart to give in to the boys. It isn't smart, it is moronic.

DISILLUSIONED COED.

Girls Saps to Defy Old Conventions

ANSWER—Right you are, daughter, but you have learned your lesson the hard way. Girls think that they are sophisticated when they throw their caps over the windmill and defy the good old conventions that it took thousands of years to build around silly little girls for their protection. But they aren't sophisticated. They are saps.

No other tradition in the world is less true than that men kiss and never tell. Ninety-nine out of a hundred of them kiss in order to have something to tell. They boast of every favor a girl shows them because they think that proves what devils they are among the women. Where there is one knight in shining armor, there are a thousand heels.

The wise girl is the one who keeps herself to herself, as the old phrase goes. She is chary of her kisses. She is hard to get. And she never, never, never writes anything to a boy that she wouldn't be willing to see published in the newspapers. For well she knows that most boys show their love letters, and that even those who don't, leave them around in old coat pockets and bureau drawers for any chambermaid to read and giggle over.

This is good advice any time, but it is worth pasting on your mirrors, girls, in wartime, when the bars are more or less down and anything goes. Gossip especially.

DEAR MISS DIX—I was married to a sailor a few months ago. He is now attending school about two hundred miles from here and wants me to come out there to live. I could get work there and could share an apartment with his buddy's wife. My mother wants me to come and live with her and pay her board, but my stepfather says that my husband can never come to the house if I do. What should I do?

TROUBLED WIFE.

ANSWER—When a girl gets married, her first duty is to her husband. There is no arguing that point. If you refuse to go, your husband will naturally think that you care very little for him.

Well-dressed Leisure

Black wool, with what looks like an overdress of sage green wool, is the composition of this model. It is, however, a one-piece dress with a dramatic use of color and soft tailoring.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

CHANGING for dinner can mean shedding overalls for purely feminine garb these warwork days. It's not like the giddy times when a shift from wool to sequins meant a change for evening.

The frock worn here is ideal for any leisure time to be spent socially with friends, come the long, cold winter, for this New York creation is all wool, and though simply cut is gay with color and apt for costume jewelry and captivating hats.

Smart Swagger Sport Hat

By ALICE ALDEN

ALL IS not fuss and feathers, tulle and glitter in the millinery world. Some of the best and smartest of the new hats are the models that strike a perfect balance between the dressy and the more simple hat. Josephi includes several in his collection and we show one here. It is a swagger hat of felt in natural color made with a clever open envelope crown lined with moss green belting ribbon with a fringed flange to form a tassel trimming.

When Neighbors Take Over In Time Of Bereavement

By MARY MOORE

For the second time in my life I attended a smalltown funeral this week.

The word "neighbor" took on new meaning.

I was helping the hired help dry 40 cups and saucers, plates and knives and forks and spoons—these were merely from a little lunch that was served to the folks from out of town who were about the house before the funeral. Five times while the dishes were being done knocks came on the kitchen door:

Once a little old lady quietly handed in the most ethereal looking lemon pie—this was "for supper after the funeral" she directed.

Next came a chocolate layer cake 5 inches high, with a shiny fudge frosting (that's one of the things I'm here to tell about today). I asked who the lady was. "Oh, one of our neighbors." !

This cake was to be used for the tea after the funeral, each donor specified where her offering was to fit.

Not more than two minutes after that a dishpan full of ham sandwiches was shoved in the door, "for the tea after the funeral" too. Who gave up their meat and butter rations for a week for that? "Neighbors."

For supper after the funeral guests had left was a large casserole of macaroni and cheese—hot from the oven—and placed by the lady who brought it in the oven to keep it warm.

The last donation I took in was a knockout: a golden sponge cake. Two neighbors had planned to make the two cakes, thinking the chocolate fudge and the golden sponge would make a lovely contrast on the bereaved lady's yellow damask tablecloth.

Those, my friends, are neighbors.

The golden cake and the chocolate with Fudge Frosting are my starred recipes today; who went without sugar for them I don't know; but you may want to blow the lid off some time and have a birthday party or celebrate an anniversary; if so here's your cake.

Rita's Chocolate Fudge Cake

One-half cup shortening, 1 cup granulated sugar, 2 eggs, ½ cup good quality cocoa, 2 cups sifted cake flour, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup sour or butter milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Cream the shortening until it is the consistency of thick cream. Sprinkle in the sugar a little at a time, creaming after each addition to keep the mixture light and fluffy. Add the well beaten egg yolks and mix well. Add just enough hot water to the cocoa to make it into a smooth paste, then add enough hot water to fill the cup with the cocoa mixture. Add it to the creamed mixture. Sift the flour and measure it then sift it with the soda and salt and add it by sifting it into the creamed mixture alternately with the sour milk to which the vanilla has been added. Mix just enough to blend then carefully fold in the beaten egg whites. Pour into two buttered and lightly floured layer cake tins. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 30 to 40 minutes.

Frost with Rita's Fudge Custard Frosting: 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 4 tablespoons cocoa, 2 tablespoons butter, ¾ cup sugar, 1 cup boiling water, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla. Mix together all these ingredients in order given, except the vanilla. Stir over boiling water until thick and allow to cook covered for 15 minutes to cook cornstarch. Then beat until cool enough and stiff enough to spread on cake. Rita doubles this recipe for her layer cake for she spreads it very thick between and on top of the layers.

Golden Sponge Cake

One cup sifted cake flour, 5 eggs, 1 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon lemon rind grated, ½ teaspoon salt. Sift the flour three times. Beat the yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Gradually add half the sugar to the yolks, beating thoroughly and then add the lemon juice and rind. Beat until thick. Beat the whites until they start to peak but will still flow. Fold the remaining sugar into them, then fold in the yolk mixture. Sift the flour over a little at a time and fold it in. It is best to make this entire mixture on a large platter using a wire whip. As soon as batter is mixed pour it into ungreased tube pan. Sprinkle powdered sugar over the top lightly. Bake at exactly 300 deg. Fahr. for 50 to 60 minutes. Invert pan to cool, but remove from the pan before it is entirely cold.

Frost with Uncooked Orange Frosting: 3 tablespoons butter, 2 cups icing sugar, 1 tablespoon orange juice, 1 teaspoon orange pulp, 1½ tablespoons grated orange rind, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 egg yolk. Cream the butter and beat very light. Add the sugar slowly beating constantly. Add orange juice rind and pulp, then beat in the yolk and mix until very smooth and light. An egg white, well beaten, may be used instead of the yolk, when frosting will be fluffy.

The next cake recipe I am giving you is for busy cooks with large hungry families to feed fast. You may be familiar with it, if not you should be.

Crumb Cake

One-half cup shortening, 1¼ cups brown sugar, 2½ cups sifted flour, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon each cinnamon and salt, 1 beaten egg, ¾ cup milk, ½ cup raisins are optional. Mix shortening, sugar, and 2 cups flour to a fine crumb. Reserve ¾ cup of this crumb. Sift remaining flour, baking powder, cinnamon and salt. Combine with the crumb mixture. Add egg and milk and mix well. Pour into 8-inch square pan which has been lined with buttered paper. Sprinkle reserved crumbs evenly over top. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 35 to 40 minutes.

The topping on the cake does not brown at all when baked at this temperature and looks very much like an icing. My young Peter thinks it is the best cake he ever tasted—but he's always a pushover for a cake.

DeLuxe Dressmaker Fur

Maximilian Furs

By PRUNELLA WOOD

LUXURIOUS furs don't come everyone's way, but if the cat can look at the Queen, we can look at royalty in fur too. Contrary to what most men would think, moreover, women may envy their sisters who pay thirty thousand dollars for a sable coat (plus tax!), but at the same time be glad that someone can afford the ultimate extravagance that ingenious man has dreamed up for us females.

The fur jacket and skirt above, of course, is not in the sable class; but it is a magnificent extravagance just the same, a beauty to make heads turn. The skirt is black wool; the man-tailored jacket of broadtail soft and supple as satin. The Ascot tie, the fancy on the pillbox hat, the drawstring handbag, are decorated with ermine tails.

ENQUIRY COLUMN

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I missed the copy of the paper in which you told how to can yellow string beans and would like to know if I may have the receipt. Also do you know how to put up corn on the cob?—Mrs. Logan.

ANSWER: We have printed directions for canning string beans three times, so you may have seen them by now if not I am sending you directions by letter.

Canned Corn on the Cob

I would like to repeat that we do not recommend home canning of non-acid vegetables of which corn is one, without use of steam pressure cooker.

Use only tender small, freshly gathered sweet corn, shuck it, silk it by brushing with stiff new little scrubbing brush.

If cobs are long break in halves. Drop in boiling water—doing not more than 6 cobs at a time—for 2 minutes, then place in sterile jars, using sterile tongs to pick up corn. Immediately add 1 teaspoon each salt and sugar, and fill jars just to overflowing with boiling water. Seal immediately and process in steam pressure cooker at 240 deg. Fahr. for 60 minutes. Or if you are confident enough of your ability and decide to process the corn in hot water bath (which we do not recommend!) process it 3 hours at boiling point. Tighten seal when done, and cool as quickly as possible.

QUESTION: In a recipe where it calls for corn syrup would it be all right to use the .... sugar syrup and the same quantity or should the amount be reduced?

We find it much easier to get the .... syrup here than the corn syrup.

In making muffins where the recipe calls for ½ cup brown sugar how much syrup should you use instead of the sugar?—Marion Coote.

ANSWER: I am sending you a booklet which I have made up using corn syrup in cookery,—which will show you how to replace brown sugar with syrup.

The syrup you refer to is sweeter than corn syrup—use only ¾ the amount of sugar syrup when replacing corn syrup with it.

QUESTION: Would you kindly send me some pickle recipes—preferably simple ones. Also would you please advise me how to can peas and beans successfully.

ANSWER: In last week's issue of this column we printed some pickle recipes which we hope you saw. If you missed them write me again and I will send you a tear sheet of that issue.

There were 2 recipes I omitted from that article from lack of space which I will give you because they are simple.

Carrot and String Bean Pickle

One quart carrots, 1 cup celery, 2 green peppers, 1 sweet red pepper, 1 cup sliced white onions, 1 cup string beans, 2 pints vinegar, 1½ cups sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons dry mustard, ½ teaspoon turmeric, ½ teaspoon paprika. Dice the carrots (or run them through coarse knife of food chopper), and cut beans into ½ inch pieces. Cook them in a little salted water until tender. Add the other vegetables, cutin small slices, and add the vinegar, spices and sugar. Cook the mixture until it is clear. Seal. (One nice advantage of this pickle is that it may be made fresh in the winter season.)

Sliced Ripe Cucumber Pickle

Six riple cucumbers sliced, ½ cup salt, 1½ cups chopped onions, 1-3 to ½ cup minced hot red pepper, ¼ cup white mustard seed, 6 tablespoons horseradish, 1 lb. sugar, 1¼ cups vinegar. Select evenly yellow cucumbers, slice them evenly thin, add the salt, cover with water and let stand 24 hours in cool place. Wash cucumbers in several waters and drain thoroughly. Add all other ingredients, the vinegar being enough to cover. Boil 20 minutes. Seal in sterile jars. This is known in some communities as Roustabout.

I have sent method for canning peas and beans separately.

Education

and that it has not on the whole attracted the right kind of people. People want to see more interchange between teaching and other jobs. In the old days a young man or woman was caught at about 17 years of age and became a teacher for all time. Now people are wanted in school who have done something else.

These notes on education refer to the educational system in England and Wales. As I said somewhere already, I shall hope to return to the educational question in Scotland: it is quite different in that country, less complex, perhaps, but just as full of thorny and difficult problems. The system of education in England and Wales, from the point of view of organization and administration, differs in many ways from the system to be found in Canada. The central authority for education in England and Wales is the Board of Education. It is not a "Board" in the usual sense of that word, but an ordinary Government department. The political head of the Department is the President of the Board of Education ("Minister of Education") who is a member of the Cabinet.

With regard to the term "Public School," it might be added that there is no definition of a Public School. Most of them are boarding schools and few of them receive any public aid. Generally speaking, they charge higher fees than do other secondary schools. Some of them are very old foundation (e.g. Eton, Wincester, Harrow, Rugby), but many of them (e.g. Wellington, Marlborough, Stowe), have been founded within the past hundred years. Many grammar schools are ancient foundations, but they are, generally, day schools and, therefore local in character and many of them are now in receipt of public aid. County schools in England are provided and maintained by County Councils. Private schools, which are feeders for the public schools, are owned and governed by private individuals, and none of them receive public aid.

Don't Let the "Jitters" Disturb Your Life

DON'T BE OVER-WROUGHT

Be on the lookout for early signs of nerve bankruptcy. Life isn't worth living if you are constantly worried, irritated, and depressed. Your doctor can start you on the road to recovery for you may have some unsuspected physical illness.

Don't take your problems and worries of the day to bed with you —if you must think, think of something pleasant that will induce sleep rather than deter it.

If your nerves are too highly strung you should have an outlet for the high spirits — take long walks, devote your valuable energies to an outside interest—social work, amateur theatricals, and when you are ready for bed you will be so tired and relaxed sleep will come immediately.

Perhaps also you need a check-up on your physical health—eyestrain, anaemia may cause nerves. Or you may find certain stimulants such as tea or coffee are bad in your case.

Change your jitters into vitality charm. Our 32-page booklet by a well-known physician explains physical and mental causes for "nerves," gives advice on insomnia, fatigue, nervous indigestion. Includes directions for correct diet, body care.

For your copy OVERCOMING "NERVES" AND EVERYDAY HEALTH PROBLEMS send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

PREFER A MAJOR LEAD

You know that most players would rather bid a major suit than a minor one. That is why a defensive player on lead should prefer to lead a major suit against a No-Trump contract. The declarer, or his partner, may have had an unbid minor suit, which was kept concealed, and so your lead of a minor may be right into the hostile strength. There is hardly a chance, however, that the declarer or his partner holds a biddable major suit which was not shown. So by leading a major you are pretty certain not to be leading into a hostile long suit, but one in which your partner has something.

Maybe it would have been better bidding if North had started with 1-Club, but, if so, South very likely would have used 1-Diamond as his first response. In that event, his side never would have scored the game it got away with. If the side wound up in 3-No Trumps then, West never would have led a diamond, but would have chosen the killer, a heart.

West should have led a heart anyway, on that bidding. Two suits were unshown, the red ones. He should have reasoned that hearts would have been bid if either North or South held a biddable combination, whereas there was a good chance South might have the diamonds in shape. He selected the diamond 5 because that suit had higher intermediate cards beneath the K, a very bad reason.

After winning that lead with dummy's Q, South led to the spade Q and then sent the club 9 through. East let that win, then took the 10 with his A and returned a heart. Nine tricks were now assured, however, for the declarer.

If West had opened the heart 2, the A of that suit would have been knocked out before the clubs got established, so that four heart tricks and the club A would have set the contract.

Rare Tiger Muskie Weighing 30 Pounds Caught At Mike Ament's On Vermilion Lake

SIOUX LOOKOUT, Set. 30.—(ENS).—Mike Ament reports that he has just shipped the world's record True Tiger muskie to a taxidermist. The muskie was caught and landed by Harold Schott, of 5247 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill., at Little Vermilion Lake while fishing from the famous Mike Ament's camps at Sioux Lookout, Ont., and weighed 30¼ pounds even when caught (no surplus weight included).

The True Tiger muskie is the rarest specie of the maskinonge family and found in very few places throughout the United States and Canada. It is a short, stubby, thick-set muskie, very heavy wide back and lengthy girth. It is silvery striped with a pattern all its own. A fiercer fighter than the ordinary on account of its build.

To date the second largest True Tiger muskie was caught by B. C. Patten, president of the Patten Tractor and Equipment Company, 1096 N. Kilmar Ave., Chicago, Ill., weight 28 lbs. and the third largest was caught by the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Kelly, 730 Hibbard Rd., Winneka, Ill. Both of these fish are mounted and the proud trophies of their owners.

Since 1927 there have been a number of True Tiger muskies caught up to 22½ lbs. and any True Tiger over 18 lbs. has been mounted by its captor, showing the rarity of this specie of the maskinonge family.

Mrs Ament is the former Mary Kennealley of Peterborough, and is still remembered by a great number of Peterborough people.

Cards Losing Their Zip Manager Southworth Says

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1 (AP) — Bill the Kid Southworth, the master baseball strategist, has turned to psychology to fire the spirit of his St. Louis Cardinals, world's champions, in their final games of the season.

The players had quickly dressed after last night's game with the New York Giants and the club house was deserted with the exception of Southworth and his two trusty aides, Coaches Clyde "Buzzy" Wares and Mike Golzales. Southworth puffed on a cigaret as he meditated, sitting in front of his locker.

Suddenly he blurted:—

"I hated to see it, but there's been a terrific let down since we clinched the pennant . . . I presume it's natural, but it shouldn't be . . . I want hustle all the time, winning or losing. If we hustle, we can win . . . I want those boys to keep their spirit up so we'll be ready to tear into the Yankees in New York next Tuesday . . . My fondest desire is to beat them again—four straight if possible.

Southworth feared the Cardinals, clinching the pennant early, and with nothing at stake thereafter in the day-to-day games, would play carelessly, without spirit. At clubhouse pep talks, Southworth told his players he wanted them to win by the widest margin in National League history. Finally, he expressed a desire to win as many games as the Cardinals of 1942 did. That was 106.

Today they had chalked up 102 victories, with only two games remaining, but they displayed no terrific fire and dash in their recent games that would terrify any Yankee follower.

Queen Alexandra Soccer Team Ties With Central

Central and Queen Alexandra soccer elevens split the league points on Thursday afternoon on King Edward Park, when they enacted the same performance to get the same kind of goal scored. Simmonds for the North-enders and Everett for Central.

First Half.

Right from the kick-off Queen Alexandra forwards broke fast to beat the Central full backs before they got settled, to pick the inside of the upright, as Gaskill sent across a pass to Simmonds who gave the goalie no chance to save. Central took the initiative thereafter to bombard the North-enders' citadel from all angles while the half-back division of Welsh, Morin and Richardson tried hard to get their forwards on the attack. Simmonds, at centre, repeatedly broke fast to test the goalie who was conceding nothing. On one occasion Powers dribbled his way past the full backs to pick wrong side of the upright by inches. Play ran from end to end until the interval. Half time: Queen Alexandra 1, Central 0.

Second Half.

On resuming, Central enacted the same performance as their opponents did in the first minutes of the second period. Dormer carried the ball right up the centre to baffle the full backs, thereby permitting Edwards to score the equalizer. Midfield exchanges continued with the half-back divisions dominating the situation that produced nice combination as they worked into the respective citadels to find the full-backs well balanced and permitted no dangerous shots to get within shooting distance although series of flag-kicks for the North-enders caused the Central boys lots of anxiety. Just before the final whistle, B. Edwards was injured and had to retire. Full time score: Queen Alexandra 1, Central 1.

Goal scorers: B. Edwards for the Central, J. Simmonds for Queen Alexandra.

The teams:

Central — D. Long, goal; F. McMaster and D. Brook, full backs; J. Dormer, B. Edwards, and H. Chambers, halves; C. Sergeant, A. Carter, H. Wight, H. Keene, and J. Whitnal, forwards; subs, B. Dormer and K. Delahaye.

Queen Alexandra — W. Jary, goal; C. Jewell and D Crawford, full backs; D. Welsh, T. Morin and D. Richardson, halves; L. Gaskill, J. Nicholls, J. Dracup, J. Simmonds and Ken Powers, forwards.

Referee—Stroyan Leith, Sr.

Ted Wilks Chosen To Stop Chiefs

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Oct. 1—(AP)—A pitcher who learned his baseball in the Syracuse Chiefs' backyard will face the International Leaguers to-night for the American Association Columbus Red Birds in the opening 1943 Little World Series game.

In a series likely to hinge on hurling, Manager Nick Cullop will lead with Ted Wilks, of nearby Fulton, who won 16 and lost 8 in the Birds' regular season. He defeated the Chiefs in the final game of last year's Series.

Manager Jewel Ens will start Millard (Dixie) Howell, a right-hander who won 13 and lost 9 for the Chiefs, and produced three crucial play-off victories. Ens can then choose between Cuban Tom De La Cruz (21-11) and Lefty Arnold Carter (14-12).

Columbus will rely heavily on Southpaw Erwin (Preacher) Roe (15-7) and George Dockins (16-8) as they shoot for their third straight Little World Series title. Columbus defeated Montreal in 1941 and Syracuse last year four games to one.

The teams begin play to-night, and to-morrow night at 8:15 E.D.T., and Sunday at 3 p.m., then shift to Columbus. The best-of-seven-game series will conclude there, starting Monday night.

Most Valuable

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(AP).—A committee of baseball writers has named Andy Pafko, 22, outfielder of the Los Angeles Angels, Pacific Coast pennant winners, the most valuable player of that circuit. Pafko, who batted .365 in 157 games, joined the Chicago Cubs a few days ago. He was refused by the army because of high blood pressure.

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Not that it matters an out-of-date butter coupon now but we find ourselves forced in the interest of softball accuracy to go to the mat with Chick Appel, Stratford sports scribe. Chick has been discussing the play that came up in the fifth inning of the Stratford-Westclox game here last Saturday when with two out and the bases full for Kroehlers the next batter Hazel Baynton drilled a low liner at Marg. Watson. The Westclox shortstop came up with the ball as the Stratford runner on third dashed for the plate and fired the pellet home where the runner was safe. Meanwhile however the Stratford girl who had been on second held up on the play and when she did finally decide to make for third the ball beat her to the bag and she was declared out. Naturally the run was not counted for the third out was on a force play. The Stratford commentator takes exception to the decision, although he admits that Andy Davidson of Stratford who covered the game here contends that no run should be counted on the play.

* * * * * *

Here is what Chick Appel has to say on the point: "While this observer doesn't profess to be an authority, the contention from this corner is that the run should have counted. That run scored before the third out was made, and the play at third was another play. Whether it was a forceout or not has no bearing on the play at the plate, because the throw to the platter and the peg to third were two separate and distinct plays. In order to clear up the matter a ruling is being secured from an authority, which will be awaited with interest by this observer. The claim that the run in Peterborough should have counted is based on a play during the Newark-Syracuse game, when Goodey Rosen hauled in a liner at his shoetops and doubled a runner off second, but not before the runner on third had scored after the catch and before the second half of the double-play had been completed, to retire the side. The plate umpire in this instance ruled that the Newark run counted because, after making the catch Rosen ran about 90 feet toward the infield before tossing the ball to the Chief second sacker, who made the putout after the runner on third had scored."

* * * * * *

Remember the Merkle Incident

We are afraid the Stratford sport scribe is slipping, so we'll quote the rule for his benefit. "One run shall be scored every time a base-runner, after having legally touched the first three bases shall legally touch the home base before three men are put out; provided, however, that if he reach home on or during a play in which the third man be forced out or be put out before reaching first base, a run shall not count." That of course was the case under discussion. The third out was a forceout, cutting off the run. The play quoted by Appel is quite different. There the third out was not a forceout or a putout at first base and therefore the run was quite properly counted. Surely Chick, you haven't forgotten the Merkle incident that cost the New York Giants a pennant? In that case what looked to be the winning run crossed the plate minutes before the third out was registered but because the third out was a forceout the run was not allowed. In the final inning of an all-important game with the Chicago Cubs, with the score tied, two out and two runners on the bases, the New York batter slashed out a hit to apparently send in the winning counter. Merkle was on first when the hit was made, ran only part way to second and then dashed for the club-house. The excited New York fans swarmed out on the field to celebrate the victory. Johnny Evers, smart Cub second-sacker had noticed that Merkle did not reach second so he called for the ball, finally got it after a long delay, stepped on second in the midst of the milling fans and Merkle was declared out. That cut off the run as Merkle had been forced and the game had to be replayed afterward, the Cubs copping the playoff.

Tomorrow afternoon should see the Oshawa Colts entroned for the second year in succession as champions of Southern Ontario in the intermediate softball series. Guelph Woods who were beaten at home Wednesday by the Colts to the tune of 7 to 1 and stopped cold by old Preem Whiteley's smoke ball will invade Oshawa for the second game tomorrow and have to face the wily Dean McLaughlin and offhand we would say that the series is as good as over. The unbeaten Colts are not in the least likely to curl up at this stage of the game. Here is what Coach-Scribe George Campbell has to say about the Guelph club: "For the second year in succession, Oshawa Colts will appear in the O.A.S.A. Southern Ontario championship finals against Guelph. Last year it was Guelph Lelands and this time it's Guelph "Woods" but the team is just the same. They have a new pitcher, named Heess or Zess, who is rated as some shucks as a softball hurler, one of those "stuff" experts who also has a rare turn of speed. However, we note that when Guelph played their crucial game against Stratford, and when they also played at home against Stratford, it was Gord. Merkley, their veteran drop-ball expert who got the call. Merkley was given a couple of lickings by the Colts last year but back in 1940 he made the Oshawa Pepsi-Colas take a back seat. Merkley is good. He is not fast but he takes no time whatever between throws and his slow drop is a tantalizing pitch that is very hard to hit solidly. In Granger, Johnston, the Kostal brothers and a few more, the Guelph team has a club of dangerous hitters. Granger, their shortstop, was the home-run king last year and is again their top hitter."

Here's What Happened

F. R. Feaver, secretary of the O.A.S.A. is coming to our rescue these days with frequent communications that help fill up the column and we are duly grateful. One appears today in which the O.A.S.A. official gives the result of the meeting of the sub-committee held at Hamilton last Sunday, attended by Dave Leether, of Peterborough, O.A.S.A. vice-president, Fred C. Scates, secretary of the Peterborough Softball League, the managers of the Genelecs and Soldier teams and Lieut. W. Bowerman, sports officer of the Military Training Centre. The 4th Battery, Switchgear, Combines and Cardinals did not send a representative. It was decided that the secretary should give the press a "handout" on the proceedings, hence Mr. Feaver's letter. It may be summarized as a vote of confidence in the O.A.S.A. representative here and in the City League executive, something that so far as Peterborough was concerned did not need any committee meeting and the offering of a number of suggestions for the benefit of the organization in future seasons. Certainly the recommendation that the league should have a written constitution is in order and there is no reason why the clubs should not be represented on the executive, two of the most important suggestions arising from the meeting.

The Katan-Clayborne bout, scheduled for next Tuesday night at the Brock Street Arena has the wrestling fans all agog and most of them are hoping that the Black Comet will give the Killer a memorable trimming. They haven't forgotten the manner in which Katan took the deciding fall here six weeks ago or the scenes that followed that unsatisfactory ending and they feel that Referee Maxwell missed the boat completely on that occasion. Then of course the Panther's refusal to meet Clayborne in a return bout and his uncomplimentary remarks about the unfairness of the Peterborough fans haven't done anything to make the local followers of the game think any more kindly of him. The result will be that Katan can count on his every move being booed while on the other hand Gentleman Jack will have every customer in the house pulling for him. The result should be a terrific brawl for Katan is not the kind of a bird who will take that sort of thing

Sunocos On Top Of Scoring With 3628 Pins

The Men's City Bowling League with 16 full teams in action got away to a flying start in a long winter's schedule at Duffus' Alleys last night. Sunocos topped the team scoring with 3268 pins for three games, with Roy Lewis coming through with a 757 high three and a 315 single to beat Harold Freeman's 308. Shocky Mein's Cleanrites nailed the high single team game with 1170.

The feature of the night was the showing put up by the three new teams from C.G.E. and Genelco when the Machine Shop outfit downed the classy Stags 3 to 0, the Ramblers taking Empress for 2 points and Fractional Motors nosing out Jay's champions in the last game by eleven pins to win a point.

Pat will be in there, bringing the Yankees luck and passing the ammunition during the series.

Here and There in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Wartime employment requirements have been holding up negotiations for the signing of three hockey players by Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, it as revealed at Ottawa last night, and the case may yet prove to be a sample of the problem which sport clubs will have to face in acquiring performers.

The puck-chasers involved are Albert and Tony Lemay and Stan Pratt who had played with Ottawa senior teams in recent years. It had been announced they would turn pro with Canadiens, but denial was quickly forthcoming they had applied their signatures to contracts. Last night Albert, as spokesman of the Lemay brothers said they were Government employees whose jobs had been frozen and they would only be able to play home games for the Habitants under prospective arrangements with Federal authorities. It was also stated that Pratt was a member of the Ottawa Fire Department and it was inferred the same employment conditions were applicable to him. President T. P. Gorman of the Canadiens was reported to be going to Ottawa from Montreal for an important conference regarding the services of the trio.

Cook Is Coach.

President Al Sutphin of the Cleveland Barons in the American Hockey League last night announced the signing of Fred (Bun) Cook as coach, succeeding his brother, Bill Cook, who takes charge of the farm club operations. Fred coached the Providence Reds last season.

Boarding a street car in San Francisco, Joe DiMaggio, former Yankee outfielder in the U.S. Army, accidentally dropped his "home-run token" in the fare box, a 1905 Indian head penny. An appeal to the municipal railway officials resulted in a prodigious search—and the coin was restored to the famous home-runner.

New York Yankees yesterday announced the purchase of seven twirlers and one outfielder from Newark and Kansas City, their farm clubs. Pitchers Walt Dubiel, Gordy Rose and Joe Page and Outfielder Don Savage were acquired from the International League club.

Swede Gets Bride

The engagement was informally announced last night at Oakland, Calif., of 19-year-old Dorothy Nortier to Gunder Haegg, record-breaking Swedish runner who toured the States last summer. Mother of the blond high-school graduate said they had become engaged when the daughter flew to New York before Gunder returned to Sweden.

According to personal advices from his prison camp, Flt. Sgt. Observer Carl (Soggy) Norton, former footballer with Ottawa Rough Riders and Balmy Beach, has been playing football and baseball in Germany. Before going overseas in May, 1942, he had trained at Jarvis and Fingal and previously had been an Ottawa police constable.

N. Salary Cut

Leo Durocher announced at Cincinnati last night he would not be manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers next season if President Branch Rickey wanted him to work for a stated salary of $15,000, a 50 per cent cut from 1943. Durocher pointed out Manager Joe McCarthy "gets about $40,000 from the Yankees."

Coach Homer Norton of the Texas Aggies is laying claim to the fastest football team in the United States with a dozen students in the squad who average 10 seconds for the 100-yards dash, along with a hurdler or two and some middle-distance runners. Most of the gridders are 17-year-old recruits or younger, however.

● Those veterans of Nelson's Navy and Wellington's Army who settled on the site of Peterborough shortly after the Napoleonic wars have worthy representatives in the city's sons today. Canada's armed forces number plenty of Peterborough men on their rosters and already their services have been recognised by His Majesty the King.

The Distinguished Flying Cross, the British Empire Medal, the George Cross, are among the decorations won by citizens in the forces—others have been Mentioned in Despatches—still others have been made Members of the British Empire. Women of Peterborough too have distinguished themselves, chief of them being Lt.-Col. Agnes Neill who has been awarded the Royal Red Cross, First Class.

Peterborough the "Liftlock City," also serves well on the industrial front. Its huge hydraulic lock has a 65-foot lift and contributes vitally to water transport. The lock has a record lockage of 6½ minutes for a vessel to go from the lower to the upper reach. Its diversified industries, with a volume of goods valued in 1940 at $39,965,533, and ranging from cereals to generators, from electrical motors to clocks, with many important products between are contributing immensely to Canada's war production. Women are active not only in industrial war work but in the organizations devoted to war service and charities. Youth, too, is contributing enthusiasm and efficiency to training movements and assistance in local salvage and other drives. In every field of war effort the city of Peterborough is doing a grand job.

SHIP'S WARRANT PRESENTED

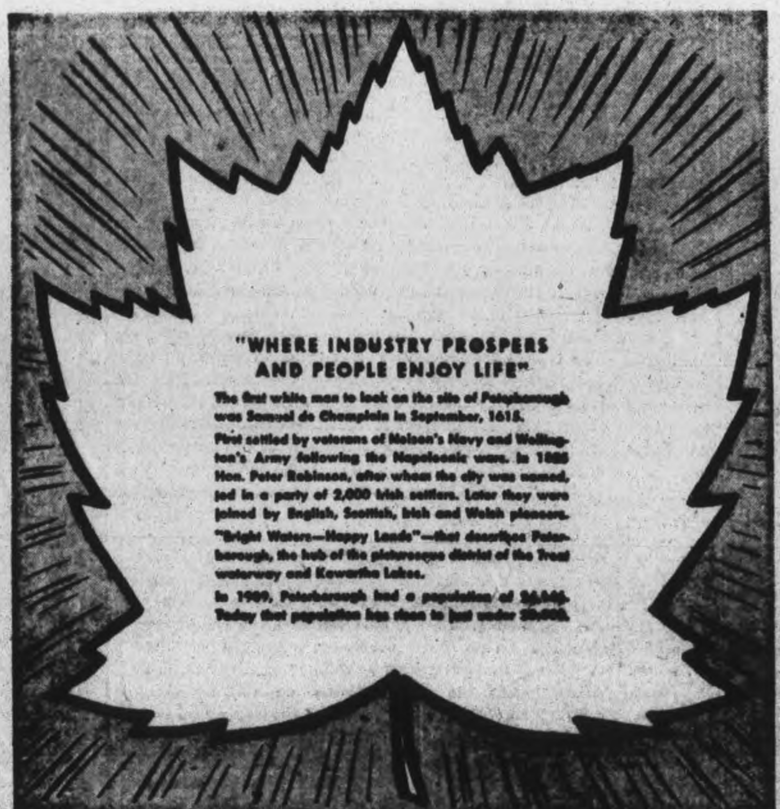
WOMEN SHOULDER WAR JOBS

As men of the city enter the services, more and more women are shouldering the responsibility of war work—running turret and engine lathes and even taking up welding. One plant shows an increase of 26.3% in number of local women workers.



"WHERE INDUSTRY PROSPERS AND PEOPLE ENJOY LIFE"

The first white man to look on the site of Peterborough was Samuel de Champlain in September, 1615.

First settled by veterans of Nelson's Navy and Wellington's Army following the Napoleonic wars. In 1825 Hon. Peter Robinson, after whom the city was named, led in a party of 2,000 Irish settlers. Later they were joined by English, Scottish, Irish and Welsh pioneers.

CHANDLER HURLS HITLESS 3-INNING TUNE-UP AGAINST CHICAGO

Yankees Lose 8 to 3; Giants Blanked

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sport Writer

Spud Chandler, 20 - game winner for the New York Yankees, is in top form for his expected 3 starting assignments against the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series— the first, fourth and the seventh game, if necessary.

The ace right hander twirled three hitless innings against the Chicago White Sox yesterday in his final tuneup for the fall classic that opens Tuesday. His brief appearance lowered his earned-run average for the season to 1.67, the best in the American League since 1919.

The fact that the White Sox landed on Bill Zuber for an 8-3 victory after Chandler's departure was important only to the Sox who are putting on a great drive to oust Cleveland from third place in the American league. The triumph was the Sox's 13th success in 16 starts and put them within one percentage point of the Indians.

Dodgers Take One

Howie Krist, of the Cardinals, also served notice he is ready as a possible World Series starter by shutting out the New York Giants 1-0, on six hits in a night game at St Louis.

Brooklyn Dodgers tightened their hold on third place in the National League by capitalizing on a shaky start by Elmer Riddle to beat Cincinnati 3-2 and end the Reds' 10-game winning streak.

Rookie Andy Pafko, selected as the most valuable player in the Pacific Coast League where he played with Los Angeles, sparked the Chicago Cubs to an uphill 5-4 victory over the Boston Braves in 12 innings. The Cubs tied the score with three runs in ninth, again in the 11th, and won in the 12th on Pafko's fourth hit of the game.

Luckless Luman Harris of the Philadelphia Athletics lost his 21st game of the season as Detroit blanked the A's, 6-0, in a fast game that lasted only one hour and 18 minutes.

TORONTO, Sept. 30 — (CP) — There are likely to be a few disappointed junior hockey clubs this winter. Several clubs planned to import almost complete teams from other provinces, but there are indications the Manitoba branch of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, at least, will turn thumbs down on requests for interprovincial transfers for minors. It is reported that Manitoba refused transfers to three Winnipeg players seeking to join Moose Jaw's junior team in the Southern Saskatchewan League.

If other provincial associations, notably Saskatchewan, refuse the transfers to juniors there is likely to be an interesting test of professional hockey's influence with the C.A.H.A. For example, Eddie Shore has eyes on a number of Saskatoon players for his Buffalo Bisons. Those who don't make the grade will be placed with Bisons' Brantford, Ont., farm club, the Junior Lions. Saskatoon is already bewailing the fact most of its juniors are being taken by the pros. Saskatoon won't sit back without a squawk if transfers are sought to move the youngsters into Brantford.

Predictions, unlimited:

Jack Adams, Detroit Red Wings manager, predicts great expansion of the National Hockey League after the war. Addressing junior players of his Galt Farm Club the other night Adams said: "There will be lots of room for hockey players in the National League, particularly after the war. They are planning a big sports palace at Brooklyn, while Philadelphia and some of the other larger cities will be in the N.H.L. after the war." Could he mean Buffalo, Cleveland, Washington, and some of the other American League cities?

Round and about:

There's a move afoot in Lindsay, Ont., to have Toronto Rangers play all their home games in Lindsay this winter. At that, Rangers might draw more in Lindsay than they did as a Junior A team in Toronto last season.....Dink Carroll of the Montreal Gazette says a syndicate of Montreal business men seeks to buy back control of the International League Royals from Brooklyn Dodgers. The whispered price is $250,000.....Alberta University rejected a Saskatchewan bid for revival of Western intercollegiate football this fall Alberta's refusal was on the grounds travel must be kept to a minimum in wartime.

Yankee Rookie Wants Action

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—(AP)—The rookie who is perhaps carrying the biggest question mark into the world series is Arthur Beauregard (Bud) Metheny of the New York Yankees.

There will be other freshmen present, notably Third Baseman Bill Johnson of the Yankees and Second Baseman Lou Klein of the St. Louis Cardinals as well as several Red Bird pitchers, but Metheny's status is different from that of the other first year men. Their assignments in the series don't depend on how well they hit, or on whether the opposing team uses a right or left-handed pitcher.

The Yankees regular outfield composed of Charley Keller, Roy (Stormy) Weatherly and Metheny is entirely a portsided batting outfit and it is believed Manager Joe McCarthy may do some juggling to get righthanded swingers like Tuck Stainback and Johnny Lindell into the outfield when the Cardinals parade their southpaws to the mound.

Metheny, however, wants to play in every game and to do this will have to hit at least as good as the .267 average he holds in regular season competition.

OASA Outlines Plan For Softball

F. R. Feaver, of Hamilton, secretary of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association sends the Examiner the following letter covering last Sunday's meeting of the O.A.S.A. sub-committee. The communication speaks for itself.

Hamilton, Sept. 27, 1943.

To the Editor, Examiner.

Dear Sir:

We are pleased to advise that the recent controversy in Peterborough softball affairs, which we understand has been widely publicized, has been settled to the mutual satisfaction of all parties concerned.

To absolve the hard-working executive of the Peterborough Softball Association and for the information of the Peterborough softball fans, we would request that this letter be published in its entirety in your good paper.

Th findings of the O.A.S.A. sub-committee which were concurred in by all the Peterborough City League representatives who were present at the committee meeting were as follows:

1. The O.A.S.A. places all confidence in its Peterborough representative. Mr. Dave Leether and the executive officers of the Peterborough City League.

2. The O.A.S.A. suggests that immediate ratification of a constitution by the Peterborough City League is imperative.

3. The O.A.S.A. suggests that in order to benefit softball and to prevent any recurrence of such a controversy, the Peterborough City League should allow the OA.S.A. to send in a representative, either the O.A.S.A. president or his appointee, who with the co-operation of Mr. Dave Leether (O.A.S.A. vice-president) would oversee the appointment of a constitution and convene the elections of the officers for the ensuing year.

4. The O.A.S.A. suggests that all moneys should be immediately placed in a trust fund, in the name of Dave Leether, to be returned to the secretary-treasurer, after a constitution has been ratified and the officers for the ensuing year have been elected

5. The O.A.S.A. suggests that all teams should be allowed representation on the executive committee and should have a vote on all affairs pertaining to the management of the league.

6. The O.A.S.A. suggests that all parties concerned should now go forward with the resolve to show everyone that no hard feelings exist; and if all the above points are followed no possibility of a questioning finger will remain for the future.

Respectfully submitted by
F. R. FEAVER,
O.A.S.A. Secretary.

Beaches-Cats Tangle For Top Place

By The Canadian Press

It is doubtful whether any team in the Ontario Rugby Football Union senior series this season will be able to lay claim to holding first place for the entire campaign.

At present three teams—Toronto R.C.A.F., Hamilton Flying Wildcats, and Toronto Balmy Beach—are tied for top slot. Beaches and Wildcats tangle at Varsity Stadium in Toronto on Saturday, and one of them will be in first place Saturday night.

Due to schedule arrangements for a midweek game with Toronto Indians at Maple Leaf Stadium in Toronto, Hurricanes will sit on the sidelines on Saturday and at best will be tied for second place until Wednesday. Toronto Navy travels to Ottawa to meet Dave Sprague's Combines in the other week-end fixture.

Play Open Style.

The game in Toronto should provide the best contest on Saturday. Both Wildcats and Beaches feature an open style of play and while the Cats have Joe Krol to toss forwards for them, reports have Frank Stukus of Beaches getting away some good pitches in practice this week.

Ed Jakubowski still is bothered by a leg injury and will not show for Beaches, but Harry Sonshine, former Queen's University and Toronto Argonauts star, is expected to make his debut in a comeback role. Coach Alex Ponton has signed Ab Tonn, former St. Michael's College gridder and he may be out Saturday.

Toronto Navy has lost both its starts this season, but each time managed to make their conquerors look sickly. The Sailors will be meeting a strengthened Combine team in the Capital, Coach Sprague having signed Backfielder Tommy Daley and Linesman Leo Seguin, both of whom are expected to be out Saturday.

Combines also have dropped their first two starts and the game should give some indication of how the teams will line up for the remainder of the season.

The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—(AP).—Caught right in the middle, the local baseball scribes who handled World Series press reservations won't say whether the demand this year is larger or smaller than they could handle...."If we say more," one explained, "somebody in Washington might get excited; if we say less, the newspapermen we turned down would get excited."...Strictly unofficial watchword of the Ranger hockey club this year is: "We can't be any worse than the New York Giants."

One-minute sports page:

In case you're wondering how the scalpers manage to get World Series tickets, Jackie Ferrell reports that the only pasteboards mailed before yesterday went to out-of-town applicants, so some must have bounced back....The Detroit Lions claim to be the best-scouted team in the National Football League. They open the season a week ahead of the rest and every team in the circuit had a man watching them.

You pick 'em:

(Concluding the World Series dope with a few notes on the managers.)

Joe McCarthy, Yankees—Square-hewn, hard-to-know sort of guy; runs his team like a business and it usually means business...There's no questioning his ability as a manager, since he's won eight American League championships, one National League and two American Association...This year apparently was final proof because he had less than ever to start on but still won.

Billy Southworth, Cardinals — Small, affable and boyish looking. When you meet him you don't wonder that his players run their legs off trying to win for him...Played for the Cards when they beat the Yanks in 1926; managed the club for a few months in 1929, then went back for a fresh start at Rochester. Returned in mid season, 1940, and so far has piloted his team to two pennants and one world championship.

(Now, if you've digested all this information, you pick 'em, Hugh won't.)

Loss Of Destroyer St. Croix Greatest Disaster Of Canadian Navy In This War

OTTAWA, Oct. 1—(CP).—The torpedo sinking of the Canadian destroyer St. Croix with loss of all but one of her 148-man crew in the North Atlantic was announced today by Navy Minister Macdonald—the heaviest individual loss in men suffered by the Royal Canadian Navy in the war.

The only survivor was Stoker W. A. Fisher, R.C.N.V.R., of Black Diamond, Alta.

Following is the Royal Canadian Navy's official casualty list in the sinking of the destroyer St. Croix containing the names of 145 of those missing with official numbers and next-of-kin of Ontario men and home towns of other next of kin:

minesweeper, either by mishap at sea or enemy action.

The toll of life in the St. Croix sinking—146 reported missing—is the Navy's largest single loss in men, just topping the loss of 142 when the destroyer Margaree was sunk in the North Atlantic, cut in two by a large steamship while manoeuvring in defence of a convoy against a night submarine attack.

Lt.-Cmdr. Andrew H. Dobson, 42, of Halifax was in command of St. Croix and is listed among the missing.

So is Lt.-Cmdr. P. F. M. DeFreitas of Victoria, recently cited for fine work in command of one of the Canadian ships which assisted the United States Navy in operations against the Aleutian Islands in the Pacific. DeFreitas was serving temporarily on the St. Croix, having joined her less than a week before as part of an advanced training course.

Among the missing also was Surgeon Lt. William Lyon Mackenzie King, nephew and namesake of the Prime Minister of Canada. Lieut. King was born in Ottawa. His mother now lives at Bedford, N.S.

Lt.-Cmdr. Paul Simon Major of Montreal, grandson of the late Hon. S. N. Parent, former premier of Quebec Province and Mayor of Quebec City, was another officer posted missing.

One Name To Come.

The Navy made public the names of 145 of the 146 missing men. The one remaining casualty will be made known later.

Men from all provinces, many with long records at sea in the ceaseless struggle waged by the Canadian Navy against submarines, are missing. The casualty list shows 50 whose next-of-kin live in Ontario, 22 in Quebec, 16 in British Columbia, 14 in Nova Scotia, nine in Manitoba, eight in Saskatchewan, seven in Alberta, six in New Brunswick, and two n Prnce Edward Island.

Five have next-of-kin in Newfoundland, three in England three in the United States and two in Scotland.

Cmdr. Dobson, a master mariner in civilian life, had already won distinction with his ship. He received the Distinguished Service Cross for his handling of the St Croix in the destruction of a submarine.

In the United States Navy the St. Croix was called the McCook. Following transfer to Canada, like other Canadian destroyers she was renamed for a river and, to commemorate her origin, after a river common to the United States and Canada—the one forming the boundary between Maine and New Brunswick. The other six "four-stackers" were similarly named, the Annapolis, Columbia, Niagara, St. Francis, St. Clair and Hamilton.

In the intensified submarine warfare against Atlantic convoys now apparently reopened, the Canadian Navy will play a major role. Convoy operations in the western half of the North Altantic are under Canadian naval control although both British and United States ships may be serving in the area.

The long-range air patrols are carried out by squadrons of the R.C.A.F. using Liberator bombers and operating in co-operation with the Canadian Navy.

R.C.A.F. Members In Fight With Nazi Subs In Mid-Atlantic

Air Vice Marshal A. E. Godfrey, M.C., A.F.C., V.D., A.D.C., who manned a gun in a recent mid-Atlantic attack on German U-boats, is seen here with the crew of the R.C.A.F. Liberator bomber in which he flew. The crew are just climbing aboard a small tractor for a lift back to dispersal. From LEFT to RIGHT: Warrant Officer Jake Silverstein, Windsor, W.A.G.; Flight Lieutenant Stan Bruce, Vancouver, B.C., navigator; Air Vice Marshal A. E. Godfrey, Deputy Inspector-General of R.C.A.F. headquarters; Sergeant Ray Ware, Vancouver, B.C., W.A.G.; Warrant Officer Frank Jenkins, Millview, P.E.I., AT WHEEL; Flying Officer Steve Sanderson, London, Ont., co-pilot; Squadron Leader Fred Green of St. Thomas, pilot; and Warrant Officer Mickey MacDonald, Woodstock, N.B.

Recruit Plan

recruits.

Addressing a joint conference of army and air force recruiting officers from all across the country, Defence Minister Ralston and Air Minister Power are understood to have stated that co-operation and not competition is to be the rule.

And, they said, it is to be co-operation in spirit as well as in observance of the letter of the regulations. The idea is to get every man into the spot where he can serve best, and there is to be no grabbing of men for one service who are fit for the other without giving each man an opportunity to know about his fitness for the other and to make a free choice.

"It is hoped that this scheme will assure a more effective use of all fit manpower who now are in, or who may in future join any of the armed services," said a joint statement issued last night.

Co-operative experiments carried out at army reception centres at Kingston, Ont., and Regina, where both army and air force recruiting officers interviewed prospective recruits were successful, and will be extended to all recruiting centres.

said 2,200 Germans were killed, numerous prisoners were taken, and 170 towns captured in the drives on White Russia. Gains of from six to seven miles were recorded.

Moscow dispatches said that capture of heavily-fortified Gomel, another key enemy strongpoint and last city in German hands on the eastern side of the Dnieper, was expected hourly. Nearest Red Army units were reported less than 12 miles away. Others crashed ahead to the east bank of the Sozh river in a flanking movement north of the city.

Further advances northwest of Rudnya, captured Wednesday, increased the threat to Vitebsk, 40 miles to the west on the rail route to Riga and the Baltic Sea.

Gen. Marshall To Lead Invasion Force

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 —(AP)—The New York Times said in a London dispatch today that it had been learned that Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff, will become commander-in-chief of the Allied forces in the British Isles and would establish headquarters in London soon to direct the Allied invasion of the continent from the west.

"It is maintained in high quarters here (London)," said the dispatch, "that Gen. Marshall's command will deal solely with the invasion of the continent from the west, and will not include Allied commands in other theatres of operation."

The dispatch said Marshall will direct "all forces which actually attack Europe in the west regardless of where they come from," and declared the source of the information indicated that Marshall would not supersede Gen. Dwight Eisenhower "who will continue to act as commander-in-chief of the Allied forces until Gen. Marshall's armies from the west meet the armies from the south and establish one continuous front against the Reich."

Then, the dispatch continued, "it is understood that Gen. Marshal will assume supreme command of all Allied forces on the continent—a command which would be far greater than that held by Gen. John J. Pershing, with whom he served in the First World War."

Canned Milk Sales To Be Restricted

PHILADELPHIA, October 1 — (CP). — A plan has been developed to restrict sales of evaported milk in Canada and maintain a guaranteed supply for preferred users, J. P. Nadeau, deputy administrator of dairy products for the Prices Board, said in address prepared for delivery here today.

Mr. Nadeau said the domestic consumption of evaporated milk has been increasing rapidly and that it is felt some restriction will be needed if the product is to be available for infant feeding and special diets, as recommended by medical authorities.

"In this connection, a plan has been developed whereby the sales of evaporated milk will be restricted and a guaranteed supply maintained for preferred users," he said.

"This plan will be announced and become effective in the near future."

Britain's Youth Service Has Solved Juvenile Delinquency

By JAMES A. ROY

(This is the eighth article in the series of articles being wr'tten for The Examiner, by Prof. James A. Roy, of Queen's University, Kingston, on wartime conditions in Great Britain.)

The problem of juvenile delinquency is not nearly so menacing as in the last war as so much has been done to control it. One medium is the Youth Service, to which I have already briefly referred in dealing with the Scottish scene.

This is the problem in brief and one of the main domestic difficulties of the war situation. Young boys and girls leave school at 14 or 15. They earn a lot of money and there is a disorganization of family life. The authorities have tried to cope with the problem by development of the Youth Services which aim at providing recreational facilities in the broadest sense for boys and girls who have left school. These Youth Services work largely through voluntary agencies. There has been a great advance in the recreational facilities. The main idea is to keep these adolescents off the streets.

It is the first time in history that the state has come to realize its moral responsibility towards young people. Up till now the state has looked after children at school. It has helped them to go to universities, but it has done little in the past for boys and for girls who have left school. Now, owing to the war situation, the state has been compelled to tackle the problem systematically and try to do something for the young people.

It might be interesting to give in greater detail some account of the Youth Service.

The Youth Service was begun shortly after the start of the war to look after the training and welfare of young people between the ages of 14 and 20. Of the children who leave school at the age of 14, less than 40 per cent have in the past continued their education and training through evening institutes or voluntary youth organizations (Brigades, Scouts, Clubs, Guides). The need for the extension of youth work was increased by war conditions, in particular by the blackout; the disorganization of family life through evacuation and the call-up; and the loss of many recreational facilities, as well as by the general strain of war. To meet these conditions the Board of Education was made directly responsible by the Government for the young people of these ages and the Youth Service Branch was set up as a special branch of the Board. A National Youth Committee was set up to advise the Board; more recently a Youth Advisory Council has been formed to replace it.

Central direction of the Youth Service rests with the Board of Education. It is administered locally through local youth committees, which are designed to co-ordinate all the agencies covering the welfare and training of young people — local education authorities, voluntary organizations, the churches, teachers, employers and employees, as well as the local health and employment services. Their function is to advise and assist local education authorities in the development of the Youth Service in their areas.

Development of the Youth Service may be carried out both through the recreational side of Evening Institute Youth Centres or Old Scholars' Clubs under the local education authority, and through the development of the existing work carried on by voluntary organizations. In this, the voluntary organizations may be aided either by the local education authority or directly by the Board of Education. In 1942-43 the Board's direct grants were £250,000.

Training for Citizenship and Service

The Youth Service was intended from the beginning not merely to cover provision of recreational facilities, but to provide for the training of young people in self-government and good citizenship, and as a means of continued education in the widest sense of the term. It is concerned with all aspects of training, physisal, mental and spiritual, and a large proportion of the Youth Clubs are connected with churches.

The concept at the back of this Youth Service is that of youth supplying service for youth. It emerged in the early stages of development in the growth of Youth Service Squads formed of young people wishing to give help locally in the national war effort. It received special emphasis towards the end of 1941 when boys and girls in 16 and 17-year age groups had to register for training and service. Local education authorities were asked to interview those young people who did not appear to be connected with any youth activity, and to encourage them to take up such activity. Many of these young people, no doubt because of the war, expressed a preference for pre-service training, and this has led to a much closer association between the boys' pre-service organizations (Sea Cadets, Army Cadet Force and Air Training Corps) and the education service both centrally and locally.

While the Youth Service was started as part of the policy of the Government for providing for the needs of the civil population in wartime, it is not merely a wartime expedient. It is a permanent element in the public education system of the country and one which will have a vital part to play in educational reconstruction and development after the war.

Monaghan Snubs City Council Sees Minister

"Discourtesy" and "affront" were two of the terms of resentment in Alderman Gordon's strictures against North Monaghan Council's manoeuvre of consulting the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs about an enlargement of the area of the township to be annexed by the city and ignoring the joint special committee, of which Alderman Gordon is chairman, as the digression in procedure was disclosed at last night's meeting of the finance committee with Alderman Cotton presiding.

Mayor Hamilton, trying to extenuate and put the best possible front upon the township's indirection, was verbally backed into a corner by Aldermen Gordon and Bradburn, with sundry and milder help from their associates. It was an aldermanic outburst of indignation against "those birds who have been telling their people we were going to gobble them up and they were going to be sold down the river," and in a sense they "ganged up" on Mayor Hamilton, who admitted that the special committee should have been consulted, but at the same time the city should not condemn the Township Council until they had a chance to be heard. He suggested that it might simply have been an oversight, and Alderman Gordon's reply was that he knew Bruce Johnston and Alex Archibald better than to credit them only with thoughtlessness in such matters.

Map Starts Things

"The fact is they want to get it wound up before voting time on January first," Alderman Bradburn added.

The flare-up followed City Engineer Parsons' introduction of an altered map of the area for annexation, including a 227-foot strip on the south side of Lansdowne street from the C.N.R., approximately to the south end of Western avenue and including the May's School property. This addition on the south side of No. 7 highway can be imagined as a westerly extension of the Elmwood Park property of the Ovaltine Company which reached from Park street to the Canadian National Railway to Port Hope.

Several additions are also contemplated on the northwest side of the proposed area, incorporating Dr. Preston's residences and several other properties between the north end of Western avenue and the west end of Charlotte street at the Wartime Housing community.

Went To Headquarters

It was reported that Monaghan Council held a meeting Tuesday night and passed a resolution proposing these alterations to the area to be annexed, then went up to consult A. J. B. Gray, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, and were advised to pass a bylaw to that effect.

"They thought it was a better way to handle the situation, and they had no intention of putting anything over the city," Mayor Hamilton said.

Monaghan's action in this detail was still in the preliminary stage of negotiation by the two municipalities.

"If it was nothing more, it was a good deal of lack of courtesy," said Alderman Gordon, who told the committee that the more he looked over the western suburban section the more he was impressed by the extent of second-rate land and property, with a quicksand bottom, cesspools, danger of outbreak of disease, difficult conditions for the laying of sewers, and generally a rather unattractive addition to the city when the whole area was considered.

Consider Others

"If we were thinking only of our best interests we would be doing more to encourage the people over in the Claraday district who want to come into the city," Alderman Gordon said. "A number of the men over in that eastern part of the township have been talking to me about coming in. It would make up for the other part where many of the values are low."

Alderman Bradburn declared the city might as well withdraw its representatives from the joint committee if that was all the consideration it received from Monaghan. He also said that Claraday residents had spoken to him about annexation, but he did not know whether that sentiment was general among the suburban people in the eastern district south of No. 7 highway.

"I considered it an affront to the committee," Alderman Gordon said.

Alderman Dutton commented that the annexation committee, composed of several members from each council, had apparently been making progress with preliminary investigation and had done considerable work.

"It looks as if they are trying to put a muzzle to our head," Alderman Gordon said.

As to Claraday section, he said, "I am inclined to think a majority of the people in that suburb want to come into the city. I would like to see them come in, if that is their wish."

Take Steps

He recommended opposition to North Monaghan's application to the Department of Municipal Affairs. "We might well tell City Solicitor Huycke to take steps at once to get ready for any hearing, get witnesses and prepare a brief.

"And I'm not opposing the application because the main C.C.F. vote came from down there," Alderman Gordon said jestingly.

The application is to add the strip on the south side of Lansdowne street from the C.N.R. approximately to the C.P.R., west of May's School.

Alderman Dutton commented that the very least concession to courtesy was for Monaghan to have told the joint committee that they were going to Toronto.

Won't Take Rap

Behind the move, Alderman Bradburn said, seemed to be something the city had not heard of. "This thing was mentioned to me today, and when something more was to be added in confidence I said I didn't wish to hear anything of that kind."

"If we let them get away with this we would be the laughing stock of the community," Alderman Gordon stated.

Said Alderman Bradburn: "They came to us and asked for a joint committee, and it was understood that each group would report back to its own council. We agreed to that, but now they go off to Toronto to apply to the Municipal Board for an order to annex the area they have set out. If that is the attitude they are going to take, it is time the city took some stand in the matter."

Wants To Resign

Alderman Gordon said he could see no further purpose in continuing the joint committee and would resign as chairman at the meeting of the Council Monday night.

His motion to oppose the Monaghan move was seconded by Alderman Bradburn.

"Well, I'm going to move an amendment that we continue conversations with the township," Mayor Hamilton replied. "I don't see why we should throw up our hands because we don't like something they did. I don't think they intended any discourtesy to us. We can tell them we don't like what they did."

Alderman Gordon said he was in sympathy with Mayor Hamilton's proposal. "But, I don't think it is a true amendment to the motion. It is an entirely different idea, and I hope His Worship supports my motion. All I want to do is to take steps to prepare for probable hearing of their application. We should be prepared."

Aldermen Swanston and Sands, members of the joint committee, expressed themselves in sympathy with Alderman Gordon's stand.

Alderman Dutton gave his decision as chairman that the amendment was a separate motion. Both were adopted. All the aldermen voted for the Gordon preparedness move.

He Missed The Duck

PORT HOPE, Ont., Oct. 1 (CP).—Then there was the duck hunter who went out last week-end on his favorite sport, after a long week's work in the file factory here. He journeyed far and took up his stand in a likely looking spot. Practical jokers had substituted feathers for shot in this nimrod's shells.

CGE Employees Win Money For Suggestions

R. C. Boulter and Sawyer White, both of the Machine Repair department of the C.G.E. were winners of the top prizes for ideas submitted to the Suggestion Committee for improvements in working methods. A total of $731 was awarded to 100 employees this week.

The highest award went to Mr. Boulter who won $120 for an idea on tool and gauge for truing up ways on lathes, which does the work in one-eighth the time it takes to do the job by hand. Sawyer White, who won $100, had an idea for a belt tightener on an Automatic Stripper in the Electrode department.

Several other employees entered worthwhile suggestions netting them fair sized rewards. T. K. Hardill of the Wire department won $50 for his improvement in lubrication of the Ross oven; G. Wall of Induction Motor Winding got $50 for improving the method of varnish treatment.

Holly Mowry of Switchgear earned $40 for a method of machining parts where 18 pieces can be milled at once; W. Maynard of Structural steel received $30 for manufacturing a spool body by welding; J. Reid of the Porcelain department won $30 for improving the glaze of porcelain and J. Hamilton of the Wire department got $20 for his suggestion of winding three coils at the same time.

There were 92 other winners who received prizes ranging form $15 to $1. The largest number of winners, 52, were given cheques for $2 each.

Million Records Are Required

Because of the needs of war which make it nearly impossible to obtain the materials which go into the manufacture of phonograph records, and because of their entertainment value to the men in the Armed services, the campaign in Peterborough and Canada for the collection of 1,000,000 used phonograph records during Salvage Week, Oct. 2 to Oct. 9, is one of great importance.

Even if the tunes are as old as the hills and the records themselves are worn, chipped or cracked, old victrola disks have an irreplacable value and one that no amount of money can supply. The materials in the records which are turned in during the drive will be used to make new records for use in Active Service camps, on ships, and in lonely outposts throughout Canada. The importance of music as a morale-builder has always been emphasized.

In Peterborough all city and county schools will serve as record depots and pick-ups for large quantities can be arranged by phoning 5712. Central collecting depot for the drive beginning today is at the Fire Hall on Aylmer street.

The campaign is being conducted by service clubs throughout the city, with Jacob Low acting as chairman of the committee and Mayor Hamilton the honorary chairman. Committee members include: Dennis Fitzgerald, Kiwanis; Arthur Cauley, Rotary; William Osborne, Kinsmen; Jack Armitage, Lions; George Moore, Y's Men's Club; Mrs. Munro, W.V.S.; Fred Cripps, Business Men's Association, and Bert Krugel, B'nai B'rith Lodge.

Good Neighbors Total $742 For War Victims

To get away to a good start is something which ensures a better chance of making a good finish, and so it is pleasing to be able to state, that having finished and sent over another donation of £500 to the Lord Mayor of London, the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund has gotten away to a good start towards the next contribution which will be of special nature, for the fund will endeavor to duplicate last year's achievement by sending a special double donation for the festive season of Christmas, besides endeavoring to send the same special amount of £500 to give the children whose homes have been wrecked an opportunity to celebrate in a way they otherwise would not be able, unless funds are sent to promote them with the means of so doing.

The Good Neighbor group headed by Mrs. W. Townsley and Mrs. P. Kitchen who live beside each other on Ware street, have done such a splendid job in raising money for the fund, that it would seem an excellent omen of good fortune that their latest contribution should be the one to set ball rolling towards this special objective, this time in an amount of $47.00, which now gives them a total of $742.05, a wonderful achievement for a group of women who hold weekly house parties on behalf of the fund, and with three-quarters of the journey covered, it would not seem too over optimistic to feel that in the not too distant future they will reach the four figure mark in help thus given.

This latest contribution came from parties held at the homes of Mrs. W. Reynolds, Albert street, Mrs. A. Williams on Ware street, Mrs. V. Hill, Gladstone avenue, Mrs. V. Davidson of McDonnel street and Mrs. G. Thompson of Aylmer street, each of whom did a full share in the raising of this particular gift by making their homes available for the holding of these weekly social events.

Through C. A. Putnam, manager of the Royal Bank of Hastings, and fund representative in that place, comes a donation of $5.00 from Iden Bonds, Sr., which is also included in today's list.

Lord Mayor Makes Plea

At the end of July, the secretary of the fund wrote to the Lord Mayor of London, requesting information as to the continuance of the fund and its objectives, together with what might be intended or planned for the Christmas season. The following quotations are taken verbatum from a reply which has just come to hand.

"I wish your people could see for themselves the way in which prompt and generous help has been given to thousands of men, women and children, who have suffered so severely, yet so bravely, as a result of the heavy air attacks by the enemy. They would know how much their gifts have meant to these people and what new hope and inspiration they have brought to those who have suffered the loss of their loved ones and the destruction of their homes.

It is true that there have not been many raids on London in recent times, but round the North-East coast and over the Southern and South-Eastern counties, many raids take place causing considerable loss of life and extensive destruction of property. These towns and villages require funds for relief; only this morning I have a letter from the Mayor of Bournemouth speaking of many and heavy claims on our fund as a result of recent raids.

With regard to Christmas cheer, it is certain there will be requests from bombed areas and from districts to which large numbers of children have been evacuated, for help to provide Christmas parties and it is hoped our friends overseas will come again to our help. I hope therefore, to continue to receive your sympathy and support."

The secretary of the fund feels that all interested can hardly fail to continue to give their support to this humanitarian work in the face of this earnest plea from the Lord Mayor, and will heartily endorse the sending of further help, and do their best to duplicate the gifts that were sent over last year at Christmastide.

Judge Sentences Young Man To Two Years

Pleading guilty to four charges of indecently assaulting young boys, Earl Barrie, 42, Rubidge street, was sentenced by His Honor Judge S. L. Smoke in the county judge's criminal court Thursday afternoon to two years in the Kingston Penitentiary on each count, the sentences to run concurrently.

In imposing sentence Judge Smoke said that he hoped that the sentence he was about to pronounce, while he considered it light under the circumstances, might be a lesson to others.

"This is a very serious offence," he told Barrie. "The maximum penalty is ten years imprisonment plus whipping. It is not a case for suspended sentence. I had intended to sentence you to a fairly long term but I am taking into consideration the plea of your counsel and that you are suffering from a physical defect that may have had something to do with your actions."

Ready For Operation

John A. Bradshaw who appeared for the accused called Dr. D. W. Clark and Fred Stanworth of Toronto, an uncle by marriage of Barrie's to give character evidence.

Defence counsel suggested suspended sentence, stating that he had been assured by a Toronto psychiatrist, Dr. McLarty, who had examined the accused a week ago that he was sufering from a severe rupture that should be operated on and in addition there was a treatment for the accused's weakness that had given good results. Barrie, he said, was prepared to undergo treatment immediately if he were given suspended sentence. Defence counsel suggested that Judge Smoke might wish to ask some questions of Dr. McLarty who was present in the court.

"The only question I would be interested in asking him is whether or not this treatment could be given while the accused was in an institution," replied Judge Smoke.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C. said that he could not consent to suspended sentence. When that had first been discussed, he said, only one charge had been laid against the accused.

Police Warn Riders To Park Along Curb

Chief Constable Sam. Newhall has sounded a note of warning to bicyclists that they must stop riding their wheels on the sidewalks and parking them against plate-glass windows and in doorways in the business section.

"I had to caution a number of riders," he said. "They would come along the street, wheel in on to the sidewalk, without any regard to the discomfort they caused pedestrians and then stand their machines up against store fronts. They will have to understand that bicycles must be kept off the sidewalks and parked alongside the curbs. If they persist in putting them elsewhere I will have all the bicycles found against store fronts brought into the station and the owners will have to do some explaining."

Objective Set For Peterboro In Victory Loan

The objective of the Fifth Victory Loan in Peterborough, will be $4,600,000 it was announced to-day by Gordon Matthews, chairman of the National War Finance Committee. While the objective of this new loan, which opens on October 18, is about $80,000 less than the total of the subscriptions of the Fourth Victory loan held last spring, it is $250,000 higher than the objective set for that loan.

The chairman in announcing the objective said that in the last loan the General Canvass and Employees' Section subscribed $3,015,000; this time the two divisions are being asked for $3,100,000 while the Special Names Section is being asked for $1,500,000 the same as in the Fourth Loan.

Organization for the loan is rapidly nearing completion, Mr. Matthews sad, and it is hoped to be able to announce the committees within a day or two. The organizers have been at work for a couple of weeks and their personnel remains the same with A. G. Walwyn, general organizer; E. W. Simpson, public relations; W. A. Reid and A. L. Stedham, payroll savings.

The actual objectives for the townships and villages in the county have not as yet approved, but the total will in all probability be around $650,000 or about $50,000 more than the Fourth Victory Loan subscription. The Payroll Savings section has not approved of its objective or what the various companies will be assigned but this is expected early in the week, Mr. Matthews intimated.

October 15 Set For Dogs To Run

Purchase of overcoats for six additional recruits of the A.R.P. auxiliary police was authorized by the finance committee of the council last night with the stipulation that this must be the limit of winter apparel for that volunteer unit.

Mayor Hamilton told the committee he was reporting the request from Constable Archie Menzies, head of the A.R.P. auxiliary for whom 40 overcoats were bought last winter. The men, including the six newcomers, buy their own uniforms.

"Forty ought to be enough for a city this size," said Alderman Gordon.

"They have done some work when necessary, and have kept up their drilling," Mayor Hamilton explained.

"They have done so well that I don't think they should increase their number," Alderman Gordon commented.

"I am just telling their story. It is up to the committee to decide what you wish to do," Mayor Hamilton added.

The purchasing motion was proposed by Alderman Dutton and seconded by Alderman Swanston.

October 15 Deadline

Alderman Cotton, chairman, turned the discussion to requests from dog owners to suspend the activity of the official catcher. These citizens have been asking that the dogs be let run at large again until Spring.

"And others don't want them on the streets," said Alderman Gordon. "Half a dozen of them were around my lawn this evening. They come from all the way up to Elm street."

Two terminating dates were mentioned, October 1 and November 1. "We might compromise on October 15," Alderman Gordon suggested, and that arrangement was accepted.

7-Year-Old Boy Blamed For Drowning Shoves Chum Into Water, Impedes Rescue

TORONTO, Oct. 1.— (CP).— A seven-year-old boy is to appear in juvenile court to-day on a delinquency charge arising from the death by drowning of four-year-old Norman Ryan.

The child's body was recovered last night from 30 feet of water in a turning basin near his home. Police said they had been informed that seven-year-old boy picked Norman up and threw him into the water from a sea wall after he had been invited to the waterfront by three other boys.

According to stories told police, an eight-year-old and a six-year-old boy tried to rescue the Ryan child and succeeded in reaching his hands. But, police were informed, they were forced to relax the holds when the seven-year-old boy threw stones at them.

"Norman came home from school and was playing in the backyard, when other boys coaxed him away," said Mrs. Ryan, whose husband is serving overseas with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps.

Efforts at artificial respiration were unsuccessful.

MONCTON, N.B., Oct. 1 (CP).—A quota of 1,000,000,000 feet of lumber has been set as Canada's objective for exportation to Britain, A. H. Williamson, federal timber controller, told the Maritime Lumber Bureau yesterday.

It is hoped Maritime operators will be able to produce 200,000,000 feet, he said.

Cyril David, United Kingdom timber controller, declared Britain urgently needs lumber for essential war work. Ocean transportation will be provided if operators can produce the lumber, he said. Mrs. Williamson expressed opinion that the labor situation will be improved before long.

Jolliffe Claims Profits Increase

TECUMSEH, Ont., Oct. 1 (CP).—E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, said in an address here last night that only under social ownership and social control can employment be found for Canada's 2,500,000 workers when they return from the services and leave war plants after the war.

Mr. Jolliffe spoke at a dinner in honor of A. Nelson Alles, member of the Ontario Legislature for Essex North. He attacked Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Dominion government's wartime administration and criticized Premier George Drew of Ontario for delay in implementing campaign promises.

"Prime Minister King has told us there is no profiteering in this war, but taxes or no taxes, profits are being made and on a much bigger scale than before this war," he said.

"According to the Bank of Canada's statistical summary for October and November of last year, which includes all companies with assets of more than $500,000, the true picture is this: In 1938, the last full year of peace, these companies made net profits, before providing for taxes, of $320,000,000, and in 1941 they made $668,000,000. The war more than doubled their net profits."

Even after paying their taxes these companies made "far bigger profits" as a result of the war, Mr. Jolliffe said. In 1938 their profits, after taxes, were $264,000,000 and in 1941 they were $373,000,000.

"That increase did not come out of thin air," the Ontario Opposition Leader said. "It came out of the taxpayer's pockets.

"But the biggest and most outrageous profit is concealed. It does not appear as income at all. By the simple device of accelerated depreciation, great corporations are increasing their capital, their assets, by hundreds of millions, all at the expense of the public.

"They are profiteering on capital and what they are making on that makes the profiteers of the last war look like pikers."

Officer Foils Creamery Robbery

TORONTO, Oct. 1 — (CP). — A fusilade of shots fired by the town constable failed to halt thieves who early to-day were surprised while attempting to blow open a large safe in the Schomberg creamery. Schomberg is 15 miles north of Toronto.

Notified that the creamery had been entered Constable Gus Farquhar arrived in time to see three men getting into a car, the motor of which had been speeded by a fourth as a warning signal.

A panel truck, stolen at Cookstown, was found near the creamery this morning. Police believed the men used the two vehicles, the truck and the car in which they made their getaway.

Leaving behind several hundred dollars in the safe, the thieves escaped with only a quantity of butter ration coupons which they found in a desk drawer.

Davis. Coroner J. C. Henshaw reported the boy had removed one shoe and apparently had used it to rap on the door in hope of calling attention to his plight. He said he believed death was accidental.

Nazis Claim Britons Number 1 Enemy

By EDWIN SHANKE
Associated Press Staff Writer

STOCKHOLM—(AP).—The Nazis still look upon Britain as their No. 1 enemy. Their biggest nightmare is industrial production in the United States, and their attitude towards Russia is complicated; strong cross-currents are sweeping among top Nazis for and against a new pact with the Soviet.

These are the conclusions of Swedish Journalist Arvid Fredborg in his book, "Beind the Steel Wall." He has just spent two years in Germany as correspondent for the Conservative Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet.

Fredborg maintains that Germany hasn't a single friend among the nations of the world, that the Nazi is hated deeply even by his allies, and that the Third Reich is isolated politically because of its utter political unreliability and frequent lack of tact in dealing with smaller States.

Developing this line, Fredborg says, in general:

The question of the United States strikes a highly sensitive note among the Germans, most of whom sympathize with this democratic nation mainly because it has become the home of millions of German immigrants. They also remember the American share in the last war.

For several years the Nazi propaganda line has been to minimize the power of America, and Berlin is ironical about "the madness of the figures." They claim American industries are not even coming close to figures mentioned by President Roosevelt.

Plan Backfired

The campaign of Propaganda Minister Goebbels in this connection reached a peak in 1942, but, it seems, his frantic efforts failed to convince his people that the United States is weak and rotten morally. The foreign press, however, had to go on listening to interpretations of President Roosevelt by the Nazi press chief, Dr. Schmidt.

Schmidt, in the autumn of 1942, committed a blunder which for months was a live topic in international circles in Berlin. He invited to his press conference, Dr. Hans Thomsen, former German charge d'affaires at Washington and now minister to Stockholm. To the surprise of everyone present, Thomsen refuted the picture Schmidt had painted of America.

Other Nazi propaganda stunts backfired after the fall of Crete.

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had made a big impression on foreign correspondents when, in an interview in the presence of Goebbels, he said the British were cowards and fought in a mean way. Rommel said in plain words the British had been beaten and the Germans would conquer Egypt.

A week later the propaganda ministry was hit by a veritable thunderstroke. Capt. von der Heydte, who had been in on the Crete campaign, talked about the experiences of parachute troops. He had come directly to the ministry without stopping to receive instructions on what to say.

Tough Fighters

"The Tommies are the hardest and most courageous enemies we Germans have met," the captain said. "The British stormed forward against my battalion's positions 17 times. The 18th would have forced us to put down our weapons. Our ammunition was gone, but they didn't come an 18th time."

At the bottom of his heart, the average German feels Britain always will win the last battle. Also he instinctively admires Britons. The Nazis know this. They do their best to counteract it with propaganda. The campaign against Britain has outdone even that waged against the Jews.

The Germans know little of what is taking place in England. The British people seem to be far better informed on conditions in Germany. The British secret service has been known to spin the entire German nation in its web. After the war we may learn how high-ranking Nazis had worked for Britain for years.

As for Russia, by the end of the autumn of 1942 everyone was scared that the Nazis might capitulate to Stalin. This alternative it must be admitted, has not been entirely eliminated.

Some high officers, following the line of Gen. von Seeckt, want Germany to work for a coalition between the great continental powers. Within the German army though, the general conception is that Germany must defend herself to the utmost in the east and could think of capitulating only to the western powers.

Man's Toughest Flying Weather Is In Aleutians

By PILOT OFFICER DAVID GRIFFIN
R.C.A.F. Public Relations Officer

AN ADVANCE R.C.A.F. BASE IN THE ALEUTIANS — This is the world's strangest war zone and Canadians serving here, are further from their home than if they were in Africa. Nothing has a familiar look.

You start with terrain and the weather. The Aleutian islands were formed, countless ages ago, by volcanic upheavals. Some tremendous convulsion of nature created this string of dots in the North West Pacific. There was fire and fury from away down deep in the earth as new mountains exploded above the surface of the bitter Bering Sea. The land that was tossed up above the surface of the waters was covered with volcanic ash. Dig as deep as you can here and you are still digging in volcanic ash. It's dark grey in colour, feels sandy and nothing grows in it. Over this volcanic ash is a thin layer of humus — maybe six inches in depth. It is made up of rooted vegetation. How the vegetation gained a foothold in the first place is a miracle. Each new growing season means more humus, for the new growth will die and rot. Maybe in a thousand years these islands will be worth something if the process continues. Just now they are important only because they are strategic.

There will be a great stretch of flat land that looks like a meadow. For no reason at all, it will be cut suddenly by a deep gulley. The gulley started out as a great yawning crack in the ground, maybe a few thousand years ago. Erosion has rounded off the jags, and the grass on this is green, but you can see the pattern.

Three or four miles away a snow capped peak rises abruptly out of the flatland. Long ago it spat fire and lava and ash. Now it smokes occasionally, and the R.C.A.F. boys may take a day off to look into its crater. A corporal from the pleasant rolling farm land of Southern Ontario stands on the rim of the crater, and shakes his head. He's a long way from Southern Ontario, this corporal. He joined up to go and serve somewhere in Europe, perhaps. He had visions of grim, war time London, and the English countryside. So here he is, 6,000 miles from home, serving in a land that might be the other side of the moon.

It's silent, except when the wind howls and the planes come over. You notice the silence at first, but after a week or so, it becomes so normal that your ears begin to pick up sounds that you didn't hear at first. You can hear things a long way off.

Now for the biggest feature of the Aleutian scene. That's the fog. It isn't fog such as any one in any other part of the world can conceive. It's actually cloud.

The clouds just come down and touch the earth. They are there nearly all the time, in the most unreasonable quantities. And they do some of the queerest tricks. Then miles away there may be clear weather, while where you are stationed, the clouds may be so low that you can reach up and touch them. There they are, trailing long skirts to within six feet of the ground.

The ceiling may vary anything from one foot to 4,000 feet, but usually it's not 4,000 feet.

They have a way of describing the average weather up here. "So low the gulls are walking," they'll tell you.

Here's an example of what it can be like: Couple of days before this writing, the flying control officer a few miles from here, 'phoned the commanding officer here and wanted to know if any patrols were being flown.

"Can't" said the R.C.A.F. man. "We're socked in."

"It's clear as a bell," said the control officer.

"O.K." said the R.C.A.F. man, "You come on up and fly them—if you can get a jeep through the fog."

His challenge was not accepted. That makes it just about the toughest kind of flying country known to man. You could crash into one of those sudden peaks, if you were a little bit off your course. You might not see the field below you when you tried to come down. It takes a lot of care just to stay alive.

There was the Canadian who flew a straffing mission over Kiska. He happily plastered the Japs with the bombs he carried, and gave them a rousing overture on his heavy machine guns. They replied by filling the sky with flak in the immediate vicinity of his plane. The Japs on Kiska have plenty of ack-ack. It isn't the healthiest place in the world to be.

When he got back to his base there was a newspaperman waiting—one of the very few civilians who ever got in here. The newspaperman was looking for a thrilling story, so he asked this pilot, "What were you thinking about when you were over Kiska, hammering the Japs?" Replied the pilot: "I was thinking, 'When I get back, will I be able to land?' "

Films Helping Free Oppressed

TORONTO, Oct. 1 —The motion picture industry will play an important part in the mental rehabilitation of Nazi-conquered countries, as well as Germany and Italy, it was stated yesterday by Charles Francis Coe, vice-president, Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America Inc.

This work is already under way in Italy, he said. When the Anglo-American fighting troops first landed on the Continent, divisional groups of motion picture technicians also jumped from the landing barges with tins of film tucked under their arms; as the European invasion progresses, oppressed peoples will be delivered messages via the screen, and the enemy countries will be shown that law and order is the will of the democracies.

Mr. Coe spoke to nearly 600 people, some 300 of these representing the Canadian film industry, at a luncheon in the Royal York Hotel sponsored by the Advertising and Sales Club.

In outlining the contributions made by the industry to the war effort, the speaker stated that every available travelogue film had been turned over to the military authorities of the United Nations and had proved invaluable in planning landing operations and other forms of strategy. When millions of youngsters had to be trained for new types of fighting or industry, Governments in the United States and Canada had called upon the film makers and not a dollar of profit for these instruction pictures had been taken by the film producers, said Mr. Coe.

He also pointed out that the industry in both countries had contributed immeasurably to the success of bond campaigns and salvage drives; that the screen stars had given much of their time to the creating of morale at army centres and that many of them were coming from Hollywood to devote their efforts to the success of the forthcoming fifth Canadian war loan.

Farmer Wants 20 Cts. Pound For His Hogs

TORONTO, Oct. 1 — (CP) — Agreements between Canada and Great Britain on bacon price now being renewed must give the farmer 20 cents a pound, Harry Wilson, of Charing Cross, told the Ontario Agricultural Commission probing farmers' problems at the Provincial Parliament Buildings to-day.

The farmer must also have subsidies by both the Ontario and the Federal Governments on feed grain from the West continued until the close of navigation, Mr. Wilson said, or he will not go ahead with hog breeding.

Present price of 16¾ cents for bacon is not sufficient, he said, adding that while the feed grain subsidies on Western grains are "nice gestures, we must have some advance in price or we can't do the job."

A committee composed of M. C. Allen, Hyslop, and W. C. Brechin, Freeman, was appointed to petition both Governments to continue these subsidies until navigation closes, the Federal subsidy of $1.80 a ton ending to-day.

R. J. Scott, Belgrave, representing the grain growers, criticized the Federal Government's $1.12 ceiling on Ontario wheat compared with the Western ceiling of $1.25.

Harold Huffman, Blenheim, declared breakfast food manufacturers are willing to pay above the ceiling price, providing the retail price is not affected, but are prevented giving the farmer the better price because of the ceiling.

"The farmer is entitled to a rise in price right now," Mr. Wilson said.

Minister of Agriculture T. L. Kennedy told the commission they have complete control of their inquiries and the Government would do all possible to implement their recommendations.

9 Polio Cases Found Victims All Children

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 1 — (CP). — R. F. McInnes, president of the Victorian Order of Nurses, today reported there now are nine positive cases of infantile paralysis in Trenton and several other patients under survey.

It is understood all cases are children and several have been sent to Toronto for treatment or observation.

McInnes said nurses sent to Belleville and Trenton districts from the Ontario Department of Health are working in conjunction with the V.O.N. and public school nurses.

Ontario Government sanitary engineers have been asked to make a survey of the area.

About 100 guests were present at the Y.W.C.A. on Thursday evening to attend the first night of "Open House" which is being held Thursday and Friday of this week to mark the opening of the season. "Y" members showed new-comers to the city over the building, and introduced them to members, and various demonstrations and entertainments were given.

In the big gymnasium, Miss Caroline Littlefield, physical director, directed members of the gym classes in a demonstration of gym activities, which included Danish fundamental exercises and relaxation exercises by members of the senior gym, displays of acrobatics by Ruth Choate and Lois McBride and Marilyn and Rosalyn McInroy; a demonstration on the flying rings by Mabel Brown, Ethel Hopkins, Phyllis Perdue and Ruth Choate; and archery display by Hilda De Wolfe, Betty White and Kay Hales; and basketball by Helen Miller, Jean Castle, Beryl Dobbin, and Janet Collins. Mrs. F. McBride was at the piano. Ethel Hopkins gave a display of fancy swimming and diving in the pool.

Later in the evening, the guests took part in games and a sing-song, under the able direction of Miss Roberta Keefer, new girls' work secretary. A skit was presented by members of the Thursday Supper Club, the '38 and '41 Clubs and members of the Girls' Council, showing the aim and purpose of the Mrs. Winston Churchill Fund for British servicewomen.

Refreshments were served in the green room, where Mrs. T. Barrie and Mrs. H. Foote presided over a beautifully laid table, and coffee and sandwiches, in generous abundance, were served by members of the board and "Y" members.

Mrs. Addyman Addresses W.C.T.U. Meeting

Mrs. H. L Roberts was hostess to the members of the W.C.T.U. Thursday afternoon at the George Street parsonage when thirty-five ladies rallied for the first fall meeting.

Miss E. Might presided over the meeting where the theme "Peace and International Relations" was discussed.

The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Fanning and Mrs. H. Alton led in prayer. Hymns in keeping with the topic were sung with Mrs. Routley as pianist.

Also in keeping with the theme were the two readings "The Fool," and "England 1941," contributed by Mrs. W. McLaren.

The report of the Provincial W.C.T.U. convention now in session at Kitchener will be given at the next meeting by Mrs. W. W. Yale of Lakefield. The violin solo by Mrs. Percy Hooper accompanied at the piano by Mrs. C. Renaud was a delightful variation.

In her splendid talk on Peace and International Relations, Mrs. W. Addyman stressed the thought that before peace can become a fact, it must find a place in our own hearts and homes, our church and our government.

Lin Yutang, the eminent Chinese author in his farewell address to his American friends said: "Friendship cannot be forced by high pressure propaganda but by simple and human understanding among common people." This philosophy has been taught through the ages since Socrates. The speaker said that unless we educate and train ourselves to understand other peoples, and religions, we shall find that humanity will go into reverse, for all racial wars are the product of misunderstanding and intolerance.

She declared that the First World War was not in vain for out of it arose a League of Nations and a real desire for peace. League of Nations work is not confined to rulers but rather to the will of all people who hope to live at peace with all mankind.

She traced the aftermath of the First Great War with its years of unemployment and depression and urged the women to begin now to plan and study against a repetition of such errors, saying that if billions can be spent in destruction, then the people can surely spend as much in construction. The speaker gave a brief resume of the advance of Social Security both in England and in Canada. In conclusion she challenged the women to function in behalf of peace by definite action rather than by lip service.

Thanks to their hostess the speaker, and to all who assisted in making the meeting a success, were expressed by Mrs. H. T. Rehill.

The benediction pronounced by Rev. H. L. Roberts concluded the program.

Havelock Man Married In B.C.

HAVELOCK, Oct. 1—(ENS)—A wedding of local interest took place at 826 Fourth street, New Westminster, B.C., when Evelyn Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Miller became the bride of Rifleman Charles Daniel Menzies, Havelock. Rev. P. C. McCrae performed the ceremony, beneath an arch of cosmos and larkspur.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of pink sheer and lace, with a shoulder length veil hanging from a Mary Queen of Scots headdress and a corsage of yellow rosebuds and fern. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Beverley King, wearing a dress of pale blue sheer, with matching headdress and a corsage of pink carnations. Mr. Allan Miller acted as best man.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. D. Sayce, sister of the bride, and during the signing of the register, Miss Jean Knudsen sang "Because".

Choir Entertained

The session of St. Andrew's Church entertained the choir on Thursday evening. Mr. F. Dearborn and Rev. E. W. and Mrs. Young welcomed the members of both organization. Dr. A. Moir spoke in appreciation of the fine work done by the choir during war years in which it is so difficult for church organizations to carry on. Mr. Ed Humphage replied and said that there was a fine spirit in the choir under the capable direction of Mr R. B. Harle, organist of the church. Mrs. F. W. K. Harris led in a program of games which was greatly enjoyed and supper was served in the church parlours. Mrs. F. W. K. Harris and Mrs. E. W. Young poured tea. Mr. George Gillespie thanked the ladies who prepared the supper, Mrs E. R. Shirley, Mrs. M. T. Breckenbridge, and Mrs. Gordon Ham.

Trinity Y.P.U.

The first fall meeting of Trinity Young People's Union was held at the home of Mrs. M. McWilliams. Miss Elva Elliott led the devotional period, assisted by Miss Leona Edwards and Mr. Richard Clayton. Mrs. R. S. Kearns spoke briefly of some of the ways in which the Y.P.U. could help the Services, and mentioned especially the need for old kid gloves and fine leather, which could be made over into leather jackets by the Navy League. Dr. G. E. Easton then spoke on the importance of young people in carrying on the work of the church, and on their interest in the missionary work of the church. At the close of the meeting the members of the knitting club served delicious refreshments, which included a birthday cake with candles, in honor of LAW. Janet Kearns, R.C.A.F. (W.D.) who was home on furlough, and who received many congratulations from her friends.

Bride-Elect Honored

Miss Jean Sarginson, whose wedding takes place Saturday was guest of honor at a shower held by Mrs. Stanley McBride, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Eva Breckenridge, at the latter's home. Pink and white streamers led from a large white bell in the archway to the chandeliers in dining room and living room and the bride was seated under the bell to receive her many beautiful gifts. The gifts were presentd in a novel manner, for each girl was given a slip of paper with a number and a sentence telling where her gift was hidden. The guest of honor called the numbers and the girl holding the number called went with her to find the gift. When she had opened her gifts, the bride made a charming speech of thanks, and expressed her gratitude to each girl individually. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Charles Renaud.

The Experts Say . . . .

By The Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Oct. 1 — (CP). — Useful wrinkles from the experts for housewives and business girls:

BOARDING HOUSE BETTER— The Consumer Branch of the Prices Board suggests that single girls who take apartments are thereby helping to complicate an already difficult situation caused by the shortage of housing units. Boarding, for single girls, is the simplest way of living.

When those without families take over apartments, flats or duplexes it means someone with children, who cannot possibly be accommodated in a single room, will be "out in the cold," the branch says.

STORING VEGETABLES—Gardening activities are pretty well over for this year, and victory gardeners are turning to the problem of storing their surplus vegetables for winter use.

Vegetables should be examined carefully before storing, and any showing signs of injury or decay should be used immediately. Ventilation, low temperature and high humidity are the requirements of good storage space.

A bulletin entitled "Household Storage of Fruits and Vegetables" may be had free of charge from the Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. It gives detailed directions for the storing of different varieties of vegetables.

BOX LUNCHES — Every lunch which workers take to their jobs should contain three types of food, says Nutrition Services. A lunch box always should contain milk in some form, a fruit or vegetable, and some kind of protein food such as meat.

If in addition a box lunch contains sandwiches made of whole wheat or Canada-approved bread, then it is considered "extra good" from the nutritional viewpoint.

REMOVING SPOTS — Here are some rules on removing spots from clothes so as to lengthen their life:

Spots caused by chemicals should be treated before the garment is submerged in soap and water. When using a solvent, it is advisable to work from the outer edge toward the centre. Hems make good "guinea pigs" — try solvent on their undersides before applying it to the soiled surfaces.

Renew your sponge pads frequently, and be sure to work in a strong, clear light. To simplify the refoval of spots, it is suggested that a cupboard be equipped with a small glass rod, one or two clean crochet hooks or knitting needles; a small glas rod, one or to clean pads of material, a fountain pen filler, blotting paper, and some of the simpler agent for removing spots.

WEAR WOOLLENS LONGER — If they are to last long and look well, woollens require special attention. Fasteners should be sewed on as soon as they come off. Dress shields should be worn and safety pins avoided. Damp woollens should be hung where there is plenty of air circulating — and on hangers, not hooks and they should be dried normally, not on a radiator. These pointers, the experts say, will keep woollens out of the rag bag and on active service.

League Members Raise $300 During Summer

MARMORA, Oct. 1—(ENS)—The monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in the School on Wednesday evening with a good attendance.

The President Mrs. James Black, occupied the chair. The meeting opened with the League prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. H. J. Farrell followed by the presentation of $5.00 was made to Leo Forestell the pupil in the parish who obtained the highest marks in the Entrance examinations.

Letters of appreciation and thanks were read from members who had been ill and had received baskets of fruit and other gifts from the League. A letter of thanks was also read from the Vicar Capitular thanking the League for a Mass offering for his Excellency the late Archbishop O'Brien of Kingston.

Mrs. Black described a remodelled child's dress which had been sent to an exhibition of this work in Toronto and the dress had received special mention in a radio broadcast. Mrs. Black also thanked the members who had attended the sewing bees in the school during summer months and discussed the continuance of the same.

Fine Results

She further thanked the conveners and groups who had worked during the summer to raise money for the League and advised them that over $300.00 had been realized. The largest amount had been made by the convenership of Mrs. John Doyle who had handed in $85.00. Prizes will be awarded this group.

The President then gave a report of the Diocesan Convention held in Kingston last week which she attended as delegate from Marmora sub-division. Rev. Father Farrell addressed the meeting, congratulating the members on their good attendance and urging them to keep up the good work.

Mrs. Joseph Freeman followed with a report on the Lay Retreat held in Kingston which she and Mrs. James McAvoy attended. Mrs. John Doyle was appointed Social Welfare convener for Deloro district to replace Mrs. Alphonse Clemens who is absent.

'Thanksgiving' Theme Of Talk At Meeting

The September meeting of the Church Women's Year of All Saints' Anglican Church was held on Thursday afternoon, with a splendid attendance for the first fall meeting. Mrs. J. Adams, president, opened the meeting with prayer, and welcomed the ladies. The Bible lesson was read by Mrs. F. J. Long.

Mrs. R. N. Jones reported for the Navy League. Twenty-five articles were knit for the month. Mrs. Jones also read two letters from Peterborough boys who had received knitted garments made by All Saints' ladies.

The offering was then presented and amounted to $190.48. In place of the usual solo the ladies joined in a sing-song of favorite hymns which everyone enjoyed. Mrs. W. H. Logan was the accompanist.

The rector was the speaker. He pointed out how much we had to be thankful for in the short time the "Church Year" had been organized. In just 20 months the offering had amounted to $3,629.00. He divided the Thanksgiving theme into three groups, telling us we should show our appreciation to God for His many blessings by our lips, our money and our lives.

Tea was served at the close of the meeting by Mrs. J. Johnson and her group.

For Saturday, October 2

A SUDDEN and quite unforeseen circumstance or event may prove to be thrilling or breathtaking, coming with swift and incisive force of probably a radical nature or causing some hurried or drastic action. Properly handled and met with equanimity and good judgment, rather than impulsive and emotional disturbance, exceptional benefits or sensational publicity might result. Public issues seem involved and of prime importance. There is danger from over acting or indulging in unwise expenditures of funds or other extravagances.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for the sudden advent or a rather devastating or whirlwind visitation, not disastrous or unwelcome if it be met with poise, calm and sound judgment. While an uprooting and surprising circumstance it should be duly considered from its gainful aspects or possibilities for progress or public recognition. Group matters seem of more significance than private, but these should be managed with conservatism and restraint rather than impetuously or extravagantly. Keep all reactions within proper bounds, considering seriously future issues and stability.

A child born on this day should have unusual abilities and ambitions, with dramatic or sensational urges, leading to public success or progress, if erratic impulses or emotionalism be kept in leash. It may be difficult to understand.

Price Control, Rationing

The Women's Regional Advisory Committee, Consumer Branch, Central Ontario, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, answers questions put to this paper regarding price control and ration regulations.

Q.—Last week I had to give a "D" coupon for baby fruit. Why is baby fruit rationed in one store and not in another?

A.—All canned fruit is rationed including baby fruit. The grocer was quite right in requiring a "D" coupon with your purchase. Thank you for giving us the name of the store in your city which you say is selling baby fruit without accepting "D" coupons. The board's investigation department will check.

Q.—I will have 15 men for threshing for three meals which is 45 meals altogether. I find all the extra sugar and meat I can get is one pound of sugar and four pounds of meat. Shouldn't it be more?

A.—No that amount is all the ration administration would allow in your case. You see, extra rations for temporary farm help are based on the same quantity consumers receive generally. For example: One person is allowed a maximum of ½ lb of sugar each week which presumably covers three meals a day or 21 meals a week. You will be serving 45 meals which is slightly over twice that number, which would entitle you to one pound. Each person is allowed a maximum of from one to 2½ lbs. of rationed meat a week (there are several varieties of meat not rationed). At three meals a day, this would cover 21 meals a week. As you are serving twice this number of meals, you would be entitled to extra coupons for about four pounds.

Q.—Is there a ceiling price set for all cuts of lamb? I paid 13c lb. for riblets in one store, yet I was asked 20c for the same cuts in another. Why should there be 7c difference in the price of the cheapest cut in the carcass?

A.—No, there are no set ceiling prices for the various cuts of lamb as there are for beef indicated by the board's bef price charts in every meat shop. But there is a ceiling price on the amount of money a butcher may receive for each whole carcass of lamb which accounts for the variation of lamb cuts from store to store. However, 7c looks like quite a variation for the price of lamb riblets. We are checking the prices in the two stores you mention. Thank you for giving us the particulars.

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—(CP).—Manager Burleigh Grimes of Toronto Maple Leafs, left last night for his home in Wisconsin to "relax"—but he promised that he'll be back with the International League entry here next season unless he gets a big league offer.

DeMille Likes His Movie Stars With Natural Ungreased Glamour

HOLLYWOOD.—Cecil B. DeMille has denounced the use of "canned sex" on movie beauties and forbidden Whitey Schaffer, the eminent portrait photographer, from applying it to his new star, Carol Thurston.

Schaffer, who has kept a jar of canned sex in his studio these many years and ascribes to it at least part of the popularity of Rita Hayworth, Dorothy Lamour and many another, said the mighty DeMille had better stick to his octopi. He said he'd take care of the glamor department.

"The question," said DeMille, "is whether you like your women wet, or dry. I prefer them dry."

"Canned sex makes a woman live," retorted Schaffer. "It gives her depth, vibrancy. She looks dead without it."

And before we continue with a further report of this controversy, we'd better explain Schaffer's canned sex, his own invention, designed to make beautiful women look more beautiful. It consists of petroleum jelly, which Schaffer mixes with whatever oil he can steal from the tops of the jars in the makeup department. He stirs the mixture until it is the consistency of heavy engine oil. Then, before photographing a movie lovely, he smears her cheeks, her shoulders, and the insides of her arms with his grease, which he keeps in a white jar, labelled "canned sex."

Glistening Highlights

This results in glistening highlights upon the lady's skin and a fantastic salary and a reputation to uphold for the inventor. So well did Schaffer do with his canned sex upon the beauties at Columbia studios that Paramount hired him away a few weeks ago to glorify its stars. Schaffer mixed up a new batch of canned sex and took over his new duties enthusiastically. Then he received the following note from Sidney Biddell, executive assistant to DeMille:

"This is to advise you that Mr. DeMille has forbidden the use of so-called 'canned sex' or 'sex cream' in all portraits of Miss Carol Thurston, including those showing her in a sarong in 'The Story of Dr. Wassel.' This is no way intended as a criticism of your fine artistry as a portrait photographer. It is just that Mr. DeMille prefers to keep Miss Thurston entirely natural, feeling that any embellishment of her beauty would be superfluous."

As noted above, we interviewed Schaffer at length about this insult to his contribution to the art of the cinema (he says it's worse than an insult) and then we walked over to stage seven, where DeMille was on top of a scaffolding four stories tall, supervising the bombing by Japs of the refugee ship, Janssens, off the coast of Java.

It was a swell set, full of smoke, screams, and fire hoses.

DeMille climbed down the ladder, finally, for a discussion of beautiful women and canned sex.

Prefers Natural Beauty.

"A woman is a pretty thing to begin with," said he, gallantly. "She should not be gilded. Neither should she be reddened up too much. But when you begin to grease her, you ruin her.

"I have seen pictures of these greased beauties. They always make me wish for a bath towel to dry 'em off."

He said he liked women as originally designed. He said any effort to improve them, as to looks, always backfired. He said he'd been arguing these many years with his own daughter about her red fingernails and added that he had every hope, eventually, of convincing her she was wrong.

As for Miss Thurston, she said she'd gladly be photographed, greased, or ungreased. We noticed that her fingernails were unpainted. She said, yes, she'd been given to understand before ever facing the cameras that DeMille frowned on red ones.

Lone American Kills 20 Japs

By WILLIAM HIPPLE

UNITED STATES ARMY HEADQUARTERS, South Pacific, Oct. 1.—(AP).—Sgt. James Burgess of Lakewood, O., is the newest one-man army of the South Pacific.

Burgess single-handedly attacked a Japanese force of about 100 men, killed an estimated 20 and broke up an attack on a beachhead during the New Georgia campaign.

Cpl. Andrew Genzilo of Ferndale, Calif., an Army Public Relations man who reported the exploit, said Burgess volunteered to man a machine-gun outpost protecting a beachhead supply dump.

It was not uncommon for a large enemy force to penetrate the front lines and filter to the rear to disturb any installations they might find.

One night, an estimated force of 100 Japanese approached the beachhead. Burgess was forced to take cover in his foxhole shortly before an enemy scout approached. The Japanese probed Burgess' hole with a bayonet, almost touching him.

As soon as the Japanese soldier went far enough away, Burgess put his machine-gun into action. He cut into the main body dispersing the greater portion of them, killing an estimated 20, and putting an end to the attack on the beachhead.

The retreating Japanese, however, had cut off Burgess' position. His machine-gun now was out of order and he was forced to leave the foxhole and circle around the Japanese.

Because of the route the fleeing Japanese had taken, Burgess had to circle wide on a solitary jungle trip of four days. Given up for missing in action, he returned to his base on the fourth day. There times he had to swim to near-by islands to keep from being discovered.

OLD FOLK LIVING WITH THEIR CHILDREN MUST ALTER HABITS

Troubles Start When Mother, Dad Realize Younger Generation Does Things Differently

ONE of the greatest and most insoluable problems in the world is what to do with old parents. It potentially affects every home, rich and poor alike, for it is just as often a question of providing spiritual sustenance to an old man and woman as it is of giving them food and shelter.

And experience shows that, except in rare instances, when Father or Mother go to live with their children trouble begins, and what has once been a happy home becomes a place of turmoil and squabbles. This is not because the children do not love their parents and are not anxious to do their duty towards them. Nor is it because the in-laws do not recognize their responsibility and are not willing to provide for their wives' or husbands' fathers and mothers. Nor is it because the old people are knowingly home-wreckers.

Mental Joints Stiffen in Old Folks

It is because with age most men and women let their mental joints stiffen up, as they do their physical ones, and they can no more adapt themselves to new customs and ideas than they can do a jive dance. They have done things one way so long that they cannot change their methods of action or thought, and it seems to them actually sacrilegious for anyone to do them differently.

And, having been the heads of their own houses so long, they cannot sink gracefully into second place in their children's. And, anyway, their sons and daughters always seem mere infants to them, even if they are middle-aged men and women, and they feel they have a perfect right to boss them as they did when they were three-year-olds in rompers.

So we have the mothers-in-law who are always sticking their fingers in their daughters-in-law's pies and telling their daughters how the put goose grease on a red flannel rag around their children's throats when they had a cold instead of sending for a throat specialist. And the old men who dribble cigar ashes all over the place and who are allergic to clean shirts and having their hair cut. And, worst of all, we have the grandparents who spend their time prophesying that their grandsons and daughters will come to no good end because they won't dress and act the way they did when they were young.

Both Parents, Children Create Discord

The inevitable result is a headache and a heartache for all concerned. For the children resent their parents bringing discord into their homes, and the parents are bitterly hurt by their children not wanting them to live with them, and no one knows what to do about it.

Of course, in the cases where there is money the only sane thing is for the parents to keep their own homes or go to live in hotels or boarding houses, where they can have their own personal liberty and do as they please, instead of having to accommodate themselves to the regime of their sons' and daughters' houses and put up with the peculiarities and opinions of John's wife and Mary's husband.

The old proverb of what we don't see not worrying us is never so true as when dealing with our in-laws and the younger generation. And nothing makes so much for affection and good will in a family as not seeing too much of each other. Between Grandma and Grandpa in the house and always under foot and Grandma and Grandpa coming to dinner once a week is all the difference between a cherished guest and a pest.

In the cases, however, when the lack of money makes it inevitable that parents must eventually live with their children, it has always seemed to me that they might prepare themselves for it by cultivating the amenities of life and making themselves easier to get along with. Mother might remember, for instance, that when she was young how jealous she was of her authority in her own house, and how she resented advice and criticism about the way she ran it. And so she might bite her tongue off rather than proffer a word of suggestion to her daughter or her daughter-in-law, no matter what blunders she saw them making.

Parents Could Easily Rectify Situation

And Mother might remember that every wife and husband who love each other like to be alone together and able to discuss freely their intimate personal affairs without any third party listening in. So she would stay much in her own room and not always camp on the back seat in the automobile whenever they took a ride.

And Father might check up on himself and recall that nobody could pine to hear him tell over the same old stories more than a thousand times, or that any harried young business man yearned to be told how to run his affairs by a man who had never made more than a bare living, and cultivate the habit of reading the evening paper instead of spending the interval between dinner and bedtime in arguing about politics or religion.

In a word, if old people have to live with their children, they should try to adapt themselves to their children. It would save a lot of trouble if they did.

Abbott, Payne All Square

The club championship of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club still stands all square after 36 holes of championship play between the defending champion, Stan Payne and the many times ex-champion Bob Abbott. Last week-end these two masters of the links played the first 18 holes only to be rained out before they could start the second 18 holes. Mr. Payne carried a lead of three up at that time and although neither player was at his best, splashes of brilliant golf would occasionally break through the gloom. Mr. Abbott experienced some trouble on a couple of holes on the back nine after a whirlwind start which had left Mr. Payne three down in the first three holes on the first nine.

The second 18, played on Wednesday afternoon under ideal conditions, brought out much better golf all round. Mr. Abbott went out in 36, returning in 40 for a brisk 76, while Mr. Payne toured the first half in 38 and the last in 40 for a 79, keeping his three-hole lead until the 7th, 8th and 9th holes which he dropped like hot coals. From that point on, the match moved back and forth until it was all square on the 35th hole with Stan Payne on the edge of the 18th in two, while Bob Abbott sat firmly on in three. Mr. Abbott took the recognized two putts, but Stan, who had an excellent chance to catch a par four, took three from the edge and the hole was halved.

Thirty-six additional holes will be played on Sunday, commencing about 10 a.m., weather permitting, the afternoon round about 2:30.

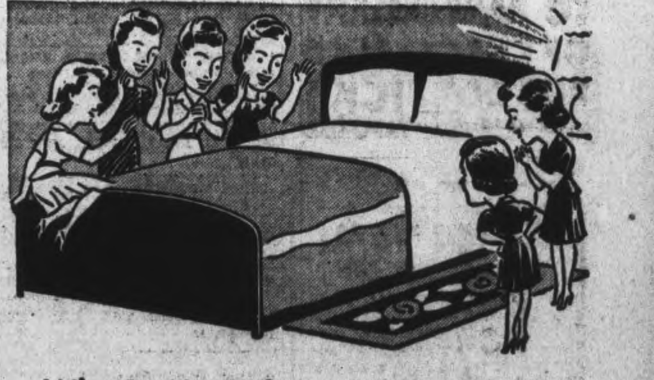
Increased Machinery

TORONTO, Oct. 1—(CP).—R. W. Gallup, of Toronto, deputy controller of farm machinery, told the Ontario Agricultural Inquiry Commission here last night that Federal authorities will permit increased production of farm machinery in 1944, although rationing of larger machines will continue due to scarcity of certain materials.

Painful, Chapped Lips Avoided
Soreness Instantly Relieved

Sore, chapped lips make life miserable in cold weather. Painful and unsightly, their cracked, rough surfaces are easily infected. Don't run this risk! Prevent chapping with Lypsyl. Its wonderful emollient action protects the delicate membranes, keeps the lip tissues from becoming dried out by cold, biting winds, so that lips stay smooth and soft in all weather. When lips are already chapped, Lypsyl gives quick relief, seals the wounded membranes against dangerous germs, hastens natural healing. Get Lypsyl at your store today and use it regularly. Sold everywhere in handy stick form.

LYPSYL Natural Red or Invisible White for Men and Women



What's nicer than a snowy bed
On which to rest your weary head
Sheets must be very white, 'tis true
So don't forget the rinse in BLUE

A swish of Blue in the last rinse water does the trick. Prevents yellow—and keeps your bed linen, towels and white clothes—a clean and sparkling white.

IN MEMORIAM

DOWNES — In loving memory of Dad, Edward Downes, who passed away October 1, 1938.

Many a day his name is spoken,
And many an hour he's in our thoughts,
A link in our family chain is broken,
He is gone from our home but not from our hearts.

— Fondly remembered by his Daughters, Gertie Smith and Connie Fleming, Pontiac, Michigan, U.S.A.

DOWNES — In fond memory of Edward Downes who departed this life five years ago to-day, October 1, 1938.

Not dead, but passed beyond
The mist that binds us here,
Into the newer, larger life
Of that unclouded sphere.

— Lovingly remembered by his Son Arthur, Dorothy and Eleanor.

DOWNES — In loving memory of Edward Downes who passed away five years ago to-day, October 1, 1938.

Those whom we love go out of sight,
But never out of mind;
They are cherished in the hearts
Of those they leave behind.

—Ever remembered by his Wife and Family.

If You Have Talents, Turn Them to Money

MAKE MONEY AT HOME

If you're an excellent seamstress there are many opportunities in which you can make money. If, in addition, you are a beautiful knitter, the opportunities are even greater. You should be able to find a market for a smart knitted dress or sweater.

There are many things you make with your needle—things you can sell—things that other people are willing to pay money for. Of course, you must be exceptionally good at your particular art—and if you have an original flair—so much the better.

Sewing isn't the only way to make money at home—there are various ways. For example, if you have a special sandwich, cookie or cake recipe you might be able to develop a minor catering business of your own.

Our 32-page booklet is full of suggestions for the home-maker to develop her talents along lines which end in money. There are also many helpful hints for those beginning. What fun your first dollar will be!

For your copy of 21 WAYS TO EARN MONEY AT HOME send 15 cents in coins or stamps to the Peterborough Examiner Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Nazis Turn Naples Into City Of Horrors

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (AP).—The German-controlled Italian radio, in a broadcast reported by the Office of War Information, declared today the Nazis would take "pitiless" reprisals against the people of Naples if they persisted "in getting in the way in the fight against the Anglo-Americans."

Declaring that the government of Premier Badoglio has "criminally encouraged some of you to rebel," the broadcast said that some Neapolitans "have forgotten that the enemy wishes to shed the blood of those who fought side by side in true comradeship with their sons and brothers on the battlefields of Africa, Sicily and Russia."

Reports from the Italian battlefront indicate the Germans have been putting their threat into practice. A dispatch received yesterday from Don Whitehead, Associated Press war correspondent in Italy, quoted refugees as saying the Germans had turned Naples into a city of horror, burning and looting and shooting civilians right and left.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

THREE GROUPS GRADED

Once in a while a hand comes along in a duplicate game which enables you to classify the players into three distinct groups. The first includes those who think mainly of ruffing out losers in a suit contract. The second consists of those who prefer to drop the trumps and then attempt to discard their losers on a side suit. The third figures out the timing of the hand and sees that the entry situation calls for the side suit to be set up before the final round of trumps is played.

North: ♠ K 7 4; ♥ A Q J 9 7; ♦ A 7; ♣ 8 5 3
West: ♠ Q 6 5; ♥ 10 5 4; ♦ Q J 10 8; ♣ K 10 7
East: ♠ 3 2; ♥ K 8 6; ♦ 9 6 4 2; ♣ Q J 6 2
South: ♠ A J 10 9 8; ♥ 3 2; ♦ K 5 3; ♣ A 9 4

(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

Three declarers who reached that contract played it three different ways, following the diamond Q lead. One took that with the A, led to the K, ruffed the 5, scored the spade K, lost the spade J finesse to the Q, took the club 7 return to the J with the A, lost the heart J finesse to the K, and then dropped two club tricks, being set one.

Another took the diamond Q lead with the K, took the spade K and lost the J finesse to the Q, won the diamond 8 with the A, scored the spade A, won the heart Q finesse when East held up the K, then scored the heart A and led the J, which East covered, South ruffing. The dummy lacking reentries now to use the heart remainders, two clubs had to be lost, so he was set.

Where a better player was at work, he won the diamond lead with the K, at once took the heart finesse, losing to the K, and had that suit established while the dummy still held two entries. Conserving these, after East returned a club, he took in the spade A and K, then led hearts. On the A he followed suit, on the next he discarded the club 4 and on the third he discarded the club 9. West ruffed that with the spade Q, but that was the last trick his side could get, as the diamond A remained in dummy as a re-entry for the hearts to furnish a diamond discard. That declarer made an extra trick, due to soundness.

An unbid small slam could have been made if South had finessed West for the spade Q, but nobody tried that as that grade of player was not in the game.

If West leads the club J against South's 4-Hearts, how should East figure out his correct line of defensive action?

Engineers Test Vehicles In Arctic Cold

OSHAWA, October 1 — In a 25-mile an hour gale at temperature far below zero, Canadian-built military vehicles are undergoing rigorous tests that will fit them for service anywhere short of the North Pole.

The tests aren't taking place in the Arctic, but in a "cold room" here in Oshawa....the only one of its kind in Canada, and, in many features, unique in United Nations' industries.

Conceived and designed by engineers of General Motors of Canada, the "cold room" provides technical experts with first hand observations on the functioning of army vehicles under the severest of winter weather. Every factor of temperature and torque (pulling power) can be studied when motor equipment is placed in the room. Engineers say that in many ways the severest of winter conditions can be simulated from the control board outside this super icebox.

Through readings on the intricate control board, the temperature of the cylinder block or any part of the vehicle being tested can be watched second by second. A window comprised of five separate sheets of plate glass allows observers in the control room to watch what is going on inside the cold room.

Engineers wearing the latest fleece-lined flying suits can spend relatively short periods in the paralyzing cold. Those working in the cold room must be under observation from the outside at all time and the doors ot the chamber are equipped with safety devices which prevent even a moment's delay in leaving. In addition, equipment for the detection of carbon monoxide fumes has been installed.

A special cooling machine with an estimated four miles of pipe regulates temperature in the room. Powerful ventilators change the air and regulate moisture. The room is surrounded by 15 inches of cork insulation. The control board also can govern the intensity of the artificial gale whipped up by the big wind machine.

British Aid American Forces With Use Of Fighting Equipment In Britain

On the roof of a control tower of a U.S. bomber station in Britain Lieut. Ernest W. Wagner, of Philadelphia, Pa., operates a searchlight as he "talks" with planes in the air. This is part of the equipment supplied by Britain to American forces as one of its contributions to lend-lease.

Wearing an asbestos suit used in fighting plane fires, Sergt. R. W. Szatkowski, of South Hadley Falls, Mass., is assisted in making adjustments by Corp. C. M. Marchbanks at a U.S. bomber station in Britain. These fire-fighting suits are some of the things that come to U.S. forces from the British as part of the lend-lease arrangements.

Private A. Steinberg, a former waiter from New York City, is replenishing the oxygen supply of the Flying Fortress "Ready Teddy" at a U.S. bomber station in England. The tanks he is using are part of Britain's contribution to lend-lease. So are the regulators.

Fire Breaks Out In Village Hall

DOWNEYVILLE, Oct. 1 — (ENS) — While teachers and students of the Continuation School in the basement of the village hall at Downeyville were busy studying Wednesday afternoon, flames from a fire of unknown origin raced across the stage of the auditorium above them, smoke finally rousing them to their danger.

By the time the blaze was noticed the fire had gained such headway that the pupils were unable to cope with it and turned in an alarm. In a short time a crowd of between 200 and 300 people had collected and formed anergetic brigade. Two groups manning threshing machines nearby and road workers left their posts and helped fight the flames. Their efforts finally succeeded in quelling the fire.

The stage equipment and curtains worth several hundreds of dollars were completely destroyed, although other furniture was carried out of the room. The remainder of the building was undamaged and school will be resumed today after the brief flurry of excitement.

War Uproots 40 Million Europeans Resettlement Post-War Problem

MONTREAL, Oct. 1 — (CP).— The problem of rehabilitating 30,000,000 people torn from their homes on the continent of Europe, is placed before thinkers on post-war problems by a study released today by the International Labor Office.

The figure can be placed at 40,000,000 if account is taken of all continental Europeans living away from their pre-war homes, such as workers transferred within individual countries and civilian evacuations from German-built defence areas.

"The permanent settlement of these uprotted peoples will be one of the most urgent tasks of post-war reconstruction," the I.L.O. says. It adds that in most cases repatriation will be the obvious solution but one which, on so vast a scale, will meet with tremendous difficulties, not only from disorganized transportation systems, but because of the assistance which the people will require if they are to return to their tattered homes.

Repatriation alone would not solve the problem, because countries would have differing labor requirements and redistribution of labor might be necessary if full employment is to exist.

"This kind of geographical redistribution of labor, like repatriation, would call for action on an international scale," the report states. "It would call for nothing less than the organization of an international employment service." Also:—

"Many people uprooted from their homes will, if they have the opportunity, prefer to try their luck in an overseas country.

"Instead of rebuilding their old homes, they will want to make new one . . . This will also be the feeling of many who have been forced to suffer the horrors of war and persecution in their native homes."

The 166-page report, entitled "The Displacement of Population in Europe," deals with the subject under three headings, "Migration Movements of the German People," "Movements of Non-German Populations," and "Mobilization of Foreign Labor by Germany."

First Hand Data

It was prepared by Professor Eugene M. Kulischer, director of the Research Bureau on Population Movements, New York, in consultation with Pierre Waelbroeck, chief of labor conditions employment and migration section of the I.L.O. and they had the co-operation of a large number of organizations and individuals with information on European conditions. A prefactory note comments that in spite of plentiful material, under present circumstances "the results of a survey of this kind must necessarily be regarded in many ways as of a preliminary and provisional nature."

The report touches on historical backgrounds, deals with population movements from the First Great War onwards and outlines the great routing out of peoples which has been contemporary history for the past four years.

Invasions of Poland, Denmark, Norway, Belgium, Holland, France and simultaneous developments in southeastern Europe started the great trek and the report estimates that there are more than 1,350,000 French prisoners of war alone, in Germany. From the invasion of Russia in June, 1941, the population movements exceeded all bounds.

All Headed East

"From the eastern provinces of Poland, from the Baltic countries, Bessarabia, and the territories of the U.S.S.R. invaded by the German armies, a surging tide of refugees flowed eastward, and the movement became still vaster when it was organized into a systematic evacuation. Ten million people were removed from the territories occupied by Germany in 1941 and another 2,000,000 were evacuated when the German armies made their fresh advance in the summer of 1942.

"Behind the German lines, the extension of the area under German domination enabled the Reich to extend and reshape its population policy. Deportation and expulsion were intensified; in all the territories annexed from the conquered countries, the Reich and its satellites pursued their policy of racialism and demographic nationalization.

Used As Workers

"From all the countries within its sphere of influence Germany recruited an ever-growing army of workers who were used, together with the prisoner of war, to replace the new quotas of men who had to be drafted into the army.

"Lastly, the threat of continental invasion and air raids led to the evacuation of whole cities and regions, sometimes to far distant places. In Europe, as a whole, nearly 23,000,000 people were transplanted, deported or dispersed from the middle of 1941 up to the beginning of 1943.

"It is impossible to anticipate how much further these population movements will go on during the coming months."

Dealing with the Russian "scorched earth" policy, the report estimates that 12,000,000 people were evacuated from the path of the German army in 1941 and 1942 from both old and new Soviet territories.

REPORTS NAZIS EVACUATING NORWAY

Night Raiders Bomb City Of Hagen

American Bombers Take Part First Night Sweep

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Oct. 2 — (AP) — The R.A.F.'s Britain-based night bombers added momentum last night to the Allies' new two-way assault on Germany from the west and the south by hitting the Ruhr industrial city of Hagen.

Planes from the R.C.A.F. bomber group participated in the attack on Hagen and all returned safely, R.C.A.F. headquarters announced.

Hagen, which has a population of 150,000, is 10 miles south Dortmund, often the target for the big R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. night bombers. It is in the centre of the Ruhr region with important iron and steel foundries, engineering and armament works and has a big railway centre with extensive yards and railway car repair shops.

One of the principal industries is the Accumulatoren Fabrika A.G., which makes batteries, motors and other electrical equipment for submarines.

An announcement that two bombers were lost underscored evidence that Allied planes have made inroads on the strength of the German Air Force in recent months.

Blow At Industry.

The target—the eleventh Nazi city bombed by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. in the last 10 nights—represented a blow at both industry and communications.

It is the junction of several important railroads linking its factories with other Westphalian industrial centres.

The raid also marked another step in bomber command's expansion of its campaign against enemy facilities which in the last week has seen a number of seldom-touched targets blasted, like Aachen, Darmstadt and Brunswick. Hagen has been bombed only twice before.

The Berlin radio claimed today American heavy bombers were along on last night's raid. This, if true, would mark the first occasion on which American heavy bombers have accompanied the R.A.F. raiders, their particular chore being the day attacks against the Continent.

Disaster Stalks Yellow Men On Jungle Front

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, the Southwest Pacific, Oct. 2—(AP)—Relentless air and ground pressure appeared today to be driving the Japanese out of the central into the Northern Solomons and to pose new perils for them on New Guinea.

In the Solomons, they are about to be pushed off Vella Lavella. They also seem to be pulling out their 10,000-man garrison piecemeal from Kolombangara.

On New Guinea, where slowly advancing Australians have ringed in Finschaffen, an Allied menace to Madang on up the coast took form in the Ramu River valley.

Today's communique from Allied headquarters supplied more pieces to a growing picture of Japanese disaster in the Solomons.

The communique said an 11-ship caught by four-engined bombers in caught by four-engind bombers in Bougainville Strait. Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. Two cargo ships and a destroyer sunk, a third was damaged and other ships were dispersed.

On Vella Lavella, American soldiers are closing in on remaining enemy groups at the northern end of the island. The enemy's situation is so precarious the trapped troops must rely on supplies dropped by parachute.

On New Guinea, Finschhafen, only 70 overwater miles from New Britain, was encroached from three sides. Australians fought in the northern outskirts, only a few miles behind it and along the south coast at Cape Creton, seven airline miles away.

Inland from the Huon peninsula, Australians moving out of the Markham Valley northwest of Lae have reached the Ramu river at a point about 60 miles south of Madang.

Industry Heads Get Suggestion

TORONTO, Oct. 2—(CP)—J. C. Cameron, professor of commerce and head of the industrial relations section, Queen's University, Kingston, told the joint meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the Engineering Institute of Canada here today that it was up to industrial leaders to give positive leadership in developing a code of ethics in labor relations.

In an address prepared for delivery at today's luncheon meeting, Prof. Cameron said good industrial relationships will not develop spontaneously in a plant, but leadership must be given in directing and educating both employer and employee in cooperation.

"It is proper that the board of directors assume this responsibility," he said, "bearing in mind that it guides and directs a body of opinion and that it has no place as a dictator in a situation where democratic principles hold sway."

Three Cars Tangle In Traffic Crash

Three automobiles were involved in an accident at Hunter and Water Streets this morning. Alphonse Condin, R. R. 4, Lakefield, was driivng north on Water Street and as he neared the Hunter Street intersection a car driven by Albert Hill, Brown Street, pulled out from the east curb. The two vehicles met in collision and a third car, owned by P. S. Dallin, 657 Charlotte Street, parked at the curb was struck. All three automobiles received some damage. Mrs. Hill was taken suddenly ill after the accident and was rushed to Nicholls Hospital in an ambulance called by the police.

Race Prejudice Denounced

Bienvenue Wants National Understanding

TORONTO, Oct. 2 — (CP).—Prejudices must be "uprooted" and "trust must reign between the various groups forming Canada," Hon. Valmore Bienvenue, Quebec Minister of Game and Fisheries, yesterday told a meeting of more than 400 service club (Rotary) members.

"Let us not hesitate to brand as traitors those who raise the race cry," he said. "When they are found among a class which has enjoyed a certain culture, we can presume that they are not unconscious traitors; they are actuated by material interests."

For the furtherance of national understanding, he advocated bilingualism, the enactment of a federal law prohibiting the defamation of religious groups, and the elimination of prejudice by the teaching of Canadian citizenship in schools. By these means, he believed, the racial evil would be eradicated in a generation and the professional slanderers hushed without recourse to legal means.

He warned against the "venomous prose which often fills the columns of the English-language press as well as ours," and asked English-speaking Canadians to be on guard against certain "hot-headed compatriots of your own." He said the majority of French-Canadians are astounded when they hear that demagogic utterances of a few troublemakers are taken as representing their sentiments."

Allied Units 32 Miles Past Naples

8th Army Speeds Spearhead North Of Foggia

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Oct. 2 —(AP)—British and American troops feverishly welcomed by the surviving population of Naples, forged on past that devastated city today and fought steadily northward toward Rome and the next defence line of the Germans.

"A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Allied Headquarters quoted a military spokesman as saying "the road to Rome is now open. The town of Benevento is directly threatened."

(He added that the Anglo-American 5th Army is "already well north of Naples." Benevento is 32 miles northeast of Naples.)

Meeting sharp opposition by German tanks, mortars and machine-guns, the forces of Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark were said in a communique to be making good progress, both to the north of the captured port city and to the east.

Moving North

The British 8th Army of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, which includes the Canadian 1st Division, speedily spread over all the Foggia Plain, meanwhile, captured San Severo, 18 miles north of Foggia, and Lucera, 12 miles northwest of that air base centre, Allied Headquarters announced.

All the Monte Gargano Peninsula —the spur of the Italian boot—also has been occupied in a 30-mile advance by Gen. Montgomery, a spokesman said.

Allied troops entering the city of Naples, once famed for its beauty, found the waterfront a solid area of ruin, reports from the battlefront said, but the rest of the city was orderly.

Gen. Clark himself entered the city yesterday afternoon, and the first advance patrols which took over the occupation were followed by a steady stream of troops, tanks and vehicles.

A military spokesman said military police had taken over control of the city until local police could be re-organized for the task.

Italians Help.

Before retreating the Germans heavily mined the city's streets, but as fast as they finished the job, the Neapolitans dug out the explosives and, according to reports given the Allied vanguard, buried them on the road north of the city over which the Germans were about to retreat.

Gen. Clark's troops found few buildings near the Naples waterfront habitable as a result of heavy bombings and systematic German demolitions.

The greater part of the town itself had been spared by the bombers, Italian officials said, but extensive damage was done to the central and eastern portions when the Germans mined buildings and set others afire.

(To-day's German communique gave the German people the first official announcement on the Allied capture of Naples. It said the city was evacuated after military installations had been destroyed.

The Examiner Makes A Post-War Plan

When the war is over Canada is going to need trained men as she has never needed them before in her history. Speaking to the students of the University of Toronto on Thursday, Dr. J. H. Cody said: "No generation until yours has had to face so many unsolved problems; in the future we need more and better education, for no system depends more on the education of the individual than does democracy". With a full realization of the truth of these words the Examiner has determined to establish a scholarship, good at any of the principal Ontario universities, to be presented annually to one of its carriers.

In announcing this decision, H. L. Garner, the General Manager of the Examiner, said: "Realizing the tremendous difficulties which face the youth of Canada in the years to come, particularly in the post-war years, the Examiner has evolved a plan to aid the youth of Eastern Ontario to equip itself to meet the difficulties and changing conditions which lie ahead". Understandably, it is our desire that the boys and girls who help us in giving the public first-rate newspaper service should be the ones to benefit from any assistance which we can give. We know them; we want to help them; we are sure that they will make a notable contribution to the life of any community in which they live after they leave school and enter the world: if there is one among them whose talents would be improved by university training, we want to make it possible for him to have that training.

There was a time when selling papers was considered a lowly occupation, and it was assumed that any boy who did it was compelled to it by an unhappy fate. Those days have gone. The modern carrier is managing a small business, the success or failure of which depends on ability, honesty and capacity for self-discipline; it is no job for the indolent, or the stupid or the untrustworthy. The ability which carriers in Peterborough have shown in managing their paper-routes, in selling War Savings Stamps, in soliciting donors for the Blood Donors' Clinic and in other forms of service to the community has convinced us that they will continue to be leaders when they have grown up and taken on heavier responsibilities. Canada needs men and women who are not afraid of responsibility, and we hope that our scholarship will do something to fill that need. The scholarship will, when necessary, be deferrable for a period up to four years.

Whatever a man's natural endowment may be, education smooths his way, and shows him how to make the best use of his gifts. The story is told that on one occasion the great sage Aristotle was asked how much educated men were superior to those uneducated: "As much", said he, "as the living are to the dead". There are people who make the utmost of a small amount of education, and there are those whom no amount of education could stir from their overwhelming lethargy. The Examiner, in establishing a scholarship for its carriers, knows that it will be giving help in a direction where it is needed and where it will result in genuine and lasting benefit to the community and to the country as a whole. We set out upon this experiment in education with confidence.

Soldiers Duck Kisses And Bullets

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press Correspondent

WITH THE 5TH ARMY IN ITALY, Sept. 30 (Delayed)—(AP)—War, as it passes through these little Italian towns along the road to Naples, is a mixture of comic opera and high tragedy.

You spend half your time ducking kisses from bewhiskered Italian peasants and the other half ducking bullets from German snipers hidden in houses less than half a block away.

This story is being written in the kitchen of what used to be a good tourist hotel a half-mile from the ruins of ancient Pompeii.

Stall Army

The German tactics have been to leave a few sharpshooters or gun crews behind when they abandon a town with the main force. One tank or anti-tank gun well hidden can delay a long column for hours. It has to be found and shot or chased out of concealment.

The Italians invariably beg and plead for the chance to lead patrols to the point from which the Germans can be caught. The depths of their hatred for their erstwhile Allies defies all description.

There are hundreds of Italian patriots who are getting some measure of revenge today. They slip back and forth through the German lines by night and get the accurate location of the main enemy forces, artillery positions and such and report the information to the Allies as soon as possible.

Frequently they are caught and killed but they continue operating. They are fighting harder now than they ever fought while Italy was actually in the war.

Hot Controversy Rages On Newscasting

Columbia Chiefs Object To News Analysts Voicing Opinions

By R. J. ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—(CP).—How free is the air? That is the question of the moment in a red-hot controversy between the Columbia broadcasting system and a number of news commentators which threatens to become a public issue and could, conceivably, lead to stricter Federal regulation of the airways in the United States.

One CBS commentator has resigned, others have publicly expressed strong disagreement with the system's policy—that there be no editorializing on the air—and cries of "gag" and "censorship" fly freely. Keeping a close eye on developments is the Federal Communications Commission which controls radio broadcasting in the United States. Silent, at least for the time being, are the other major networks —National Broadcasting Company, Mutual and the Blue Network.

Started Back In 1941

As far back at February 13, 1941 CBS stated its position that it "allows no editorializing of the news by any of its news reporters or news analysts on either sponsored or sustaining programs." The current controversy stems from a restatement of that position by Paul W. White, CBS news director, before the Associated Press Managing Editors Association in Chicago three weeks ago.

The dispute took a new turn on Wednesday when Walter Winchell, newspaper and radio columnist, charged before a meeting of the Overseas Press Club that CBS executives had made deletions in news copy which, Winchell contended, amounted to censorship of straight news reporting. F. C. C. Chairman James L. Fly took cognizance of the charges by saying he was uncertain what action, if any, is indicated.

The CBS position regarding opinionated news on the air was stated in full-page newspaper advertisements Sept. 20 which said:—

"Freedom of speech on the radio would be menaced if a small group of men, some 30 or 40 news analysts who have nation-wide audiences... take advantage of their preferred positions' and become pulpiteers.... Then freedom of the air, within the genuine spirit of democracy, would be merely a hollow phrase."

Brown Resigned

In the meantime, Cecil Brown, well-known CBS commentator who survived the sinking of the British battlecruiser Repulse and the battleship Prince of Wales in 1941, had resigned. He charged that CBS news policy, as enunciated by White, intended to make CBS reporters "creatures of your own editorial opinion of what constitutes the news."

White replied by defending Columbia's "long-established policies of letting the radio listener make up his own mind, rather than allowing news broadcasters to make it up for him.' He added that were CBS to permit presentation of one-sided viewpoints it would be "selling out the great power of broadcasting to the particular groups able or willing to spend the most money."

20,000 Armored Unit Troops Withdrawn from North Area

By FOSTER BARCLAY—Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Oct. 2 — (CP Cable). —Dispatches to London morning papers today from Stockholm reported belief is current that the German high command has taken initial steps toward evacuation of Norway, the reports coincided with rumors heard in Stockholm that some Nazi officers are advocating a showdown with the Royal Navy this winter. "Some 20,000 troops — mostly belonging to armored units — have been withdrawn from northern Norway in the last six weeks," said Ralph Hewins, Daily Mail special correspondent in Stockholm. "A few replacements have been made. Evacuation now is speeded up owing to the rapid Russian advance and particularly because of increasing probability that the Red Army will reach the Gulf of Riga before winter."

Navy Wants Fight.

If the Russians reached the gulf they would completely relieve Leningrad and the naval base of Kronstadt, and the Russian fleet would have anchorages 300 miles further westward. Germany would then be forced to strengthen her Baltic fleet, a step which Stockholm said Hitler has already taken by dispatching the battleship Luetzow into the Baltic.

After the German naval raid on Spitsbergen, many rumors swept Stockholm concerning the German Navy, particularly the Luetzow, Scharnhorst and Tirpitz. The most sensational report was that the trio of heavy ships had been sabotaged in the Altafjord, in Norway, by discontented crews. But this turned out to be nothing more than a rumor which now is discounted.

"There is no conclusive evidence that the recent Spitsbergen exercise failed to maintain the spirits of German crews," said Gordon Young, Daily Express Stockholm correspondent. "Furthermore there is strong belief that high German naval officers are pressing Admiral Doenitz to allow all three ships to have a showdown with the British navy this winter.

Chances Dwindle

"Some officers are said to urge that the navy's chances grow less every day that the war goes increasingly against the Axis and that some use must be made of the German ships before it is too late.

"Possibilities for the three ships are limited, but one plan which it is suggested may be under consideration is a dramatic 'suicide raid' on an Atlantic convoy . . . To many

U.S. Considers Commercial Air Transport Jockeys For Post War Place With Britain

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2 — (AP) —The United States Government was reported to-day considering a proposal for an understanding with Great Britain whereby neither country would enter into a post-war commercial air transport agreement with third country before consulting each other.

The events which led to the proposal and the pendency of the sugestion itself are believed to be largely responsible for the administration's changed attitude about the urgency of beginning conversations on international airline agreements. Once eager to get such talks started, the Government now is understood to be willing to move more slowly.

An exhaustive study of individual domestic airlines as possible international carriers has been made by the United States Justice Department's Anti-Trust Division. The report probably will be completed during the next week or two.

Meanwhile the Inter-Departmental Committee on Post-War Aviation has taken a stand in favor of free and open competition in international air commerce along the lines now followed in domestic transport. A minority report — the view of one member — urged the "chosen instrument" policy under which a single United States airline would carry the flag into foreign lands.

The argument for the monopolistic plan is that competition between American carriers will put them at a disadvantage in meeting the united strength of foreign airlines, all of which operate as government controlled or subsidized instruments.

Famine Worries Americans Preparing Burma Campaign

By DEWITT MACKENZIE—Associated Press War Analyst

The grave famine on the densely-populated eastern seaboard of India is reported to have grown worse, with hundreds dying of starvation despite government efforts to expedite importation of foods and grains from foreign countries.

There is deep concern over the situation not only among impartial British and Indian circles but in important American quarters. This plague of hunger comes on top of the British-Indian political crisis. There is fear that unscrupulous people may be able for ulterior purposes to merge the discontent growing out of these two situations, thereby creating a nasty combination.

The point of American concern is, of course, the fact that India is the arsenal of the Orient and the principal base for the coming offensive against Japan through Burma. American interest is multiplied by the fact that the United States has heavy military commitments there and is building up a big base for operations against the Japs.

Important military and political people, while not doing public talking on the situation, are anxious that a fresh effort be made to settle the political imbroglio.

We are fighting Japan to prevent her from making herself mistress of all Asia, and we shall succeed. However, there is another contingency which doesn't seem to be generally recognized, and that is the formation after the war of an Asiatic bloc of nations which feel that they have been left outside the Atlantic charter of the western Allies. That's no bugbear of the imagination but a real thing, as I discovered during my trip through the Orient early this year.

My investigations in India convinced me that the Indian leaders now would welcome a reopening of the case and would be prepared to compromise on issues which heretofore have precluded a settlement.

Set Huge Fires Across Burma

NEW DELHI, Oct. 2 (CP)—Huge fires, one of which was visible for 50 miles, were started last night when R.A.F. Wellingtons bombed the own of Akyab in Burma, a joint Allied India communique said today.

Other bomber formations attacked Japanese troop positions at Gwazon on the Mayu Peninsula and the village of Homalin on the Upper Chindwin river. Direct hits were scored on buildings and huts and Mohawks, taking part in the Homalin attack, followed up the bombing with machine-gun strafing.

Beaufighters swept enemy shipping and land installations along the Chindwin and Irrawaddy rivers. A large river steamship was left in flames and four paddle steamships, two smaller steamships and several sampans were attacked.

All Allied aircraft returned safely.

Hull 72 Today Ready For Trip

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2 —(AP)—United States State Secretary Cordell Hull, master of many a tough job in his long public career, celebrated his 72nd birthday today resting for one of the biggest—perhaps even historic—tasks ever thrust his way.

With Mrs. Hull, he vacationed at Hot Springs, Va., awaiting a presidential assignment expected to take him on his first Atlantic crossing by air to either Moscow or London for a momentous conference with British and Russian emmissaries. It may point the course for the post-war world.

Hull is expected back at his desk in the state department the first of next week. His associates say all present signs point to his going abroad to confer with Foreign Secretary Eden and Foreign Commissar Molotoff, pending only selection of the time and place. The conference is to pave the way for a meeting of Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin.

Mihailovic Says Army Ready

Yugoslavs Await Allied Signal To Fight

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 2.—(AP). —A dispatch reaching here from Switzerland to-day quoted Gen. Draja Mihailovic, Yugoslav patriot chieftain, as declaring his army was "ready and waiting the promised signal from the Allies" to attack Nazi occupation forces.

The ditsptach quoted him further as saying his troops are not at present participating in the battles being waged against the Axis in northeastern Italy and along the Adriatic coast.

The dispatch was from the Dagens Nyheter's Zurich correspondent who said Mihailovic had sent him a personal letter by a traveller recently arrived from the Balkans. The correspondent, whose name was given as Singer, said he had become personally acquainted with the General while working in Yugoslavia some years ago.

"I already have told the British and Americans my army is ready and will begin to fight when the first Allied division lands in Yugoslavia," the letter said, adding:

"What we are going to do then will completely put in the shade the efforts of the Partisans (led by Gen. Josip Broz, known as 'Tito') because it will not be an improvised partisan war but a battle by well organized and equipped regular army to liberate the country."

1,800-Mile Day Raid Hits Munich And Wiener Neustadt

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Oct. 2 —(AP)— American four-engined bombers from the northwest African air forces delivered a blow yesterday at the Reich as the opening round of an Allied air offensive that eventually may rock Germany from the south as well as from the west.

The heavy bombers, making their first raid on Germany from this theatre and their longest operational flight from northwest African bases, pounded Munich in a round-trip flight of approximately 1,800 miles. Another flight attacked the Messerschmitt air frames factory at Wiener Neustadt, 25 miles south-east of Vienna.

A communique said, perhaps significantly, that yesterday's Wiener Neustadt raid had been carried out by bombers recently moved from the Cairo theatre and attached to the Northwest African group. Other formations in the day's raids also had been transferred here from British bases. The heavy bombers braved bad weather to fly over the Alps.

More to Come

The assault gave some indication to the Nazis of the aerial pincers which they can expect will clamp down more firmly when Allied air fleets are able to operate from newly won fields in southern Italy.

Both Munich and Wiener Neustadt have been attacked before by Allied bombers based on the British Isles—Munich for the last time by R.A.F. and Canadian planes on Sept. 6—but yesterday's operation was the first from a source which, when it is able to use the great air base at Foggia in Southern Italy, will event-

Health Program Be Linked With Schools

PORT HOPE, Oct. 2 — A physical fitness program which will link up education and health was forecast for the Province of Ontario by Premier George Drew, speaking at a widely attended meeting here Friday.

"Health and the schools will be linked closely in a program now under way," the Premier said, promising that the Provincial Minister of Health would be backed to the limit in any scheme he might have for ferretting out disease in the youth of Ontario.

Premier Drew was addressing a packed audience gathered in the Town Hall to honor Hon. Dr. R. P. Vivian, Port Hope, newly appointed Minister of Health.

In connection with his health program, Premier Drew pointed to his appointment of C. A. Reynolds to conduct a survey of youth training in connection with Cadet Corps, Sea Cadets and the physical training in and out of schools.

"From his report," the Premier said, "we hope to extend this type of training and put it on a permanent basis."

A vast concourse of people met Dr. Vivian and Premier Drew on arrival, and the entire town and district gathered along the route of parade to the Town Hall. On the platform at the official reception were Ross Strike, Bowmanville; Gordon Fraser, M. P., Peterborough; and Cecil Frost, K.C., Lindsay.

Motorists Asked To Help War Picking Leaves

If the weather runs its string of superlative fall days through the week-end, and if you roll your automobile over rural roads on tires of exigent rubber—how about taking a couple of sacks along with you and filling them with milk weed leaves!

If you come acoss a scattered patch of the weed, you can fill a sack in about twenty minutes. That's reportorial timing. The technique recommends handfulls, not the time-wasting picking of individual leaves. Draw your hand up the stalk tightly enough to strip it of its leaves; and you find yourself filling the bag with surprising speed. Some of the sticky milky content will stain your hands until you get home, but it readily washes off.

And that isn't breaking the spirit of the Lord's Day, you know—pass the ammunition. One hundred motorists with one hundred bags—quite a lot of milk weed, and take it from the experimental station at Ottawa that it is seriously needed The appeal is being emphasized through the press, and if you own a car you should be even more interested than the school children in the country who are helping. Of course if you think the Japs are going to be rooted out of the Indies by New Year's, leave the milkweed leaves to nature, and maybe a year from now you might have a different opinion of the value of your help in this strange need and emergency.

BEER IN CAR.

Beer in a car resulted in fines of $15.00, and $2.50 costs, for A. R. Byers and Earl Herr, after the two young men had pleaded guilty in Police Court this morning to illegal consumption. Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., told them that he never imposed the minimum when a car and liquor were involved.

Autumn Fields And Trees Are In Technicolor With Most Brilliant Picture of Entire Year

Down near Rice Lake the other afternoon an Examiner man saw a field of purple and gold of amazing beauty. And, just weeds, golden rod and wild asters, or as our English ancestors called them a long time ago, Michaelmas daisies, relating them to the feast of St. Michael, which it may be recalled is the 29th day of September.

Rambling over rolling fields beside a wide, weedy bay of the lake with its luminous fringe of rushes and other marsh growth which fairly flames as autumn lights it up, you come suddenly upon this field of gold and purple, which actually halts you with its impact of unexpected harmony of rich colors.

A whole field of purple and gold! And after a time you realize that it must have counted for little all summer while the tilled neighboring lots were proudly growing lush with grain crops. No one looked at this neglected and low-lying field that represented a blank in the agricultural economy; producing no revenue for the owner who has to pay taxes. And he is probably too busy to go out of an afternoon and rest his elbows on the top rail of a fence about three hundred yards away, and lose himself in wonderment at this miraculous field of his.

Picture Canvas.

It seems to be a huge canvas and in the thinner light of the late afternoon, with the tones of its gold and purple subdued, it seemed to be a vast tapestry outlined by fences and framed by the green of the reputable and honest fields of new grain already sprouting with fall wheat. And some of the roads in Otonabee were lined with the purple daisies against the background of fences of wild grape with many of its leaves a rich dark red.

Farmers are moving about these days in scenery of nature's grandest technicolor.

Examiner Boy Appeals For Blood Donors

Jack Hayes, Examiner News carrier who topped the list of War Savings Stamps sellers in the July depth charge campaign, addressed the Kiwanis Club at luncheon Friday and made an appeal on behalf of the Blood Donors Clinic, for which the carriers will shortly begin a door-to-door canvass.

Saying that the object of newspaper boys, who here and in the United States celebrate today the fourth anniversary of National Newspaper Boys' Day, was to help speed Canada on the way to victory and to aid the cause for which their older brothers and their fathers are fighting, the young carrier recounted some of the achievements of newspaper boys in North America.

They had, he said, in 20 months' time sold $91,000,000 of War Bonds and Stamps and expected to reach a total of $100,000,000 by the end of the week. One hundred and fifty thousand boys were engaged in this work, and the Peterborough carriers were one of the 1,000 organizations helping in the sale of stamps. Here in Peterborough carriers alone had accounted for $35,000 worth of war savings stamps in a year and a half.

Civic Work Too

A report of proceedings at the 25th annual convention of the Ontario - Quebec - Maritimes Kiwanis Clubs, prepared by Ernie Barlett, was read at the Friday meeting by Jack Lewis. Addresses to the more than 500 delegates had stressed the necessity of all clubs having war-time projects to justify their existence, but had stated that participation in such activities must not mean a slackening of enthusiasm for the civic jobs at home.

President Dick Raine had addressed delegates on the procedure of organizing Sea Cadet Corps, stating that the training given youths made for a more intelligent and aggressive citizenship.

Noting the sharp increase in juvenile delinquency, he had emphasized that in an organization like the Sea Cadets there was opportunity to instill boys with high ideals and a sense of civic responsibility.

Brinton Carpet Makes 62nd Donation

To give and give, over and over again in a worthy cause, has become quite a tradition down at the Brinton-Peterborough Carpet Co. Ltd. plant where the employees have kept up a constant stream of help for the sufferers from air raids over Britain, ever since the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund first commenced to operate.

Through the passing of a box around on pay days, this group who have supported this by giving their odd change, have now rolled up the splendid total of $820.90, the donation of $7.00 listed to their credit today marking the 62nd time that their name has appeared in this list for the fund.

In addition to the giving in which all have shared, there has had to be some one responsible for its oversight, this work having been done by a relatively small number of people, of whom Miss Mary Richardson is the latest. When the work first commenced there were about 300 people on the pay roll, which has by now dropped down to only a little above fifty per cent of that number, yet the work still continues, and has every prospect of so doing while the need lasts.

Personal Giving

When one catches a vision of the good they can do, experience has proven in the majority of instances to be lasting, as the foregoing can easily demonstrate, and this too is discernable in the personal givings of quite a number of citizens, who give, and keep on giving. One such is also listed today for $10.00 from Mrs. A. J. Hall of Mark street, whose personal donation has previously appeared on a number of occasions previously.

Then the box at the Utilities Office on Simcoe street added another $4.60 to this day's receipts when it was collected on Friday morning by the secretary of the fund. This box has also a good record of previous assistance given in a like manner.

Does Utmost to Help

There are times when one comes across real sacrifice beyond the ordinary, no doubt actuated by a patriotism and loyalty which few attain to. This is perhaps evident in the case of Victor Caban, Sr., of 543 Park street, who now proposes to hold another draw on behalf of the fund, for which he himself is donating the whole of the prizes, in themselves a real sacrifice for a man of his mans.

This veteran of the last Great War has already lost one of the two sons he had serving in the present campaign, and the war savings certificates offered as prizes were intended as savings for this boy who laid down his life in Sicily, when he should return.

The prizes are as follows, 1st prize a load of wood, or $25 War Saving Certificate; 2nd prize, 3 ducks; 3rd prize, one pig or $10.00 War Savings Certificate; 4th prize, one bag of potatoes, 5th prize a $5.00 War Savings Certificate; 6th prize, a $5.00 War Savings Certificate and 7th prize, a Jersey Calf or $20.00 War Savings Certificate. Lest anyone should think the prizes are not listed in the right order, it should be said that Mr. Caban expressly wished the first and last prizes to be the best ones in the list he offers to raise money to help the people of Britain.

Tickets for this draw will go on sale as early in the week as they can be obtained from the printers, and it is expected the draw will be held on Saturday, November 6.

CAMPBELLFORD

D. Southworth Broadcasts From Jap Camp

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 2 — (ENS). — The first message of its kind ever to reach this district from a prisoner of war in Japan arrived here yesterday and was addressed to Donald F. Southworth's mother who lives in Seymour East. The message was from Rifleman Donald F. Southworth, who was captured with other members of the Royal Rifles of Canada unit at Hong Kong on December 25, 1941, and was picked up and transcribed by an official Listening Post of the American Women's Voluntary Services in Pasadena, California, and then forwarded by air mail letter to Campbellford.

RIFLEMAN D. F. SOUTHWORTH

According to a preliminary text in the letter, the receipient was asked to remember that the enemy had control over the preparation and transmission of the message, "and its contents should be treated accordingly. It is quoted as received, but ample allowance should be made for error and enemy misrepresentation."

Text of the message picked up by the Listening Post on September 27, 1943 is as follows:

"Hello, Canada: This is Donald Southworth, Royal Rifles of Canada, speaking to you from Japan.

Hello Mother, I want to say 'Hello' to you, Charlie, Roy, and Edith (two brothers and a sister) I am well and being treated fairly good by the Japanese. We are living in a camp near Yokohama, and are working nearly every day. At night, or during spare time we usually get together and talk over good old times, or play cards. We have a gramaphone and often sit and enjoy music for an hour or so. We have received a few Red Cross articles which come in very handy. Most of us have received mail and are overjoyed to hear from home.

On behalf of the boys from Eastern Ontario, I want to convey their love to their families and friends. They are: Sol Danis, of Campbellford (presumed to be a misprint and thought to refer to Don Dainard), Ralph Alley, Trent River; Jack Arthur, Bloomfield; Frank Higgins, Port Hope; Jim Archibald, Port Hope; Gee Whirl, Armstrong (?); John Haines, Camarat; Ken Murray, Oshawa; Howard Marshall, Lindsay; Tom Jones, Pembroke; Bud Bevans, of Cobourg. They are all well, and patiently waiting to get home and see you all again. Well, Mother, I will have to close. Keep your good spirits and let's pray to be together very soon. Good-bye for now, Mother."

The A.W.V.S. which made the transcription of this message, is a national organization, and as a part of their free public service copies all enemy broadcasts of prisoners of war messages, except when reception is impossible, and forwards them without charge to those to whom they are addressed.

In contrast to the speed of the transmission in this message was a card dated March 11, 1943 and received by Don's mother, Mrs. Robert Wright, late in September. In this message he also wrote of receiving a Red Cross parcel and says, "Boy, will it ever be swell to get home again to see you all once more."

There was no authoritative comment in London on the Stockholm reports, but it is thought unlikely the Germans would evacuate Norway unless the Allies launched an invasion which made headway. On the other hand, nothing would please the Royal Navy more than a chance to come to grips with the German fleet. If the German navy could be sunk practically the entire home fleet could be rushed to the Pacific where it would be of more use against Japan.

Red Airforce Blasts Rail Centres

Mammoth Battle Rages Along Kiev Front

LONDON, Oct. 2 —(CP)— With the Russian and German Ukrainian armies locked in a terrific struggle for Kiev and the lower Dnieper river valley, Red Army Air Force bombers have unleased a bombardment against three White Russian rail centres barring the way to invasion of German-held Poland and the Baltic states.

The Moscow radio said today that Mogilev, Orsha and Vitebsk, strongly-fortified German bases in White Russia, were pounded for the second straight night by large formations of Russian bombers.

This operation evidently was intended to soften up Nazi defence lines and pave the way for advancinging Red Army forces which yesterday surged forward over rain-soaked terrain to reach the Pronya river, 29 miles east of Mogilev and 17 miles west of Cherikov, capture of which was announced earlier in the day.

Take 460 Towns

The Soviet columns rolled westward through 460 towns and villages, killing more than 5,500 Germans and collecting huge stocks of abandoned war material the Germans had failed to destroy, a communique said.

The war bulletin, detailing land advances in the White Russian sector, said other drives were aimed at Gomel and Vitebsk. The Germans brought up artillery to meet the advance on Vitebsk and counter-attacked several times, it said, but Red Army shock troops battled their way to a stubbornly defended height.

First Methodist Church In Dummer To Mark Jubilee

Rev. George Little, B.A., D.D., editor of Sunday School Publications of the United Church of Canada who will be the guest preacher at the 50th anniversary of the Warsaw United Church on Sunday.

The first Methodist Church in the township of Dummer, now the Warsaw United Church, will mark its fiftieth anniversary on Sunday. ABOVE is shown the church, which is the second building to be occupied by this congregation.

Development Of the Truth

Jesus said unto His Disciples: Whom say ye that I am? Peter answered and said unto Him Thou are the Christ—St. Mark 8:29. The Christ of God—St. Luke 9:20. Thou Art the Christ, the Son of the Living God.—St. Matthew 16:16.

Modern scholarship teaches that "The Gospel according to St. Mark" was the first of the our Gospels, written about 60 A.D. Accordingly we have here the very words St. Peter used: "Thou are the Christ." It is brief, clear and full of Jewish thought before this statement was enlarged or developed by the wisdom and need of the Apostolic Church.

The Master had come to a crisis in His ministry. About two years earlier He called these men that "they might be with Him" fascinated by His Personality. He is a Man Who has a great secret. "Have they discovered it"? is His uppermost thought as He enquires: "Whom say ye that I am."

Let us not forget that the Apostles were Jews with a religious background. During the previous two centuries the Jews of Palestine were expecting the coming of the Messiah. "The Christ" is the Greek translation of the word and means "The Anointed of God." He would be more than a prophet. He was to be a highly gifted man. The hearts of patriotic Jews were uplifted as they read these words: The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon Him; the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord." Isai. 11:2. Even after the resurrection the uppermost though in the mind of the Apostles is: "Lord, will Thou at this time restore again the Kingdom to Israel" The idea of the earthly Kingdom had taken deep root.

With characteristic impulsiveness St. Peter answers: "Thou art the Christ." Thou are the anointed of God. St. Peter would have been horrified at the thought that the Christ is the only begotten Son of the Father, full of grace and truth. This would come later when he would be able to receive the wider truth. Yet the Lord is satisfied; for St. Peter had made the great discovery. Yet are you surprised when you read in the very next verse: "He charged them that they should tell no Man"? Every Apostle would remember the horrors of the last uprising headed by a false Messiah when two thousand men were crucified by the Romans not far from that very spot.

It was not easy for the Jew to accept Christ's own ideal of His work and Office. Jewish teachers for more than two centuries had emphasized the truth that Jehovah is the One living God. "Hear, O' Israel, the Lord thy God is one Lord" was and is the daily creed of every devout Jew. At the same time this truth separated God from the people. He was so far above them He could not be near to them. The doctrine that God became Man and dwelt among us was absolutely foreign to the mind of the Jew. It was only through deep agony of mind and heart that the Apostles themselves came to accept the revelation that "The Word was made flesh." I was a slow gradual development.

St. Luke, writing for the Greeks, develops the original confession to: "The Christ of God." It is a wider, deeper and fuller explanation of the confession which the Church was teaching through the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Towards the end of the first century, St. Matthew, writing to the Jews, develops the cry into: "Thou are the Christ, the Son of the living God." It is a still fuller answer to the question: "Whom say ye that I am"? This is in accordance with Christ's teaching: "I have many things to say unto you but ye cannot bear them now." Every generation will throw fresh light upon this all important question: "Whom say ye that I am"?

The Apostolic and Primitive Church faced not only physical but intellectual persecution. The Messengers went to preach the Gospel to the Greeks, the intellectuals of that age. Heresies without number cropped up. They had to be answered. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all they mind" is a principle which this generation, with its tabloid papers, declines to take seriously. It harps upon the simple Gospel, half truth.

Men who were convinced in their minds that Jesus Christ is indeed the Son of God in a mysterious sense

Warsaw Church to Observe 50th Anniversary Sunday

WARSAW, Oct. 2.—(ENS).— To appreciate the history of Warsaw United Church, which on Sunday, October 3, celebrates its fiftieth anniversary. one must look farther back than the fifty years if he is to see the picture as a whole.

As far back as 1861 there is a record of the mission in Peterborough county in the township of Smith and Dummer known as Bridgenorth and Mud Lake Mission, and now called the Lakefield. Mud Lake and Warsaw Mission.

Membership in 1861 was 71, under the leadership of David A. Johnson; in 1866 under W. Sheridan and with Joseph Stinson, membership 177. At this time it was made a separate mission with J. Stinson as minister, and in 1867 he reported 260 members. Meetings were then held in the Orange Hall. Later a church was built on 'The Hill' and the parsonage erected across the road from the Anglican church. Warsaw church became the first Methodist church in Dummer, and the Anglican church, built in 1855 was the first Protestant church.

In the early days of 1890 it was

Secret of Eternal Life Is Surrender to Christ

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for October 3 is Matt. 5; 17-20; 19: 16-22; John 5: 39, 40, the Golden Text being Matt. 5: 17— "Think not that I came to destroy the law or the prophets: I came not to destroy but to fulfil.")

"Think not that I came to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil."

"For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled."

Thus spake Jesus after He had preached the Sermon on the Mount. He, Jesus, was not come to destroy the law of his people, those laws given to Moses which we have been studying about these many weeks. They were fundamental laws to govern a people in the right way of life, and Jesus had not come to destroy them, He assured his followers. They should still be the laws to govern their conduct through life, but He would go further and give them laws to rule their spirits, fulfilling the earthly laws. Until the end of earthly living, these laws of Moses would hold good.

Rich Youth Comes to Jesus.

The story of the rich young ruler who came to Jesus to ask how he could gain eternal life, is a true story. It is not a parable. Although this young man had everything— wealth, station, etc., to make him happy in life he was not happy or satisfied. He felt there was something more that would make perfect all that he had.

He sought Jesus out from the crowd and said to Him, "Good Master, what good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?"

Jesus answered, "Why callest thou Me good? There is none good but one, that is, God; but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments."

What are the commandments I should keep? the man asked. Jesus told him, "Thou shalt do no murder. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness. Honor thy father and thy mother; and, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The young ruler answered that he had done all these could face the horrors of the fire, the scourge and the cross. Much emotional and sentimental faith would evaporate under such a strain. There must be the intellectual conviction that Jesus is indeed the Lord Christ. Each individual must say: "Thou art my Lord and my God."

WHOSEOVER SHALL CONFESS THAT JESUS IS THE SON OF GOD, GOD DWELLETH IN HIM AND HE IN GOD.

Jesus and the Ten Commandments — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matthew 5:17-20; 19:16-22; John 5:39, 40.

Jesus talked to the multitude, telling them that He had not come to destroy the law or the prophets but to fulfil.

A rich young man called Jesus "Good Master." Jesus asked him why he called Him good; no one was good but God.

When Jesus told the young man to sell his goods and give to the poor, and to follow Him, he went away sorrowing.

Jesus told His hearers to "Search the scriptures," for prophecies of Him. GOLDEN TEXT—Matt. 5:17.

What We Have To Do

The time has come when we must look clearly at what we have to do in the Fifth Victory Loan, and make our plans to do it. The objective for Peterborough and its district will be four million, six hundred thousand dollars. Large as that sum is, it is eighty thousand dollars less than what we raised in the Fourth Loan, and two hundred and fifty thousand dollars more than the objective which was set for us last time.

In this Fifth Loan sales to private individuals are expected to amount to 44 per cent. of the total flotation. But in Peterborough that means that the general public and employees who subscribe under the Employees' Payroll Deduction Scheme are expected to raise $3,100,000; in the last loan this section of the public raised $3,015,000. The Special Names group will be asked for $1,500,000, which was their objective last time.

Now there will not be many people among the workers and private citizens of this city and county who will be able to subscribe more to this Loan than they did to those which preceded it. By this time most Canadians who have a fixed wage or salary have found out what they can subscribe to each Victory Loan as it comes along, and if they keep up those subscriptions they are doing very well. Where then, is the extra $85,000 to come from? It must come from new subscribers.

In spite of all the publicity which has been given to the Victory Loans there are still many people in Canada who are perfectly well able to subscribe, but who have not done so. Many of them might be described as financially innocent: that is to say, they do not know what a bond is, and they truly believe that they are being asked for a gift to the country, rather than a loan which will eventually be paid back with a handsome increase in value. Some of these financially innocent people are newcomers to Canada, who do not understand our language or our ways; others are people who do not feel that their money is safe unless it is in a savings account. These people will have to be educated, and shown the true nature of the Loan.

Still another group are those who have considerable savings and who cannot be induced to translate a part of those savings into bonds. The word "Bond", as many of us fail to realize, has a sinister connotation for many people; they associate bonds with "stocks"—those things which go up and down with such terrifying and unaccountable speed, and which ruin their owners overnight. These people also must be educated.

And then there are those who are downright miserly, and who think that they have done enough when they have taken a $50 Bond, although a $500 one would be equally within their grasp. They have had difficulty in making money, and they part with it most reluctantly; all that the bond salesman can hope to do is to wrestle with them in spirit until he gets a subscription.

We know what we have to do in the coming Loan. Let us prepare ourselves to do it as quickly, as efficiently, and as pleasantly as we can.

Some Things You Should Know

This is Newpaper Boy Day in Canada, and there are some things which we think you should know about the boys and girls who deliver the Examiner to your door here in Peterborough. First of all, since the outbreak of war in 1939 they have sold $35,000 worth of War Savings Stamps; they were the first carriers in the Dominion to take on this work and they have been publicly recognized by the Prime Minister for their contribution to the war effort. Second, they were the first carriers in the Dominion to take on the job of getting donors for the Red Cross Blood Donors' Clinic; in their first drive they enlisted 250 new donors; their second drive has just been completed, and the number of donors enlisted this time will be made public as soon as the cards can be sorted and tabulated. Lastly, when the Royal Canadian Navy made its appeal for a special purchase of depth-charges, the Examiner carriers sold 66 per cent. of the quota for this district themselves. These achievements are on a large scale; our carriers have done unusual and important work for the war effort in this community, and we are immensely proud of them, as we are sure that you are.

Being a carrier now is a very different thing from what it was twenty years ago. Our carriers are drawn from the most alert young people of the community; the days when newsboys were juvenile toughs has gone. They work for themselves, selling to you the newspaper which they buy from us, and they are thus young merchan s, rather than employees of ours. The experience which they gain in handling money, meeting the public, and in conducting their affairs in an expeditious and accurate manner is, we believe, of the greatest value to them; what is more, they gain that experience without losing time in school, working harder than is good for them, or being forced into a sordid or unhealthy environment.

The record of our carriers in matters of public service is, we venture to say, better than that of any carrier group in the Dominion. They are leaders in the sort of work which they are doing, and this is shown by the fact that their work in selling Stamps and soliciting for Blood Donors is being copied by many newspaper carrier groups in Canada and the U.S. This is the day on which we like to draw special attention to their work, and show our appreciation of what they have done in the past. We have no doubt that they will keep up their excellent work in the future.

Is a Legislature a Parliament?

In the Introduction to the third edition of his Parliamentary Rules and Forms Dr. Arthur Beauchesne, the Clerk of the House of Commons, raised the question of limiting parliamentary debates as a way of saving the country's time and getting on with the job of government. And he also raises another interesting point: is a provincial Legislature a Parliament? In Ontario we use the terms interchangeably for Queen's Park, but Dr. Beauchesne is not convinced that we are right, and he should know more about the pros and cons of the matter than most people.

According to Dr. Beauchesne there is only one Parliament in Canada, and that is the one at Ottawa. And at this point it might be well to emphasize the point that Parliament consists of two houses —the Commons and the Senate — and that it is wrong to speak of Parliament when we mean the Commons; this, of course, does not alter the fact that a man who sits in the Commons is a Member of Parliament. Dr. Beauchesne reminds us that the authority of our Parliament did not, in the first place, come from the people of Canada, but from the British North America Act of 1867, which says explicitly that "there shall be one Parliament for Canada". And as the Federal Cabinet has the power to disallow provincial statutes Dr. Beauchesne says that the provincial legislature bodies are clearly the inferiors of the Dominion Parliament, which took over about three-quarters of their power in 1867. The B.N.A. Act denied to the provincial bodies "the immunities, privileges and powers of the Commons House of Parliament of the United Kingdom", and took from them the power to control trade and commerce, customs, navigation, banking, shipping, weights and measures, bankruptcy, patents, copyright, naturalization, postal service and criminal law, which the writer calls "the bones and sinews of the nation". Is it proper, says Dr. Beauchesne, to call a body which lacks these powers a Parliament?

Certainly it does not appear to be proper to call them anything more than legislatures, and within the last few years some of their leaders have called them much worse things than that. Possibly some champion of the provincial bodies will take issue with Dr. Beauchesne.

Recent Works Of Bernard Shaw

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

THE recent death of Mrs. George Bernard Shaw, at more than eighty years of age, brings sharply to our attention the fact that G. B.S. himself—so long the Grand Old Boy of English letters—is getting up in age, and that we cannot expect many more works from his pen. Speculation about the probable death of an eminent man might be in bad taste, if it were not that Shaw has for many years treated his death as a matter of course, to be expected at any time. The death of his wife will not dispose him to linger on this planet unduly. Theirs was a most happy marriage. Lawrence of Arabia wrote of them: 'She and G.B.S. mix like bacon and eggs into a quintessential dream. I would rather visit them than read any book or hear any music on earth." What a fine tribute that is to a marriage! But let no sentimental reader suppose that the Shaws were a doting couple, like the venerable cronies in 'Dear Brutus' by their friend and contemporary; their match was based upon something finer and more austere than that; the courtesy which Shaw so often withheld in his dealings with others was never lacking in his relations with his wife. Nor was theirs a marriage of the intellect, like that of their friends, the Webbs. It was a companionship of a sort possible only between a man and a woman of exceptional qualities of the spirit and the mind.

SINCE reaching his eightieth year Shaw has written only two plays. They are "Geneva," which he wrote in 1936, and "In Good King Charles's Golden Days," in 1939. The former is not one of Shaw's better plays, though it is unquestionably an interesting work; the latter is a very, fine play indeed, and some critics have compared it with "St. Joan," which is commonly admitted to be his finest work. But because "Geneva" is not the best of Shaw it cannot be dismissed easily. If it had been written by anyone else we should at once hail it as a work of notable, though uneven, genuis. It has the common Shavian fault—it is a fireworks display first and a play second. Its form is clumsy. Shaw's desire is to bring Hitler, Mussolini and Franco on the stage and make them say their say in defence of Fascism, and in order to do this he drags us through two acts of farce and flapdoodle, in which he kills an English bishop, makes funs of English politics, and otherwise disports himself. It is not until the third act, when the dictators—re-named Battler, Bombardone and Flanco—appear before the international court at the Hague, that the fun begins. But what fun it is! For Shaw's defence of Fascism and his indictment of it, leave nothing unsaid. For Shaw is one of the few men who dares to say a good word for fascism; an angel, ruling a nation of angels, could make fascism work beautifully, but no man, ruling a nation of men, can expect much from it, for it is not elastic enough to contain the human spirit. Fascism is logical, and so far admirable, but what has logic to do with government; that is the question he asks. Certainly logic has little to do with the government of the British Empire, as his character Sir Orpheus Midlander shows, but the Empire manages very well without logic; it has other sources of strength. Appearing as it did when we were on the brink of war, "Geneva" had an immense success; because of its subject it will age rapidly.

BUT the hand of time will do little to dull the brilliance of "In Good King Charles's Golden Days." Hesketh Pearson, in his recent life of Shaw, tells us that this piece began as a play about religion, with George Fox, the founder of the Quakers, as the chief character. But the temptation to bring Isaac Newton into it could not be resisted, and then Charles II and a few of his mistresses found their way into it, and the character of the play changed. The jump from Fox to Newton is not a very great one; the mathematician was deeply interested in matters of religion, and constructed a chronology of the world's history which was a triumph of misplaced ingenuity, for it is invalidated by Newton's acceptance of the idea, current among Christians in his time, that the world was created in the year 4004 B.C. The jump from Newton to Charles, the founder of the Royal Society and the amateur of science, is an easy one.

A MELLOWNESS is apparent in this work which comes only in the best of Shaw's plays; his characters are as brilliant in their talk as ever, but they are not so savage. After two acts in Newton's home in Cambridge, in which Charles, Newton, George Fox—"The Man In Leather Breeches"—Nell Gwynn, Godfrey Kneller, the Duchesses of Cleveland and Portsmouth and James, Duke of York, argue and contend, the play closes with a brief act between Charles and Queen Catherine of Braganza, which is surely one of the best things that Shaw has ever written. In it he shows us what he can do when he is not on his dialectical high horse. For Shaw is a great man of the theatre, and when he wants to he can write for the theatre as no one has been able to do since Goldsmith. The last act of "In Good King Charles's Golden Days" is a duet for an actor and an actress of the highest accomplishment, giving them a chance to show their abilities in every phase. Undoubtedly Shaw, who wrote so vigorously—and sometimes so bitterly—against the theatre of Henry Irving, learned much in that great school of theatrical tricks, for there is not an effect of the older dramatic technique which he has not at his fingers' ends. His latest play is certainly one of his best.

Age Of Stars

Dr. Subrahmanyan Chandrasekhar (University of Chicago) gives such star clusters as the Pleiades a life of about three billion years and thus corroborates estimates based on the "lives" of radio-active elements. In his new caluculations he considers what he calls "dynamical friction," which is the braking effect exerted by stars upon one another when relatively close together and which tends to preserve a cluster as a unit. If dynamical friction were ignored the stars would escape at a rate so great that the mean life of galactic clusters is of the order of only fifty million years—a mere tick of the cosmic clock.—New York Times.

"VISITING FIREMAN"

Capital Closeups

(By JOHN DAUPHINEE, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

OTTAWA, Oct. 1 (CP)—Trade Minister MacKinnon has given a clear indication that the government, even while the war progresses, is giving attention to Canada's position in post-war commercial aviation.

The minister spoke at Sherbrooke, Que., Thursday. Near the end of his address he said: "Our government aims to gain for this Dominion a place in post-war aviation consistent with this country's geographical advantages and progress in the air. We can expect early developments in this connection."

Canada, on the route to both Europe and Asia, is ideally situated to take advantage of the development of commercial aviation certain to follow the war. Her thousands of airmen will provide the needed personnel.

Mr. MacKinnon gave no hint what specific moves he had in mind when he spoke of "early developments." Presumably, however, he was hinting that the government has definite plans to consolidate the Dominion's position for the stiffly-competitive flying operations of peacetime.

Parking ticket:

We've found an entry for the next "height of politeness" contest—a parking "ticket."

Up behind the parliament buildings one side of the roadway has painted parking stalls. One of our colleagues drove in a bit hastily and when he came back found the following card under the windshield wiper:—

Attention Please

Will honourable senators and others having the privilege of using the senate parking space, please take care to park cars entirely within a stall so as not to encroach on space provided for others.

Action at sea:

The story of the Canadian Navy in film, "Corvette 225," is going to have its premiere soon at Halifax, about as appropriate a place as could be found for the ceremony.

It will be close enough to the opening of the Fifth Victory Loan campaign next month that the two will be tied together for loan promotional purposes. Randolph Scott, star of the movie, will make a personal appearance.

A Publisher Advises George Borrow

DURING the greater part of his three journeys in Spain, Borrow had sent to his Society long, explicit chronicles, not only of his work on their behalf, but of his adventures and observations of men and places on the way, in the inevitable interludes. These letters were read aloud by the Secretary to the Society, and it is known that admiration for their vigourous missionary sometimes passed under a cloud of astonishment at his characteristic diversions and digressions. Of his zeal in the service of the Bible Society there can be no doubt, even when we lose sight of his carpept bag, his testaments and the efforescence of tracts and advertisements with which he decorated the Alemtejo, the church at Salamanca, the streets of Madrid. Since Luther there has hardly been such a Protestant as Borrow... If men bought Bibles of him he praised their enlightenment and passed on to the enjoyment of the other virtues or vital qualities of the Bible-buyers or, if they had them not, of the rest—.... the contrabandists, the Gypsies, the thieves, the innkeepers, who lay in wait about his road that he might discover them....

Hence it is no wonder that, with his vitality and independence, and above all his trick of expressing them in written words, his letters to the Society were remarkable. In June 1841 he had them back, and, cutting out the words "Reverend and dear sir," etc., here and there, and adding some passages, he made a book of them, which his wife transcribed. Richard Ford, who had preceded him in Spain, was delighted to hear of the book. "The more odd personal adventures the better," he wrote to Borrow, "and still more so if dramatic, that is, giving the exact conversations." And, later, he wrote words of advice which I shall quote, not because they are entirely true, or because they were needed by Borrow himself, but as an excellent piece of the Borrovian gospel.

"My advice, again and again, is to avoid all fine writing, all descriptions of mere scenery and trivial events. What the world wants are racy, real, genuine scenes, and the more out-of-the-way the better. Poetry is utterly to be avoided. If Apollo were to come down from Heaven, John Murray would not take his best manuscript as a gift. Stick to yourself, to what you have seen, and the people you have mixed with.... Avoid words, stick to deeds. Never think of how to express yourself; for good matter must tell, and no fine writing will make bad matter good....New facts seen in new and strange countries will please everybody; but old scenery, even Cintra, will not. We know all about that, and want something that we do not know....The grand thing is to be bold, and to avoid the common trade of the silver paper, silver fork, blue stocking. Give us adventure, wild adventure, journals, thirty language book, sorcery, Jews, Gentiles, rambles, and the interior of Spanish prisons—the way you got in and the way you got out. No author has yet given us a Spanish prison.... Avoid rant and cant. Dialogue always tell; they are dramatic and give an air of reality."

That is what Borrow did. He obeyed the difficult command to all who use the pen: "Be a man, not a grammar-scholar or a chameleon."... In December 1842 the book was published. It succeeded at once. He had made a book in which we have continually before our eyes the unusual and magnificent sight of a man of action whose actions translate themselves into words apparently with as much ease as a mountain and all its forest and visiting cloud and star mirror themselves in a lake.—From the Introduction, by Edward Thomas, to "The Bible in Spain," by George Borrow. Lemon and Syphilis

Drs. David H. Goldstein, Abraham Stolman and Arthur A. Goldfarb (New York University College of Medicine and Bellevue Hospital) announce in Science that a chemical derived from lemon peel may have its uses in the rapid and safe treatment of syphilis. In the new five-day and one-day treatment of syphilis such large doses of arsenicals must be given that not all patients can stand them. One of the untoward effects is damage to the capillaries of the brain. It has been known that Vitamin P from lemon juice sometimes lowers capillary permeability. Following this lead, the experimenters tried to offset the capillary injury done by mapharsen, the arsenic used in rapid treatment of spyhilis. When chalcone was isolated from lemon-peel it was given to rabbits along with mapharsen. Ninety percent of the animals survived, instead of only 57 per cent with the same doses of mapharsen alone. The chalcone does not lessen the ability of mapharsen to kill the syphilis germs called spirochetes. Test tube experiments show that chalcone itself may have some germicidal effect.—N.Y. Times.

The Demands of Great Drama

The great periods in dramatic history are customarily brief; they seldom surpass a century. The reason is perhaps that too many favouring circumstances are required at one and the same time. There must, of course, be genius. Genius is doubtless adaptable, and in non-dramatic ages it may find its outlet elsewhere. The secondary causes thus mount to the first rank. It seems that there must be a large public, such as only the capital of a state can offer; it must also be vividly interested in the theatre, and of substantially one mind as to the entertainment it expects. The art of representation must be sufficiently developed, and the actors expert without arrogance. When the great actor seeks to enslave the play to his own personality it is not good for the health of drama. The actors must rather be a team under the intimate direction of the poet, and the poet in consequence must be, in knowledge if not in practice, an actor.—From "The Literature of England, A.D. 500-1942," by William J. Entwistle and Eric Gillett. (New York: Longmans, Green.)

A Bible Message

Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? there is no searching of his understanding. He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength. Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall:

But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint. (Isa. 40: 28-31.)

I will worship toward thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy lovingkindness and for thy truth: for thou has magnified thy word above all thy name. In the day when I cried thou answeredst me, and strengthenedst me with strength in my soul....

The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me. (Ps. 138: 2, 3, 8.)

Out of the Unmapped Wilderness

This amazing new world owes its existence to two of man's newest implements of progress—the airplane and the radio. Without these "killers' of time and space in continental transportation and communications man could never have conquered, peopled, and developed the entire country. Certainly not in time to play a decisive part in the present global struggle. Without them, Soviet Asia would have been doomed to backwardness and isolation. With them, it has been projected into the very forefront of the world of today.

Soviet Asia unfolded itself before us in an endless panorama of industrial and agricultural activity as, curiously, we gazed out of the windows of the train on our first trip east from Moscow. We passed large settlements, towns, even cities, which a few years ago either had not existed at all, or had been small villages. Out of the unmapped wilderness there rushed to meet our train extensive structures of new plants, elevators, mine shafts. Black fumes from tall smokestacks testified to unremitting labour....

In crossing Soviet Asia we, as observant Americans, could not help but feel, unless we were to refuse to see and to believe our own eyes, that before us unfolded a world of the future in embryo. This impression was fortified by the youthfulness of the people, the newness of system and industries, the obvious incompleteness of everything.—From "Soviet Asia," by Raymond Arthur Davies and Andrew J. Steiger. (New York: Dial Press.)

It Was Too Good!

The A.T.S. private had gone for a walk in the country near her camp. It was a hot day, so when she came to a pool a little off the road and surrounded by trees, she decided to have a dip.

She folded her clothes on the bank and jumped in, swam around for a while, and then scrambled out.

As she did so she saw an Army officer approaching and hid behind one of the trees. He came nearer and nearer, and suddenly called out; "Camouflage platoon, dismiss!"

Whereupon all the trees walked away! — Tid-Bits (London).

Ninety Carriers Sell Over $35,000 in War Savings Stamps in a Year and a Half

On Nov. 19, 1941, Examiner Carriers embarked on the big job of selling War Savings Stamps. The first carriers in Canada to do this. It meant extra work for the carriers but they took it on willingly, realizing that through their efforts they would be helping the war effort. Just how well they have done may be judged by the grand total of over $35,000 which they have sold in a little over a year and a half. Their example and showing during that period has been an inspiration to other papers to take on the same project.

Internationally-Contested Bingham Trophy Won by Examiner Carriers

The Bingham Trophy is the highest award for newspaper carriers in America. The trophy was originated and donated by Senator Bingham, former publisher of the Louisville Courier Journal and Times and former United States' Ambassador to Great Britain. It was the dream of every newspaper publisher to have his carriers win this trophy.

Even before the trophy was won, Mr. Garner, Publisher of The Examiner, thought we had the finest group of carriers in Canada—but now it has been won he knows that we have the finest, not in Canada, but in North America.

The Examiner Carriers are the only Canadian Group to win this trophy.
